Leaders of the United Mine Workers, warned by President Roosevelt that the country will not tolerate a coal strike, conferred for more than three hours yesterday afternoon with representatives of the major steel companies, seeking a settlement of the Nation's gravest labor crisis.

At the end of the meeting, requested by Mr. Roosevelt yesterday morning, the question of whether Union President John L. Lewis would lift tonight's coal strike deadline was still unanswered.

Talks to Continue

Lewis, leaving the meeting with Philip Murray, miners' vice president and chief of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the U. M. W., told waiting reporters that "no conclusions" had been reached, but that further negotiations would continue today.

Resumption of conferences over the issue of a union shop in the steel companies' "captive" mines followed a White House meeting at which President Roosevelt told his visitors that the Government will not order a closed shop and "will never compel" the scattered non-union members seeking in the captive mines to join Lewis' union.

And with a possible strike at midnight tonight facing him, the President added:

"Because it is essential to national defense that the necessary coal production be continued and not stopped, it is therefore the in-

Legislation to Curb Strikes Awaits 'Go' Signal in House

Legislation providing a 25-day waiting period before defense strikes and for "freezing" the closed shop status quo last night awaited a "go ahead" signal from the House leadership as Congressional anti-strike sentiment mounted.

House leaders withheld a decision until Monday—Administration deadline on coal strike negotiations—as ranking members of the House Rules Committee demanded action now to end defense program holdups.

Tentatively, plans called for moving the pending price control bill before the House on Tuesday, and consideration of labor legislation at an early future date, but this program obviously hinged on successful conclusion of coal strike negotiations.

A showdown appeared likely when the Rules Committee meets Monday to consider a green light for the price control bill, but proponents of labor action now denied they would block proceedings on the price legislation until a labor measure is cleared.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, leading advocate of a strong labor policy, said he would bow to the wishes of Speaker Rayburn, and relied on his promise "to follow or lead in any movement by legislation, or sanely otherwise, that will keep defense production going."

But he said there would be no enthusiasm in the House for Administration measures until defense strike controls were considered. Cox predicted the Vinson bill would be moved before the House at an early date as "the vehicle" regardless of whether the President takes a direct stand.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, likewise stressed that the Vinson bill in its reported

House Fight On 'Privilege' Due Monday

Fish Case Expected To Bring Curtailment Of Its Application

By Dillard Stokes

The immunity against court orders claimed by Congressmen, under the constitutional privilege of the House, will face drastic curtailment next week because Representative Hamilton Fish failed to go before the special grand jury investigating German agents.

After the grand jury indicted Fish's aide on two perjury charges, Fish ignored an invitation to testify and Foreman John S. Gorrell summoned him. Fish then raised a point of "personal privilege" on the floor of the House and was directed not to respond until the Judiciary Committee looked into the question.

The committee's unanimous report, announced last night by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, said the Fish summons infringed the House privilege, but immediately suggested that the privilege might be waived.

May Set Precedent

The committee made no specific recommendations, leaving it up to the House to determine what to do about the special grand jury's desire to question Fish. He professes to know where his indicted secretary got the $12,000 for which he is alleged to have failed to account.

House members predicted a furious floor battle Monday, with the outcome establishing a precedent which would:

Gun Accidents Claim Lives Of 2 D. C. Boys

One Shot by Chum While Hunting, One While Cleaning Rifle

Two Washington boys who loved guns died last night as the result of bullet wounds in separate accidents inflicted a few hours before.

Richard Leedom, 13, of 6501 Fourteenth Street Northwest, died in Washington Sanitarium and Hospital after he had been shot a few hours earlier by a playmate on Eastern Avenue near the District Line. The bullet pierced his arm and lung and lodged in his spine.

The other victim, Earle F. Dorsey, jr., 19, of 1801 Irving Street Northwest, suffered a bullet wound in his head while cleaning a rifle in the basement of his home. He died in Garfield Hospital.

Young Leedom and two young companions, all school mates at Paul Junior High, had been hunting rabbits near the District Line yesterday afternoon. According to stories told police, Leedon playfully shot at one of his chums, but missed. The playmate returned the fire, a bullet striking Leedon.

Accident, Victim Says

Just before the boy died, Dr. Paul V. Starr asked him:

"Did the boys you were playing with shoot you accidentally or on purpose?"

"Accidentally!"

His two companions were questioned by police and then taken to the Receiving Home.

Young Leedom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Leedom. Mrs. Leedom came here from California

London Reports Steinhardt Plane Safe at Baku

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Nov. 15.—The ministry of information announced today the plane carrying Sir Walter Monckton, British Middle East information chief, and, presumably, United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and Maxim M. Litvinoff, Russian envoy to Washington, had arrived safely at Baku, Russian oil port, Thursday.

There had been an earlier report, which proved erroneous, that the plane bearing the party from Kuibyshev, the auxiliary Russian capital, had reached Pavlevi, Iranian port some 200 miles south of the Soviet Caspian seaport.

Immediate details were lacking, but it was presumed the plane had been weatherbound since its arrival.

Bern, Switzerland (Saturday), Nov. 15.—Russian forces on the Leningrad sector launched a heavy attack against German concentrations along the entire length of their lines from immediately southeast of the town of Tikhvin, according to a report received here late this morning.

Though details of the fighting are still lacking, one report from Moscow shortly after 3 o'clock this morning stated that at two points, Soviet forces had succeeded in breaking the German lines and, what was more important, still held the initiative. German forces failed to regroup in time to contain the Soviet troops before they had succeeded in making important gains.

Drive on 20-Mile Front

Further to the east Russian troops reported launching what was described as a major offensive, throwing back German troops threatening the Leningrad-Vologda line with particularly heavy losses along a front some 20 miles in length.

Word at 3:20 this morning from Moscow was that further details of the fighting probably would not be forthcoming before noon, but it was added the German advance lines had been "seriously hammered" along the entire "Leningrad front."

On the central front, with the single exception of an engagement on the Nara River near Maloyaroslavets where yesterday the Germans tried to break the Russian lines before Moscow, fighting was on a reduced scale.

On the Tula Sector, where German operations once threatened to break through but were contained by violent Russian counterattacks, the Russians were said to retain the initiative both at Aleshnia and Kashira, where important German formations were broken up after suffering heavy losses.

Bette Gay Gets More to Eat; She's Week Old

A stepup in her diet yesterday testified to progress in the fight for life of Bette Gay Bonbrest, 26-ounce infant of George Washington University Hospital.

On doctor's orders, the baby's every-other-hour meal was increased to three teaspoons of milk, administered by eye dropper. In between, Bette Gay continues to receive an appetizer composed of lactose and water.

The Bonbrest baby was a week old yesterday and her chances of survival are now fairly bright, said hospital attendants. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Leroy D. Bonbrest.

Strict Control Put on Travel To, From U.S.

Printed Matter to Be Subject to Search; Rules Deemed Blow At 5th Columnists

Regulations placing all travel to and from the United States under virtual wartime controls were announced last night by the State Department.

While officials did not comment, it was clear that the control would be of great assistance in curbing the activities of spies and Fifth Columnists.

Acting under authority of a Presidential proclamation issued simultaneously, the State Department announced that any alien seeking to leave the United States must apply to the department for a permit at least 30 days in advance.

May Be Denied

The Secretary can deny the permit when he feels the departure of any alien would be "prejudicial to the interests of the United States."

At the same time regulations governing entrance of aliens were tightened. Applications for visas must now be submitted to American consular or diplomatic officers abroad and then sent to the State Department for approval.

The orders issued last night set up an interdepartmental Committee of Review to study visa applications and give hearings to sponsors of visa applicants or their agents.

Government agents are given the right to inspect all documents, letters and other printed or written material being brought into or taken from the country by any person.

May Exempt Canadians

The Secretary of State, with the concurrence of the Attorney General, is authorized to exempt certain categories of aliens from the new requirements, and it is understood that Canadians will have the benefit of certain exemptions.

One regulation would require American seamen to have valid passports or special permission to leave this country if their ships are to sail into waters north of 35 degrees north latitude and east of 66 degrees west longitude, or into what are currently designated combat zones.

The longitude is roughly a line from Morocco to North Carolina and the latitude a line running north and south just off the easternmost tip of Maine.

In effect, therefore, this regulation provides for special investigation of all seamen on vessels sailing into the North Atlantic areas where there are convoy operations.

Pot in Buried City, 3141 Years Old, Says 'Put Lid On'

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The earliest known Greek inscription, says Dr. John F. Daniel, probably appeared on the rim of a big pot in a buried city in Cyprus, and read:

"Put the lid on."

Dr. Daniel, assistant curator of the University of Pennsylvania Museum, announced his findings at a meeting tonight of the Archaeological Institute of America.

The inscription dates back to 1200 B. C., he said, and the pot was probably used for oil.

Fateful Negotiations

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

A special Japanese envoy to the United States last night was flying to Washington for fateful negotiations which may settle the issue of peace or war in the Pacific.

The emissary, Saburo Kurusu, arrived in San Francisco by clipper plane yesterday at almost the same time that President Roosevelt—apparently preparing for any eventuality in the Far East—was telling his press conference here that all United States Marine garrisons are being withdrawn from Japanese-occupied areas of China.

[Kurusu is expected here at 1 p. m. today, the Associated Press reported.]

The small Marine detachments in Shanghai, Peiping and Tientsin, totaling about 970 men, would be in grave danger of capture or annihilation if a Japanese-American war broke out, it was pointed out here.

Precautionary Move

Their withdrawal was interpreted as a precaution for the safety of the men themselves and a new move in the intensified Japanese-American "war of nerves," designed to impress on Tokyo the readiness of the United States for any outcome of the long-stalled "peace" negotiations between the two nations.

President Roosevelt himself declined to offer an interpretation of the abrupt withdrawal of the Marines, but said, in answer to a series of questions from reporters on the Far Eastern situation, that he sincerely hoped war with Japan could be averted.

He had been asked if he thought the American people understood "the seriousness of the Far Eastern situation." The President nodded in the affirmative.

When a reporter asked if any

Gibraltar, Nov. 14.—I was having a cup of tea and some toast in the Ark Royal's ward room with the torpedo officer and the commander, Capt. L. E. H. Maund yesterday "somewhere east of Gibraltar" when there was a tremendous crash.

All the lights went out and the Ark's tremendous bulk shuddered and spun around in the sea like a sailing ship in a gusty wind.

Plates, cups, saucers, and spoons were flung on the deck, as Capt. Maund leaped to his feet and was through the door like a flash and other officers rushed out to see what had happened.

I grabbed a life-belt and followed the crowd scrambling up the ladders to the flight deck, 30 feet above. I suppose it took at least five minutes before I arrived on the deck, the landing and jumping-off place for some 60 planes.

I found the ship already listing heavily to starboard. Everyone was talking and asking what had happened—nobody knew then that a London (Saturday) Nov. 15 (AP). Only 18 seamen from the Ark Royal are missing, an Admiralty communique announced today.

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—The 22,000-ton British aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which from the Arctic Circle to the Cape of Good Hope had carried into action against the Axis an honored name going back to the defeat of the Spanish armada, went down today with mortal torpedo wounds.

She was attacked yesterday east of Gibraltar by a submarine—most likely by an Italian submarine although this point was not officially made—while she was en route to that western Mediterranean fortress. She sank this morning under tow en route to port while some of her 1600 men were working to the last, in the best of her traditions for quiet and persistent valor, to bring her safely into harbor.

The great majority of her crew, said the admiralty, were saved.

(Dispatches from La Linea, Spain, said first casualty figures at Gibraltar indicated 32 dead, 60 injured and some 50 crewmen missing.

(This account said that only about a dozen of the Ark Royal's 60 planes were able to take off before she sank. Sources at La Linea said further that British ships from Gibraltar sped to her aid after her

U. S. Bent on War, Tokyo Circles Say

Claim Situation In Pacific Upset By Act's Revision

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by the New York Times

Tokyo, Nov. 14.—The passage of the neutrality revision bill on the eve of the arrival at Washington of the Japanese special envoy, Saburo Kurusu, is regarded in "well-informed" quarters expressing themselves through the official news agency, Domei, as evidence of "America's final determination to participate in the war and which will certainly aggravate the situation not only in the Atlantic but also in the Pacific."

"These quarters," says Domei, "doubt whether Mr. Roosevelt and the group of politicians around him who are inclined to dictatorship have grasped a clear view of the prevailing objective conditions in the Atlantic and the Pacific," which means a distribution of relative strength in the two oceans.

Revision of the act, Domei continues, removes the last obstacle to President Roosevelt's policy of heading toward participation in the European war through all-out aid to Britain, and adds:

"The stage is set for the commencement of a shooting war, with armed American merchantmen ready to enter the war zone, and with relations between the United States and Germany now on the verge of explosion."

Beyond the veiled reference to the Pacific, however, there has been no mention of Japan's position under the Triple Alliance such as would have been automatic several months ago.

The newspaper, Yomiuri, which enjoys a large circulation, says the question does not touch Japan immediately but only because there has been no declaration of war as in the case of the China incident. The paper, however, suggests that if there were a declaration of war, Japan would have to consider her position under the Triple Alliance.

Britain, China Praise, Axis Raps Revision

Amendment of the United States' neutrality law so as to arm merchant ships and send them anywhere in the world was construed in London and Chungking as a major move against totalitarianism and in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo as a challenge.

The reaction everywhere was largely in the realm of the press and the authorized source. There was little flatly official.

There was the sobering thought that for the first time American ships, already within range of Axis submarines, would be exposed also to attack by Germany's far-flying Fockewulfe patrol bombers.

The Express in London suggested that the first ships would arrive from Iceland, formerly the last United States stop on the sea route to Britain. Other sources suggested that the first arrivals might be the same American-owned vessels which have been going to Britain—ships of Panama registry which now can hoist the stars and stripes.

Authorized German sources charged that Congress had voted on the basis of a false presentation of facts by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull. The Germans joined Rome newspapers, such as Il Popolo Di Roma, in saying that now the Axis simply must attack American vessels entering belligerent zones.

Domei, Japanese news agency, quoted well-informed circles as saying that the revision "certainly aggravates the situation not only in the Atlantic but in the Pacific," that United States-German relations were near the explosion point and that "the stage is set for commencement of a shooting war."

Chungking officials expressed relief, holding that failure of the revision move would have strengthened Japan's position in negotiations with Washington and hardened the attitude of Japanese militarists.

In Rome, Il Popolo di Roma said that revision of the Neutrality Act to let American ships enter the war blockade zones will soon result in attacks on those vessels.

Soviet Fleet Sinks 4 Axis Supply Ships

By the United Press

London, Nov. 14.—Russian warships have broken into the Baltic and sunk four Axis transport ships totaling 26,000 tons, according to a Russian war communique broadcast by the Moscow radio tonight.

The Germans reported last week that Russian warships had left the Kronstadt naval base, passed safely through a mine barricade, and reached open sea in the Gulf of Finland.

The radio said also that Russian planes raided Koenigsberg and Danzig last night, dropping "high explosive and incendiary bombs on military objectives and causing great fires and explosions."

Otherwise he was completely nude.

Reds Claim 31 Planes

London (Saturday), Nov. 15 (U.P.). Soviet fighters and antiaircraft guns shot down 31 German planes in the Moscow area Friday, the news agency Tass reported today. The dispatch said only a "few raiders" reached the city and caused "insignificant" damage.

British Capture Hill Near Gondar

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Nov. 14 (AP).—The British today reported capture of a hill only 13 miles from encircled Gondar, stronghold in northwestern Ethiopia, where the remnants of Italy's Ethiopian armies have been holding out since April.

A communique said British troops, supported by artillery, seized Kamat Hill in a fight in which the defenders lost 10 killed and many wounded, some of whom were seen to fall down a cliff.

Witness Says a Lucky Shot At 4 Miles Sank Ark Royal

When this dawned on us I looked at one officer who was standing on the tilted deck just staring out at the sea.

"The man who fired that torpedo was the sort of fellow who'd win the Irish Sweep," was his dry comment.

It was indeed a lucky shot—a 10,000-to-1 chance. The torpedo was fired from outside our destroyer screen, probably by a submarine 3 or 4 miles away.

Clouds of black smoke began to float over the flight deck. Weird figures in flying suits, goggles, and Mae Wests (R. A. F. life belts) suddenly appeared. They were pilots who had just landed—a remarkable feat in itself considering the list of the vessel.

The Ark Royal

Hundreds of us were on the steeply sloping light deck. We stood upright with difficulty on the high side of the deck, which kept lifting up and up out of the sea in the most extraordinary manner.

More and more people came up from below. The padre declared it was the first time he had run in his life.

The lieutenant commander, who had been asleep in his cabin not far from where the torpedo hit said he "barely noticed it."

The Ark Royal still was going ahead at a fair speed, because the captain was unable to reach the engine room and command her to stop.

Capt. Maund was an unfamiliar sight on the flight deck, but he took the whole thing in a quiet yet swift-acting sort of way. All the naval officers wept walking up and down barking out crisp orders.

Many in a Daze

Many of us were in a sort of daze. We tried to pretend that things were going on as usual, and bolstered our courage by saying silly things.

One sailor remarked: "I haven't had a swim in a couple of months," and we laughed out of sheer relief at this silly joke.

By now the angle of the deck had become so steep that it was impossible to move without falling down.

Then the captain shouted "half speed astern and take the way off!" (Stop the ship.)

Slowly the Ark Royal eased down in speed and began to drift.

The men went quietly to their posts with their life belts on and inflated.

It was not until then that some realized for the first time that the Ark might sink quickly. It seemed incredible.

The sailors began to throw debris into the water on which to cling when they jumped.

I remember watching the destroyers circling around us, listening for the submarine somewhere beneath the surface.

There was a satisfying "woomph" of depth charges, chucking columns of water into the air, going on all around us.

One destroyer slipped alongside the Ark, and the next order was "Prepare to abandon ship."

One or two sailors unhurriedly jumped 30 feet from the flight deck to the destroyer's forecastle. I don't know why they did that—when it would have been easier to slide down a rope.

Certainly it was not panic—because in that hour of crisis I learned what naval discipline means.

Those 1600 officers and men were marvelous. They went down to the destroyer laughing and joking. Those on the lower decks jumped, and those on the higher levels went down on ropes.

I stuck to the flight deck, wondering what would happen next, while a party of engineers went below to see what could be done. Every minute we discussed the possibility of the Ark's going down.

Then the captain shouted: "Come along, everybody—into the destroyer!"

I went down a rope with the senior officers, then the destroyer cast off. We stood back to take a last look at the Ark.

Her list was terrific, and the ship looked like a floating block of apartment houses.

"I wonder what they'll say now?" the captain mused, recalling the numerous times that the Germans and Italians claimed the Ark Royal had been sunk. "I had hoped she wasn't going to sink this time, either."

It was beginning to get dark then. Tugs and motor launches came out from Gibraltar to make certain that the Ark was under way. She wasn't.

The fight to save the Ark went on all night. They kept the flood waters down for hours, but early this morning the water gained on the pumps.

She was abandoned at dawn. Two hours later she rolled over on her side. She stayed in that position for quite a time.

Then suddenly her stern lifted into the air, poised there a minute, and the ship plunged into the depths.

The Ark Royal finally was sunk!

first S O S and that they were towing her to the Rock when she was sunk by a second torpedo.)

Hard Blow to British

She was the greatest casualty to the Royal Navy since the German battleship Bismarck sank the British battle cruiser Hood last May and was herself then destroyed by the implacable British squadrons that dogged her down and tore her to pieces in the fullness of a classical revenge.

It would not have been possible without the Ark Royal, for it was she who flung out her attacking planes to trap the German; it was the Ark Royal that was largely responsible for the Bismarck's doom.

She survived—this stout and awkwardly gallant British ship—by more than two full years the first, and often repeated, German notice of her death, for Berlin had pronounced her sunk in the first months of the war and then had asked mockingly again and again: "Where is the Ark Royal? . . . Where is the Ark Royal?"

Here, said the admiralty, was where the Ark Royal was part of that time and since;

Aided in Spee Search

She took a hand in the search for the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee that ultimately ended in the Spee's suicide off Montevideo; she intercepted one of the Spee's supply ships and caused the bagging of several others; over 4,500,000 square miles of sea she hunted down the Spee's accompanying raiders; at one time she was 30 days in continuous patrol.

Thus she was paying, and more, her cost in pounds—it was about 16 million dollars—and in blood, for thus her career went on:

By March of 1940, she was back in the Mediterranean, but then, soon, she had beaten her way into the North Sea for the Norwegian campaign, throwing up her little planes to harass the Germans and as best she could protecting from the air the Allied troops and the British convoys.

She was one of the last to leave northern Norway after Narvik. And then, by July, 1940, she was once again in the Mediterranean.

Down there, said the admiralty, the Italian high command claimed that she had suffered a direct bomb hit, but "this was as unfounded as earlier German claims to have sunk her."

Indeed, it was added, she took her place in the engagement and pursuit of the Italian fleet southwest of Sardinia, and her airplanes hit an Italian battleship with an aerial torpedo, and bombed several Italian cruisers and destroyers.

In Action at Genoa

She was in action in the naval bombardment of the Port of Genoa.

Again, she headed north into the Atlantic—this time, in the great and successful pursuit of the Bismarck.

"On the afternoon of May 26," said the admiralty's epilogue, "it seemed that the Bismarck might succeed in reaching a port in occupied France. A torpedo striking force from H. M. S. Ark Royal, however, sealed the fate of the Bismarck. Torpedo hits were secured by Swordfish aircraft amidships on the Bismarck and her starboard quarter. The Bismarck's speed was reduced and her steering gear damaged so that she was brought to action by the commander in chief of the home fleet and destroyed."

This was the most memorable of all the Ark Royal's engagements; after it was over she returned again to the Mediterranean.

She and her planes, said the admiralty, shot down or severely damaged more than 100 German and Italian aircraft; 67 in the Mediterranean alone.

She was the third of her name. The first was a little 800-tonner, the flagship of Lord High Admiral Howard of Effingham in the destruction of the Spanish Armada in 1588.

The second, a seaplane carrier of 7400 tons, served in the Mediterranean in the World War and stood to at the British landing in Gallipoli.

The third Ark Royal was the third British aircraft carrier thus far lost—the others have been the 22,500-ton Courageous and her sister ship, the Glorious—but her passing still left Britain with more such carriers than she had at the start of the war. Seven are in commission and two building.

Japan's Special Envoy Nears Washington on Vital Mission

Americans were "overrating" the danger in the Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt appeared puzzled. The correspondent suggested that the danger might be "overrated" by people who "think there will be war right away."

The President quickly replied that he sincerely hoped there would not be.

Late yesterday the State Department announced that Kurusu and Admiral Nomura, the Japanese Ambassador, will confer with Secretary Hull at 10:30 a. m. Monday.

The "peace emissary" is expected to arrive in Washington at 1:04 p. m. today and will be met at the airport by Joseph W. Ballantine, assistant chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department. Officials said Ballantine was meeting Kurusu as a "personal friend" rather than as a representative of the department.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had no appointment to see Kurusu as yet, but it was thought likely that he will meet the Japanese representative early next week.

Difficult Question

When a reporter asked the President if he knew how war between the United States and Japan could be averted, Mr. Roosevelt said that was a very difficult question to answer and that a negative reply might be misinterpreted. If he answered yes, Mr. Roosevelt continued, that would be a guess. Neither he, the reporter who asked the question nor anyone else could know for sure, the President added:

President Roosevelt, according to Tokyo dispatches yesterday, will receive from Kurusu a personal message from Gen. Hideki Tojo, Japanese premier, which is reported to embody a warning that this is Japan's "last effort" to achieve a rapprochement with the United States through diplomatic negotiations.

Japanese-American negotiations, which Secretary Hull has consistently described as exploratory talks, have been in progress in Washington and Tokyo since August, when Prince Konoye, then premier, sent a personal message to President Roosevelt. It has been conceded in both Japan and this country that the conversations have not been particularly fruitful.

750 at Shanghai

President Roosevelt yesterday gave no indication how soon the evacuation of the Marines from China would be completed, but it was believed that American citizens in Shanghai would be given a last chance to return to the United States before the withdrawal.

The chief Marine garrison is at Shanghai, where some 750 officers and men are stationed under command of Col. Samuel L. Howard, of Washington. A detachment of 165 is attached to the embassy staff at Peiping, and another 55 men are at Tientsin.

American Marines first entered China in 1854, and have been stationed there continuously for the past 36 years, under terms of a protocol, which was signed after suppression of the Boxer Rebellion.

Mr. Roosevelt said the Marine withdrawal order does not affect American gunboats on the Yangtze River.

yaroslavets line—apparently a continuation of Thursday's attack directed against Narafominsk—was said to have gotten under way shortly after sunup yesterday morning after an intensive artillery preparation. Strong German tank formations approaching the Russian positions on the southern bank of the river, attempted under an intensive box barrage to encircle Russian forces holding an important bridgehead. Another German formation simultaneously attacked from the southeast along the southern bank of the Nara in an attempt at a flanking movement.

Perceived in time, this southeastern flanking movement soon "degenerated" into a separate engagement with Russian artillery from the northern bank of the river pounding the German formations and inflicting particularly heavy losses. Having erased the threat from their southeastern flank, Russian forces directly south of Maloyaroslavets raced and held the repeated German thrusts.

It was not until shortly after noon, however, upon the arrival of mobile field artillery batteries that the Russians started pounding the oncoming German tanks at practically point-blank range and after two hours succeeded in breaking the main pressure; By 4 p. m. the situation was "well in hand," and the German lines, six weeks after Reichsfuehrer Hitler's famous October 3 speech intimating immediate and crushing defeats on the Russian forces before Moscow, still remained unchanged.

Another important engagement in the Kalinin sector netted the Russians important territorial gains yesterday. To the north and east of the town, Russian forces encircled a large formation of enemy infantry which, in its withdrawal, had been forced to evacuate a total of 21 villages. In the town of Kalinin itself, moreover, German failure to get reinforcements into line on the northeastern suburbs of the city enabled the Russians to clean out strong nests of German machine guns and seriously threaten their main positions from the east.

On the Crimean Peninsula, last night's and this morning's information added little to what was known early yesterday—namely, that the German formations had pierced the Kerch defenses and had advanced along the southern coast toward Taky. Stubborn Russian "rearguard" activity, the military spokesman said, "contained" the main weight of the enemy's thrust on the southern coast, while attacks against the town itself on the northern coast of the peninsula had "been held in relatively the same positions as yesterday—a few miles from the city."

Other indications received here late this morning, however, pointed to a methodical evacuation of Kerch as proceeding "in good order," despite almost continuous German bombing attacks."

13 Vessels Sunk By 15 Nazi Subs, Survivors Claim

Boston, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Fifteen survivors of the torpedoed American-owned freighter Bold Venture arrived here today and related a vivid story of how a "wolf pack" of about 15 submarines trailed their convoy in the North Atlantic and sank 13 ships in 72 hours.

The survivors said the submarines struck swiftly and savagely under cover of darkness. Most of the 35 crew members of the Bold Venture, en route from Baltimore to Liverpool, were in their bunks on October 17 when the torpedo struck its stern, gouging a big hole and blowing off the poop-deck. The freighter went down in ten minutes 450 miles northwest of Ireland.

Donald MacLeod, 40, of Roxbury, second engineer, said that a "regular wolf pack of the submarines had been trailing our 53-ship convoy. In the first two nights we lost three boats."

Bioff and Browne Are Denied Bail

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals denied today a defense motion to admit Labor Leaders William Bioff and George E. Browne to bail pending the outcome of their appeal from conviction under the Federal anti-racketeering act.

The President's Day

By International News Service

BOSS MAN: Mr. Roosevelt yesterday went to the mat with Labor Boys Lewis, Phil Murray and Tom Kennedy, and Steel Men Grace, Fairless and Purnell. Planted squarely in their runway path, the President told them: Negotiate, operate, or get out. Later they got down to open-collared negotiation—on Presidential orders.

CALLED OFF: Looking tired and troubled, the President told the boys in the front line of his press conference to go home and unpack their duds, the trip to Warm Springs, Ga., is off for the time being . . . Too many things have come up. If miracles occur the President thinks he might be able to carve his turkey at Warm Springs, as on the last Roosevelt Thanksgiving.

MARINES HAVE BOARDED AND . . . : Just as the press conversational ball staggered to a stop, Secretary Bill Hassett put a memo on the President desk. Mr. Roosevelt picked it up and read aloud the already strongly rumored news that the Marines have been withdrawn from China.

REPRIEVE? Back on the official appointment list for the first time since his startling announcement that the new OPM setup was but a small step in the right direction was Bernard Baruch, one-time regular Tuesday lunch partner. For 15 minutes Mr. Roosevelt and old friend and adviser Baruch talked, exchanged latest views of national defense progress.

APPOINTMENT OINTMENT: FCC's network-baiting Lawrence Fly showed up before lunch, discussed deep, dark secrets with the President, departed without comment.

BUNDLES FROM BURMA: Accompanied by British Ambassador Lord Halifax, Prime Minister U. Saw of Burma called and dropped a troublous bundle from Burma on the Presidential desk. Burma, said the dark, bare-deaded prime minister, wants its independence, feels that one of the eight points of the Atlantic Charter assures them an untying of British apron strings. The President told U. Saw to come back today for a fuller pro-and-con discussion.

AND JAPAN: Shortly after 2 p. m. the assembled Cabinet and the President went to work on the ruckus in the Pacific, wrestled with it for two hours. The President said publicly he sincerely hoped we would not have war, listened closely to the way things are shaping up in the Pacific.

SOLITUDE: It had been a long day and trying one, the sinus headache thumped and his office felt hot and stuffy, and the walls too close. So the President put on his hat and overcoat, called for his car, and rolled off toward the Virginia countryside. Until dinner time he rode through the soft autumn air in coveted solitude, reviewing the history made in a few short days of Amistice week, pondered the future, knotted loose ends together, dropped strangely shaped pieces into their proper places. Feeling more cheerful and hopeful he returned, sat down to dinner, and scrapped the plan of a leisurely evening in favor of more work in the privacy of the oval study.

Fire Damages Giant New Texas Bomber Plant

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 14 (AP).—Fire which broke out shortly after the Army gave newsmen a preview today of the world's largest blackout defense plant destroyed a warehouse and caused damage to machine tools estimated at from $20,000 to $100,000.

Officials said the loss would slow up construction of the plant, as the tools would be difficult to replace.

Designated "blackout" because it has no windows, the factory will be used to assemble heavy bombers of the 29-ton, four-engine type the British call the "Liberator."

Costing 25 million dollars, the factory is 4000 feet long and 320 feet wide. The interior of the main building contains the world's largest room, measuring 12 city blocks long by a half block wide without a supporting column to obstruct the long assembly lines.

Dr. Torrance Shows How Bride Died

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DR. ARTHUR FREDERICK TORRANCE,

By the Associated Press

Monterrey, Mexico, Nov. 24.—A dozen times Dr. Arthur Torrance threw himself full length into a muddy roadside ditch near here late today as he reenacted, in a voice shaking with unshed tears, his version of how his wealthy, elderly bride of less than a month met her death.

Torrance, 54, identified by police as a New York explorer, author and expert on tropical diseases, stuck firmly to his story that the former Mrs. Ada Loveland, of Kalamazoo, Mich., was injured fatally last Saturday when she swerved their honeymoon sedan into a ditch to avoid a cow on the road.

Bride's Son Suspicious

Richard Loveland, of Los Angeles, son of the dead woman, has complained that he suspects she was slain rather than accidentally injured.

His complaint resulted in Torrance being detained for questioning. Today Loveland filed a long memorandum with District Attorney Juan Jesus Vallejo, stating his mother had set up a $20,000 trust fund for Torrance in case of her death but later instructed the First National Bank of Kalamazoo to revoke it; that she had written of being given medicines by Torrance; that Torrance had urged him not to come to Monterrey for the funeral; and that no autopsy was performed at the request of Torrance.

Torrance was taken out on the highway today in the car which figures in the case, its cushions stiff with dried blood.

Torrance had difficulty finding the site, but on the third attempt pointed to a six-foot scar on a shallow embankment and declared, "This is the place."

The car was driven into the ditch in the manner he described. At the bidding of police he then flung himself to the ground again and again in relating how he and his wife were thrown out when the doors burst open.

Says She Struck Mirror

Torrance said his wife bled freely from a head wound which he assumed was caused by striking the rear-view mirror.

"The story still seems full of holes," police said, "but we hope to know before long."

Assistant Police Chief Garcia said he identified Torrance from pictures in his book, "Jungle Mania," as the Dr. Arthur Frederick Torrance listed in Who's Who, a native of England but a naturalized United States citizen and a resident of New York.

Torrance and Mrs. Loveland were married October 18 in Williamsburg, Ky. The marriage license gave her age as 50, but police here said she was 65.

Young Loveland said Torrance telephoned him at Los Angeles that the body could not be taken to California or Michigan because there were no embalming facilities here and in any event removal would cost "thousands of dollars." Police said there were embalming facilities here.

Police said an autopsy would be held to try to determine the manner of death, which the death certificate listed as a skull fracture.

Berlin Says Fight Is to Gain Yards, Not Miles as Before

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 14.—German military dispatches reported tonight that the Russians had attacked "in considerable force" with tanks and infantry on the Moscow front, and in this and the other frozen theaters of battle the opposing armies were declared locked in a dogged struggle for gains of yards, rather than miles.

Military reporters said there were attacks and counterattacks all along the front, with the result that the Germans had made some slight progress.

Three Russian tanks were said to have been smashed in the Red army attack on an undesignated sector of the central (Moscow) line, and a subsequent German countersmash led to hand-to-hand fighting in which, the German accounts asserted, 58 Russian casemates and a number of stoutly defended villages were taken.

Forced to Fight for Every Yard

With "village-by-village" fighting reported in the Moscow line, it appeared also that the Germans, at a critical stage of the battle for the Crimea, were being forced to battle for every yard of Russian soil on the peninsula.

The Crimean fighting was summed up by German military commentators as a general tightening-up of the Nazi grip on Kerch and Sevastopol, with both cities still holding out.

Both were under artillery fire and, in the case of Kerch, on the strait which leads direct to the Caucasus, the high command took pains to say that the city and harbor were under "observed fire," meaning it was not blind shooting, but a cannonade controlled by officers at points from which they could see and choose their targets.

German bombers raided Caucasian points across the strait and covered an extensive region of the Black Sea's northeast coast, it was said. Among their targets were Novorossisk, an alternative Russian naval base, and Anapa, the airport of which was described as one of the outer defenses of the Caucasian oil region and a training place for many Soviet parachutists.

Evacuees Under Fire

Also reported raided were Tamanskaja, where the Germans said Russian troops escaping from the Crimea were being landed, and Tuapse, a spur of one Caucasian oil pipeline.

At Sevastopol, in the southwest of the Crimea, gunners and aviators concentrated on ships and general harbor activity with orders to disturb the evacuation of Red Army troops as much as possible. Two Russian coastal batteries were declared silenced here, two big freighters damaged and important military installations in the harbor smashed.

One variation in the long story of the siege of Leningrad, on the north, came with details of the reported sinking of a big Russian transport by a mine near the Kronstadt naval base. Otherwise, war on the Leningrad front was the same monotonous booming of siege guns which are firing across the narrows at almost point-blank range on the Kronstadt naval works and occasionally shifting their range to plant a few shells in the Leningrad industrial districts.

103 Serb Snipers Slain in Battle

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 14 (AP). One hundred and three Serb snipers have been killed and 200 taken prisoner in a 60-hour battle near Svilajnac, Central Serbia, the Swiss Telegraph Agency reported today from Belgrade.

Ten government soldiers were slain and four wounded.

Near the village of Llig, southwest of Belgrade, the regulars took 107 prisoners, including the commandant and the political commissar of a rebel unit, the agency said: Later the two were shot on the spot.

Child Welfare Gains in D. C., but Case Load Is Still Too High, Aides Are Told

REPORT ON CHILD WELFARE WORK—Among the leaders in child welfare work who met yesterday to report progress in the District were (from left) Aileen M. Blong, Mrs. Robert Lee Duckworth and Margaret Reeves. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who presided

League Field Secretary's Report Covers Progress Since Survey 4 Years Ago

Although marked advances have been made in child welfare services in the District of Columbia since they were surveyed by the Child Welfare League of America four years ago, the case load of workers in the Department of Public Welfare is still much too high, Margaret Reeves, field secretary of the league, said yesterday.

Miss Reeves said the load was 95 cases per worker today, in comparison with 108 four years ago, but that it should be 65. She noted an advance in temporary care now being provided for dependent children and said this feature of District welfare could be bettered considerably by passage of two bills now before Congress—one giving the Department of Child Welfare the power to license foster homes and the other permitting children to stay in subsidized boarding homes longer than seven days before being sent to the receiving home.

Her report was made before representatives of fourteen District organizations concerned with child welfare and is preliminary to final findings of the league, which is conducting a second survey on invitation of the interested groups. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who presided and called attention to the unusual nature of the follow-up study.

Stresses Value to Defense

"Request for the second survey showed that everyone in Washington took the first very much to heart, and had the tenacity to ask for the same experts to come back to see what had been accomplished and what still needs to be done," she said.

Mrs. Meyer termed welfare the best defense work that civilians can do. "By engaging in welfare work," she declared, "you are doing more for your country than if you merely wear a uniform and go through some temporary form of exercise."

Mrs. Robert Lee Duckworth, who surveyed the Protestant and Jewish agencies four years ago and is undertaking the same job now, reported that Florence Crittenton Home, Hillcrest, and the Washington Home for Foundlings have carried out most of the recommendations made in 1937.

She called for wider use of "mixed boards, composed of both men and women," a revolving board membership, pension plans such "as that adopted by the Southern Baptist Association," paid medical service, and more flexibility of admission and dismissal regulations.

"Especially should plans be made to take care of the teen-age boy and girl," she declared. Also, she complimented the institutions in her division on the "noticeable improvement in the calber of workers now employed."

Aileen M. Blong, who is surveying the Catholic institutions, complimented the board of St. Joseph's Home and School for Boys on "the masculine influence" in the home now and on the shop that has been opened. At St. Vincent's Home and School for Girls, she said, "a more normal atmosphere" has been provided by grouping the girls and providing for more community contacts.

She stressed the importance of individualizing the child, although he lives in a group setting, and said both institutions were "thinking in this direction."

Special guests at the meeting included Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of Associate Justice Jackson; James V. Bennett, head of the Washington Council of Social Agencies; Coleman Jennings, director of the Washington Community Chest, and Msgr. Lawrence J. Sheenhan, director of Catholic Charities.

Organizations represented were: Baptist Home for Children, Catholic Charities, Children's Protective Association, Episcopal Home for Children, Florence Crittenton Home, Hillcrest; Jewish Social Service Agencies, St. Ann's Orphanage, St. John's Orphanage, St. Rose's Technical School, St. Joseph's Home and School, St. Vincent's Home and School, Swartzell Methodist Home for Children, Washington Home for Foundlings and Masonic Home.

High Axis Notables At Huntziger Rites

Vichy, Nov. 14.—Important German and Italian delegations have been sent to Vichy to attend funeral services tomorrow for Gen. Charles L. C. Huntziger, French war minister killed in an airplane crash last Wednesday.

The German delegation is headed by Otto Abetz, German diplomatic representative in Paris, the Italian by Gen. Vacca Magolini, president of the Italian Armistice Commission.

New U-Boat Drive Broken, British Say

By the United Press

London, Nov. 14.—Intensified activity by British and United States naval patrols has resulted in destruction of "many" German U-boats in the Atlantic, naval quarters said today.

The Germans have launched a new U-boat offensive, supposedly from the French coast, but are being met with "highly successful action" by Anglo-American patrols, it was said.

(A dispatch from Vichy said the Germans, under Dr. Fritz Todt, builder of the Siegfried Line, had constructed a string of submarine bases along the French coast to service new fleets of U-boats in preparation for an "all out" submarine and airplane offensive in the Atlantic.)

Naval quarters said, "Lack of success of the new German sea offensive might be attributed to three factors—(1) efficiency of convoy escorts; (2) destruction of long-range German Focke-wulf airplane spotters, and (3) a decrease in German U-boat personnel."

The biggest German handicap was said to be the loss of submarine crews, which take several years to train.

The Germans are probably not using "baby submarines" which have been reported pouring off assembly lines in German shipyards. Naval quarters said that for effective work the Germans must use at least 500 to 700 ton submarines in the Atlantic because of rough seas and weather.

"Baby submarines have little effect except in raids against coastal shipping," it was said.

These same quarters said they had no knowledge of a reported battle between United States warships and a German surface raider off Iceland. They said if such a battle had occurred, naval sources here would have been informed.

Mayors Plead With Vichy On Rations

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Nov. 14.—Adrien Marquet, Mayor of Bordeaux, and mayors of many communities in that district, have asked Paul Charbin, minister of supplies, for an interview in the hope of increasing food rations. They intend to tell him that in all these localities adults "who are not sick and pursue their normal activities" have lost on an average from 12 to 20 pounds in weight and that "children between the ages of 9 and 14 are in danger." The cause is "insufficiency of supplies" and the mayors stress the necessity of "equitable distribution of food."

There is every indication the minister's reply will be that the task is herculean and that its ramifications are unpredictable.

Restrictive regulations now include these:

"Blood sausage must be made according to governmental specifications. No one can sell or ship walnuts without a license. All sauerkraut has been "blocked" until released for retail sale. Only licensed butchers may sell pork after January 1.

Penalties Are Stiff

The "economic police" is opening all baggage sent by rail whether or not accompanied by a passenger, in order to discover foodstuffs shipped clandestinely. Owners of pedigreed dogs are asked to register in order that they may be issued special food cards for their pets with the implication that in the not distant future mongrels will be put to death. Consumers of tripe must register at a store of their choice and may not be served elsewhere.

There are long lists of penalties imposed on violators. At Nice yesterday there were 13 convictions for various offenses ranging from opening a store without permission to selling potatoes above the controlled price. In Lyons a hotel manager and three farmers have been arrested for slaughtering calves and hogs without license. Also in the Lyons district five farmers are being prosecuted for selling butter direct to consumers.

The tribunal set up in Lyons especially to try such cases opened its session today and passed some severe sentences—forced labor for life for two men, ten and five years for others—all for forging and issuing bread cards.

Waltman Resigns As Republican Publicity Director

Franklyn Waltman announced yesterday his resignation as director of publicity of the Republican National Committee, a post he has held for four years.

Waltman submitted his resignation to National Chairman Joseph W. Martin "to take effect during the next several weeks" and Martin said Waltman would remain with the committee to arrange for the work to continue.

In a letter to Martin, Waltman said he desired to return to newspaper work and that he believed that "if there is to be change in the post of publicity director, it should take place before the new year when the plans you are formulating are launched for the successful conduct of the 1942 Congressional campaign."

Martin, in his reply, said that "you have given the committee and the Republican Party four years of faithful and efficient service and we shall all be sorry to see you go."

Waltman was formerly on the staff of The Washington Post.

Stealthy British Commandos Scale Cliffs and Raid Bardia

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 14.—Disclosure of an audacious raid by Britain's picked "commandos" on Axis gun sites, supplies and communications at Bardia in Libya led to conjecture tonight that Britain might be planning widespread use of such raiding parties on the German occupied continental coastline and in Italy.

The Bardia adventure was a three-hour raid described as bloodless, but resulting in considerable damage to the Axis.

The invaders scaled the steep escarpment below the town in tennis shoes after their transport arrived off Bardia at 11 p. m. By 12:45 a. m., the commandos had reached the town and about two hours before dawn had finished their job in the time appointed.

Have Been Used Before

This, it was disclosed, was not the only occasion when commandos had been used.

Reports published abroad of commando raids on German outposts on the French coast in recent months have met official silence, although there have been unconfirmed rumors of terror among German coastal garrisons inspired by sudden sorties of grim men in rubber-soled sneakers who stalk and slay Nazi sentries in a manner reminiscent of American Indian warriors.

Some persons believe such tactics could do much to shatter Italian morale and make the Italian command more reluctant to send troops outside the country.

Fresh Troops Reaching Libya

Alexandria, Egypt, Nov. 14 (AP).—"A large number of Axis troops still are getting across from Italy to Libya," Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean fleet, acknowledged today, but he added that most of these are reaching north Africa "with wet shirts."

He said British naval successes in the central Mediterranean had put a serious crimp in Nazi plans for an offensive in the western desert.

The smashing of Axis convoys, with the loss of thousands of Axis soldiers and large quantities of war supplies, is "certainly delaying, if not preventing," any Axis drive toward the Nile, the admiral declared.

The Germans and Italians are in sore need of fresh troops and equipment, he said, and despite the success of British warships, submarines and aircraft in blasting Libya-bound convoys, many Axis troops are reaching Africa to fill this need.

Commenting on Tangier dispatches that the bodies of 7000 Italians had been washed ashore in Tunisia, Sir Andrew said these apparently were seamen and soldiers from ships sunk along the Tunisian coast, and that the figure would not cover those lost in the central Mediterranean.

The loss of life probably has been heaviest, the admiral said, aboard troop transports, because escorting Italian warships should have saved most of the crews of supply ships. In recent weeks three large troop liners and four smaller transports have been sunk.

Questioned about reports that Adolf Hitler was bringing pressure on Premier Mussolini to send warships to the Black Sea to support the German drive in the Crimea, the commander said that he did not think Germany could assume real control of the Italian war fleet because of a lack of trained personnel.

Nevertheless, he said, large numbers of Nazi seamen now are attempting to sail supply ships to Libya.

Coal Parley Continues as Crisis Nears

disputable obligation of the President to see that this is done."

His request that they continue negotiations was acted on by the union leaders and the steel company representatives, Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation; Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Co., and Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

They met at Fairless' suite in the Wardman Park at 2 p. m., adjourning for the day at 5:30. On emerging, Lewis declined comment beyond saying that no conclusion had been reached and that another meeting was to be held today, time and place unspecified. He appeared to be in an amiable mood.

Fairless also seemed hopeful. He told newsmen that the meeting had "progressed very satisfactorily." He said negotiations would be resumed at 10:30 a. m. today.

Lewis Charges Intimidation

(Quoting fragments of the discussion behind closed hotel doors, the International News Service reported that Lewis told the steel leaders that if they failed to grant a union shop, Congress might pass legislation that later might be used against industry as well as labor. "Mr. Roosevelt is trying to put the military manacles on the United Mine Workers," Lewis was reported to have said.

("Mr. Roosevelt goes to Congress and yells 'Hip, hip, hurray;'" Lewis was quoted as saying. "I am not pleading for a handful of miners. I am asking for mutual confidence and understanding with the steel industry so that Congress will not enact legislation, which not only will be used against labor but industry as well.")

Fairless said that the President's remarks at the morning White House meeting were presented just as they were later given to reporters in an authorized release.

They called on the disputants, to resume conferences and "please talk over this problem of continuing coal production."

"If you can's agree today, please keep on conferring tomorrow and Sunday," the President said.

Requests Report Monday

He concluded, "And let me have some kind of a report on Monday next—a report of agreement, or at the least a report that you are making progress."

Since Lewis merely accepted the request to negotiate and no mention was made at the U. M. W. office of a change in the strike deadline, it was assumed that it still held for tonight. Since the mines do not work over the weekend, the stoppage of 53,000 miners would not be effective until Monday morning, thus giving the negotiators a period up to about tomorrow midnight to reach agreement, before actual cessation of normal production would begin.

Some observers believed that the emphasis the President gave to the determination of the Government never to force a closed shop would strengthen the steel companies in their refusal. But others pointed to the opening the President seemed to have left by remarking that the closed shop exits in many plants as a result of collective bargaining.

A suggestion of the President, that "you consider other methods relating to employment," was seen as a reference to some agreement, short of the union shop, that would satisfy the union aims. In the light of the thorough exploration and rejection of this possibility in previous hearings before the Mediation Board, it was not believed that Lewis would settle on any compromise.

form would serve only as the medium for House action, subject to amendments bringing it in line with recent developments. The measure has been approved by the Rules Committee and can be called up at any time, but advocates want leadership backing.

New Bill Prepared

The bill, in addition to "cooling off" period and other controls, gives legislative standing to the National Defense Mediation Board, left in doubtful status by walkout of C. I. O. members. Smith meanwhile is perfecting a bill of his own, invoking labor conciliation services during a 30-day waiting period, which can be offered in amendment or substitute form.

A wide range of more drastic proposals are pending, including extension of defense emergency curbs to all strikes, but House moderates will try to head off these when and it the bill reaches the floor.

If tentative plans are followed, Chairman Steagall will go before the Rules Committee Monday to ask right of way for his committee bill imposing price controls on commodities at the discretion of the administrator, setting up a three-way formula for farm price ceilings and regulating rents.

Wage Ceilings May Be Issue

His request may touch off another House labor controversy, as the bill omits wage ceilings. Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, will ask liberalization of the rule to permit substitution of his own "Baruch plan" bill fixing general price ceilings over wages, commissions and profits as well as commodities and rents.

In other quarters, a move to offer defense labor curbs as a rider to the price curb bill has been discussed, but House parliamentarians say it would not be germane to the bill.

Plans to call the price bill before the House on Tuesday, debate it two days, then adjourn over Thanksgiving for a vote the following week, will be vigorously opposed before the Rules Committee by Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, ranking minority member of the Banking Committee.

Wolcott will protest that a full turnout of House members will not be possible during Thanksgiving week and will ask that consideration of the price bill be delayed. The Michigan Republican threatened to keep a quorum on the floor by a series of points of order if debate is opened Tuesday.

Senate Watches Developments

Across the Capitol, Senators interested in immediate defense strike curbs were watching House developments. Should the House fail to act, an effort will be made to detour around the Senate Labor Committee and submit Senate labor legislation to anothre Senate unit.

A series of bills, including the Ball "cooling-off" measure and the Bridges resolution to "democratize" labor unions, are pending before a subcommittee of the Senate Labor Committee, but no hearings have been ordered. Chairman Thomas of the Senate Labor Committee said he still feels defense strikes can be met by administrative action.

Text of Statement

Roosevelt Warns Mines Must Run

Following is the text of the White House statement on the President's conference with coal mine union and steel company leaders:

The President authorizes the release of his statement to the conference at the White House between representatives of owners and employes in the coal mine situation.

The President first spoke of the seriousnes sof the international situation and all phases of the defense program in relationship to that situation.

He then said:

I have asked you gentlemen to come here this morning to give you certain facts covering the business of the Government of the United States operating under the Constitution. I will ask you when I have finished to withdraw, either to the Cabinet Room or some place of your own choice, in order to confer in a final effort to insure continued production of coal for the manufacture of steel.

In the first place, we all know that the United States is in a state of national emergency. The present and future defense of the United States and of this hemisphere is at stake. It is essential to national safety that we continue the defense production program without delay, and at top speed.

Defense Peril Cited

Coal for steel plants is a necessity because steel is an essential in the manufacture of munitions. Therefore, the cessation of production in the coal mine industry would create a further danger to American defense, because at this vital time it would slow up production of war materials.

I think that conclusion is unmistakable, and is approved by the overwhelming majority of Americans.

Because it is essential to national defense that the necessary coal production be continued and not stopped, it is, therefore, the indisputable obligation of the President to see that this is done.

In spite of what some people say, I seek always to be a Constitutional President.

If legislation becomes necessary toward this end, the Congress of the United States will without any question pass such legislation. And, as some of you know, the pressure on me to ask for legislation during the past couple of months, for one reason or another, has been not only constant, but it has been very heavy.

No Element of Threat

I am telling you this with absolutely no element of threat. To this conference I am stating a simple fact. I hope, therefore, that you will work out some method for the continued production of coal.

In regard to the collective bargaining, which I am asking you to resume at the end of this meeting, I have two suggestions for you to consider.

The first is that you continue negotiations, with the hope that you can arrive at a conclusion, and that if you do not arrive at a conclusion, you will submit the point, or points at issue to an arbiter, or arbiters, or anybody else with any other name, and that in the meantime coal production continue.

The second is that you consider other methods relating to employment. As I understand it, the wage question and the check-off are not involved in this at all.

Won't Force Closed Shop

I tell you, frankly, that the Government of the United States will not order, nor will Congress pass legislation ordering a so-called closed shop. It is true that by agreement between employers and employees in many plants of various industries the closed shop is now in operation. This is a result of the legal collective bargaining, and not of Government compulsion on employers or employes. It is also true that 95 per cent or more of the employes in these particular mines belong to the United Mine Workers Union.

The Government will never compel this 5 per cent to join the Union by a Government decree. That would be too much like the Hitler methods toward labor.

I must reiterate that because of the need for continuing and speeding up the defense needs of the United States, because they are so clearly involved, and because lack of coal for our steel plants would injure the defense of the Nation, it is a national necessity that the production of this coal be continued without delay.

And so I am asking you—I never threaten—I am asking you to please talk over this proolem of continuing coal production. If you can't agree today, please keep on conferring tomorrow and Sunday. I don't want any action that is precipitate. I want every chance given.

And let me have some kind of a report on Monday next—a report of agreement, or at the least a report that you are making progress.

Fight Expected in House Over Privilege Issue Raised by Fish

privileged to attend sessions without being prevented or called away by summonses.

(2) Set up a method of waiving the privilege of the House so as to prevent members using it to avoid the duty to give evidence.

This duty was stressed by the committee, which told the House that the constitutional privilege must not "unnecessarily interfere" with Congressmen performing their ordinary obligations as citizens.

The report set out the resolution under which the committee acted, quoted the text of the subpena which was served on Fish and continued:

"It is the judgment of your committee that the service of this summons does invade the rights and privileges of the House of Representatives.

Suggest They Be Waived

"We respectfully suggest, however, that in each case the House of Representatives may waive its privileges, attaching such conditions to its waiver as it may determine.

"The language in the summons, 'to testify on behalf of the United States, and not depart the court without leave of the court or district attorney,' removes any necessity to examine the question as to whether a summons merely to appear and testify is a violation of the privileges of the House of Representatives. This particular summons commands that Representative Hamilton Fish shall 'not depart the court without leave of the court or district attorney,' regardless of his legislative duties as a member of the House.

"It is recognized that this privilege of the House of Representatives referred to is a valuable privilege insuringe the opportunity (immunity) of its members against outside interference with their attendance upon the discharge of their constitutional duties.

"At the same time it is appreciated that there is attached to that privilege the very high duty and responsibility on the part of the House of Representatives to see to it that the privilege is so cotrolled in its exercise that it not unnecessarily interferes with the discharge of the obligations and responsibilities of the members of the House as citizens to give testimony before the inquisitorial agencies of Government as to facts within their possession."

Although the committee members joined in this report, at least two indicated that they would have more to say on the subject when the matter comes up in the House Monday.

Representative Estes Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee, indicated that he believed the committee did not go far enough in its suggestion that the House waive its privilege so that the grand jurors may have the Fish testimony. Representative Kefauver plans either to submit a concurring report or to present his views on the floor.

Have No Personal Privilege

The committee members generally agreed that Congressmen have no personal privilege against a grand jury subpena but that the privilege belongs to the House. Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, said he would file an additional opinion contending that if a grand jury or district attorney should hold a member unduly long the House could force his release either by sending its own sergeant at arms to effect it or resort to habeas corpus proceedings.

"Personally and frankly," Celler said, "I believe it is the duty of the gentleman from New York to testify. It would be barbarous if Congress refused to allow one of its members to testify, particularly if that member had, for example, important information that is necessary to acquit or convict. . . ."

Celler recalled that in a case involving the late Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, Justice Brandeis had held that there was no immunity from subpena, but that immunity was limited to arrest.

Applying that decision to Fish's case, he said, "the gentleman from New York has no immunity from service of process. He has no personal immunity from such process."

Was Waived Frequently

Celler said the House frequently in the past had waived its privileges and authorized attendance of a member at court or grand jury. Moreover, he added, "it usually puts the matter of testifying up to the member himself. It is within a member's own conscience whether he should testify. The responsibility is his. He should not be permitted to hide behind the excuse that the House refuses to permit him to testify."

While the matter of his privilege was being settled, Fish was on his way to Monroe, N. C., for two weeks active duty as a colonel in the First Army, now holding maneuvers. He first said he could not be subpenaed while in military service, later declared he had been misunderstood and had stayed away from the grand jury because the House told him to.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., called Fish's other secretary, Walter L. Reynolds, for renewed questioning yesterday afternoon.

Besides being Fish's secretary, Reynolds was treasurer of the National Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars, which Fish formed in 1939 with himself as chairman. The vice chairman was former Representative John O'Connor, now lawyer both for Fish and for George Hill, 45, Fish's second secretary, who was indicted several weeks ago on two charges of perjury.

Also called as a witness yesterday was the writer, who testified about 45 minutes.

Sparrow Forces Army Plane Down

Salinas, Calif., Nov. 14 (INS).—An "enemy" sparrow brought down one of Uncle Sam's big Army observation planes today.

The sparrow flew through the windshield of a plane piloted by Lieut. J. D. Beckelman, of Fort Worth, Tex., forcing him to make a crash landing on a highway. Beckelman suffered shock. The plane was badly damaged.

Senator Bone Leaves Walter Reed

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, who has been in Walter Reed Hospital for three months recuperating from a hip injury suffered two years ago, returned yesterday to his apartment in the Woodley Park Towers.

His aides said the Senator would not try to return to his office at once as he was under physicians' orders to remain as quiet as possible for a while.

Langer Profits Linked to Bond Sales to State

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The financial fortunes of a Governor of North Dakota rose simultaneously with the growth of profits to a Minneapolis brokerage house dealing in bonds in the State, the Senate Elections Committee was shown yesterday.

Counsel for North Dakota citizens seeking to remove him from the Senate confronted former Gov. William Langer with a packet of canceled checks and columns of figures in an attempt to show that the money he received from an associate of the brokerage house bore a rather constant percentage relationship to the company's profits from bond sales to the State.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, committee chairman, last night decided to request attorneys to call back to the witness chair the brokerage associate, Gregory Brunk, Des Moines (Iowa) lawyer, who last week admitted paying Langer $56,800 in a "sight unseen" land purchase.

Hatch said he wanted Brunk to "explain the checks," three of which were burned at the edges where the dates would normally appear.

Langer is accused of being unfit to sit in the Senate by reason of conduct "involving moral turpitude" while for 20 years lawyer and periodic office holder in North Dakota.

Among the charges against him is the allegation that while he was Governor in 1937-38 the V. W. Brewer brokerage firm made nearly $200,000 by buying county bonds at a discount and selling them at par or better to State agencies.

Faces 20 Other Charges

For five grueling days, Langer has sat in the committee's witness chair defending himself against this and 20 other charges. Opposing counsel waited until the very last of its cross-examination to make one more attempt to link him with profits of the Brewer Co.

"The only explanation I have," Langer declared shortly before he was excused as a witness, "is that I had nothing to do with the counties in North Dakota. I challenge any lawyer to find one county commissioner that Bill Langer ever went to about these bonds.

"All I can say is that Mr. Brunk bought that land from me and he paid me for it and it is worth every cent he paid."

Committee-hired appraisers have testified that the land has a net value of $3700. Langer has insisted, however, that the land is worth much more and that one good crop from it will return to Brunk his purchase price.

The figures presented to the committee by Col. O. R. McGuire, member of counsel for petitioners against Langer, listed in parallel columns the Brewer profits from each bond transaction and the sums paid Langer by the Realty Holding Co., controlled by Brunk.

In April and May, 1937, the figures showed, Langer received from Brunk checks totaling $4500. This sum, said McGuire, is 28 per cent of the brokerage profits for the same period. In June, the payments from Brunk totaled $8000, a figure that also has been found to be 28 per cent of Brewer earnings.

The brokerage profits and Langer's check were similarly compared for periods throughout the year. Only once is the percentage relationship shown to be below 23 per cent. Then it was 12 per cent and, McGuire said, in the very next month one of the State agencies declined to do business with Brewer.

For the next profit period shown by McGuire's figures, however, the relationship between Langer checks and bond deal earnings is figured at 34 per cent.

During the year, Langer cashed $30,300 worth of realty company checks. This, said McGuire, is approximately 25 per cent of bond-deal profits of $121,699.

In 1938, McGuire asserted, Langer received from Brunk $28,500. In the same year, the brokerage company made $70,916 in county bond transactions and $103,300 in deals in State bonds. McGuire told the committee that total payments made to Langer during the year could be figured at approximately 25 per cent of the county bond profits and 10 per cent of profits from State bonds.

Under the prodding of former Senator Edward Burke, chief of petitioners' counsel, Langer disclosed that although he accepted $25,000 for Mexican land stock, the certificates have been stolen. He said he kept the certificates in his desk for a "long, long time," but that they disappeared when his office was searched by the "gentlemen" he suspects Ickes sent out to investigate him.

Banks Doubted Its Value

Langer denied assertions that the stock is worthless, but admitted that when he was in financial straits in 1934 he made no attempt to borrow money on it because the banks considered it a poor asset.

The petitioners have attempted to show a connection between sale of the stock to Thomas Sullivan, Chicago attorney, and reduction in State taxes paid by the Great Northern Railway, which retained the lawyer while Langer was Governor.

Langer denied the connection and when pressed by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, for an explanation of the transaction, Langer said he believes Sullivan "likes me very much."

He knows "absolutely nothing," Langer declared, about a charge in the committee record that one of the jurors voting for Langer's acquittal in a criminal conspiracy trial was handed, several years later, a commission check made out to a road-machinery salesman. The check allegedly was given the juror by Frank Vogel, former manager of the Bank of North Dakota.

"I'll say now that if Mr. Vogel paid Reich (the juror) that was his business. I will also say that any time I can do anything for Mr. Reich I'll do it. I feel very grateful to Mr. Reich."

5 Children Die As Home Burns

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 14 (AP).—Five children died in their blazing home today while their widowed mother, Mrs. Frances Perrine, was across the street caring for an invalid neighbor.

The dead were Elmer, 9; Francis, 8; Richard, 4; Michael, 3, and Donald, five and a half months old. Four older children were not at home.

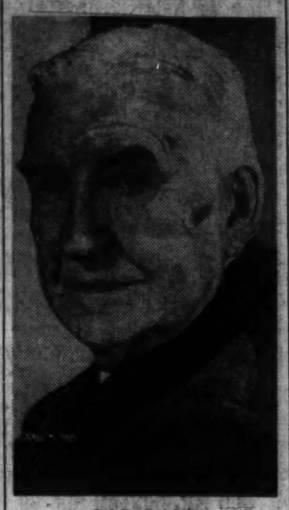
Bob Davis Scours Globe For News



BOB DAVIS
"The Whole Earth Is Your Local Story"

"The whole world is your assignment. My only instructions are that you see everything and write about it in your own vein. For every day you spend around the office you'll be docked. To you in the future, this whole earth is a local story."

Bob Davis, on assignment, flashed a brisk walking cane and a feather from the jungle cock at "the world in bewilderment" here yesterday—and was off for South America.

Newspaperman since 1887, discoverer of O. Henry, author and traveler in every country of the world under the assignment the New York Sun gave him in January, 1926, Davis said yesterday that the most impressive thing everywhere he has been is "bewilderment."

He pulls the small bright jungle-cock feather a notch higher in his hat when the confusion grows too thick, the bewilderment too confounded, and does his 1000 or more words every day, and a poem, if moved sufficiently.

Recalls Olden D. C.

He hadn't been in Washington for 40 years. So he fell into reminiscence over its then "classic placidity" and the manner of mallard duck one could eat at the Dower House that was somewhere in the suburbs—"the best thing then in Washington—where the elite assembled, the crowned heads came and laid their crowns on the mantelpiece."

Davis was reporting here around 1900 for the New York Morning Journal, one of many reporters who chased a politician for interviews he didn't want to give. Hanging onto the evading politician's coattails, Davis followed him once into an elevator in the Shoreham Hotel. The elevator broke down suspending both of them for some duration between the second and third floors but the politician's total information was advice to Davis to find some better employment.

Works For Munsey

Eventually he did, going into magazine work for Frank A. Munsey in May of 1903. He discovered O. Henry as a writer that year, and was first to accept manuscripts from Mary Roberts Rinehart, Fannie Hurst, Dorothy Canfield, Louis Joseph Vance, Sam Hellman, George Jean Nathan, Zane Grey, Arthur Somers Roche and half a dozen others now well known.

When Munsey died, William T. Dewart, the chief executor, told Davis to carry out his intention of world wandering, saying, "and don't stop until you've seen all there is of the globe, You have spent all your life finding authors, now find yourself. The whole earth is your local story."

Davis tells all of that in a pamphlet carrying his picture taken by a prizefighter in India. He writes a column for The Sun and travel books. He was the last evacuee from Paris the day war was declared.

"Everywhere I go is the same air of bewilderment. And here in Washington I see the most prosperous and unfortunate city in the world. It is beautiful and everybody is making money and is bewildered, too. Everyone's thoughts are for things of future destruction."

He talked as he left for South America, fingering the jungle-cock feather, weaving the past, the present and the future together in his talk into the timelessness he personifies.

Kurusu Arrives in San Francisco, Asserts Japan Clings to Hope of Peace in Pacific

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, No. 14.—A first-ranking diplomat of Japan, speeding toward momentous talks in Washington, descended from fog-shrouded skies today with a message that Japan still saw hope of peace in the war-fearful Pacific.

Dapper, graying Saburo Kurusu wouldn't say whether he was carrying specific proposals for amity from his Government, but commented in typical American that "I hope to break through the line and make a touchdown."

Realizes Difficulty

Kurusu arrived from Honolulu on the California Clipper, fog-bound two hours over San Francisco Bay before the landing.

"If I didn't have a hope (for peace), why do you think I came such a long way?" Kurusu asked smilingly while parrying specific questions of newsmen.

"I came to offer my all-out assistance to my colleague, Ambassador Nomura, in Washington. As a diplomat with an important mission, I am not in a position to say much. All the talking must be done in Washington. . . . I fully realize the difficulty of my task."

Kurusu said there was no foundation to reports that he would replace Nomura.

Later, as he boarded a plane for Los Angeles en route to New York and Washington, Kurusu commented:

"There are many people who, for their own advantage, want to bring our two countries into war. But we must look at things from our own point of view. We have our own responsibilities to our own people first, and then to the world. So whatever comes to pass, we should look out for our own good."

It shouldn't be necessary, he added, to have to search for reasons for peace in the Pacific, "but the Japanese and the American people should take peace for granted."

May Hinge on Talks

Persons in high authority have expressed the opinion that the course of peace or war with Japan rested on Kurusu's forthcoming conversations. There was indication in Japan that fully as much importance was being attached there to his mission.

The special envoy boarded a clipper a week ago at Hongkong, was delayed two days by engine trouble at midway island, and reached Honolulu Wednesday night.

One of his flight companions was William Keswick, Secretary to Alfred Duff Cooper, coordinator of Britain's defense program in the Far East.

Nippon Taps War Chest as Crisis Nears

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Nov 14.—Japanese dug deeply today into her reserves of men and money for war on the eve of a special session of Parliament marking one of her sharpest crises in modern times.

The cabinet approved for submission tomorrow at the opening of the special session an extraordinary war fund of 3,800,000,000 yen (nominally $874,000,000) and a general account appropriation of 510,000,000 yen ($117,300,000).

The War Office announced a drastic revision of conscription regulations, rendering scores of thousands of hitherto exempt men liable to early summons to the colors.

Men of the last 10 military classes, 20 to 30 years old, who had been exempted because of physical condition, will be called for reexamination and possible induction.

Certain reserve officers and noncommissioned officers also were made more readily available for duty, incuding officers up to 51 and noncoms to 41.

Legislation is forecast to step up preparations for air-raid defense.

A factor in the crisis is the dispute between Japan and Russia over the sinking of the Japanese liner Kehi Maru in the Sea of Japan on November 5, attributed by Japanese to collision with a mine broken away from the Vladivostok fields.

Informed sources reported Russia had rejected all major Japanese claims. Japanese accounts have put the total of dead and missing from the ship at 126.

Cold Postpones Roosevelt Trip To Warm Springs

President Roosevelt yesterday told his press conference that he has postponed for several days his annual Thanksgiving trip to Warm Springs, Ga. He had originally planned to leave tonight.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was staying here because his head cold had not yet cleared up and because there were a lot of things happening in Washington. He added that he still hopes to get to Warm Springs by Thanksgiving Day.

The delay will permit Mr. Roosevelt to sign here the neutrality revision bill when it comes from Capitol Hill Monday. It will give him, also, more time in which to talk with Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy arriving today, if such a talk is decided on.

Administration Plans to Merge Housing Bodies

The Administration is studying proposals for consolidating defense housing activities, now scattered among several Federal agencies, under a single organization, President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt called defense housing a terribly complex problem and said one of the chief difficulties was in deciding between permanent and temporary housing for various communities.

The United States Housing Authority should continue as the permanent housing agency, he said, while defense or emergency housing activities ought to be brought under more unified control.

He did not indicate whether this unification would bring defense housing under the general supervision of the USHA, as suggested by Nathan Straus, USHA administrator, in testimony Wednesday before a House subcommittee.

Foreman Praises Setup

Meanwhile the present defense housing setup was praised as "the best possible" by Clark Foreman, administrator of the division of defense housing of the Federal Works Agency, who appeared yesterday before the same subcommittee of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

His statement came in reply to Straus that the present organization under the leadership of FWA Administrator John Carmody would be more effective if shifted to the command of USHA.

Straus' declarations before the subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative Downs (Democrat), of Connecticut, overshadowed the House group's intended study of decentralization of Government offices.

Praises His Boss

"I have no inclination to argue with Mr. Straus," Foreman declared yesterday. "I think Mr. Carmody has done an excellent job of public housing. Congress turned the job over to one person, and that one person was Mr. Carmody.

"He was given the power to use other agencies, and he did: The USHA and the Division of Defense Housing and the Public Buildings Administration."

Under questioning from subcommittee members he replied, "The program definitely has been carried out as cheaply and effectively as is possible."

By reason of his experience and on the basis of his achievements Carmody, and the separate agencies under him, are the best qualified to carry out the job, said Foreman.

Commissioner Thomas H. MacDonald of the Public Roads Administration told the subcommittee that his organization stands in little need of decentralization since its work is largely carried out by State highway grounds.

WPA Forces Out

The WPA is working on a decentralized basis through its State administrations, Deputy Commissioner F. H. Dryden declared. Only 8 per cent of the total WPA personnel is now located here, he said, pointing out that the roll of its employes recently was reduced from 1567 to 1251.

J. K. Madigan, executive officer of the PWA, testified that the organization's rolls have been reduced to 122 and that it is winding up its tasks with this fiscal year. One of its chief jobs is the microfilming of its files to increase filing space for other agencies, he said.

None Is Injured In Strongest Temblor Since 1933

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Nov. 14.—Damage estimated at a million dollars resulted just after midnight today from an earthquake centering in suburban Torrance and Gardena. It was the heaviest since the shock of 1933, which cost 130 lives, but no deaths or injuries resulted.

In Torrance, industrial community of about 10,000 southwest of Lost Angeles, property damage was placed at one million dollars or more.

Walls of half a hundred business buildings were thrown down, hundreds of show windows were shattered and chimneys and fireplaces toppled. Reinforced concrete buildings erected since 1933 appeared undamaged.

Trade schools in Torrance were district was broken, and only one store was open for business today.

Frank R. McGregor, of the OPM Priorities Division, said needs of the quake-stricken area would be placed on an "immediate list" for reconstruction materials.

Gardena's loss was estimated at "many thousands of dollars." Several building were badly damaged.

Trade schools in Torrance were closed when cracks appeared in the walls of one. A survey of all school structures in both cities was ordered.

The rolling east-to-west shock continued 18 or 20 seconds. It awakened residents of inland communities as far east as Glendale, Pasadena and Whittier and was felt heavily in Long Beach and other seacoast cities. A lighter quake, felt chiefly in the Torrance area, followed.

Long Beach, which bore the brunt of the 1933 quake, escaped with light loss.

A 2-foot crack appeared in the pavement on Firueroa Street near Gardena and highway guard rails buckled and snapped.

Three hundred residents of Torrance Pueblo, a Mexican community, were evacuated after leaking gasoline from two huge storage tanks ran into its streets.

Spread Gospel Of Socialism, Draftees Told

Minneapolis, Nov. 14 (AP).—A Government witness testified today in the trial of 28 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy that Vincent R. Dunne, one of the defendants, urged Socialist Workers Party members who were drafted to organize cliques in the Army, spread the party gospel and when the time came, take over the guns and arsenals and turn them on those in power.

The witness was Eugene J. Williams. Williams also testified that a General Drivers Union 544 defense guard was actually drilled in marching by Ray Rainbolt, another defendant, and the guard at one time considered purchase of crash helmets, not only for protection but for identification in case of pitched battles.

Attended Party Meetings

Williams told of attending a number of party meetings; said they always discussed the "same old stuff," but admitted that when Vincent Dunne talked "it was all too deep for me."

Earlier today evidence was introduced to show that the Socialist Workers Party had branches in 40 cities throughout the country, with Minneapolis as its stronghold.

The evidence came in the form of a newspaper, the Socialist Appeal, as of January 11, 1941. At that time the newspaper was carrying on a campaign to raise funds for the "Trotzky Memorial Fund."

Returns had come in from branches in 40 cities, scattered from Coast to Coast, but the headline read, "On Last Lap, Minneapolis Ahead."

Returns showed that the party in Minneapolis had contributed $1001, nosing out New York by $1.

Writers' Group Raps Federal Censorship

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Nov. 14.—Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, today "deplored the tendency of governmental agencies . . . to censor at the source information of extreme importance but not of secret military or naval value which the American people are fully entitled to receive through normal newspaper and radio channels."

The resolution unanimously adopted in convention here cited the War and Navy departments in particular.

Although not named in the resolution, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Harry Hopkins and Admiral Harry Yarnell were mentioned repeatedly in discussion preceding vote on the resolution.

The resolution said in part:

". . . There have been many instances in recent months in which officials of certain Government departments have directed the censorship of information fully known to residents of certain sections of the country and most certainly to foreign agents operating in this country and

". . . There have been several instances in the last few weeks where at least one of these same Government departmental heads or high departmental spokesmen have released withheld information under his own signature in national magazines in which he purported to disclose for the first time secret information which all of the press and radio obviously were entitled to relay to the American public."

Farmers and Youth to Bear Brunt of Billion-Dollar Cut

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday recommended a billion dollar minimum "economy program, with nondefense savings in agricultural, public works and youth aid projects.

Morgenthau laid his plan before the new Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures, headed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Byrd said his committee will start work on Treasury and Budget Bureau spending data, covering a one to two billion dollar saving range, next Tuesday. He predicted a preliminary committee report some time next month.

The Treasury Secretary's recommendations flourished the pruning knife over a wide field of outlays popular with Congressmen, ranging from CCC and NYA to reclamation and farm grants.

Drastic Farm Cuts

In agricultural appropriations he recommended "drastic cuts" without marking specific items.

"Although Governmental aid was necessary in order to bring the farmer's net income from three and one-quarter billion dollars in 1932 up to eight and one-half billion dollas or more in 1941, certainly after having reached this goal there does not appear to be any reason to continue spending at the same time," he said.

"This is especially important when the money we are using for this purpose is so badly needed for armaments and lend-lease aid. The farmer is getting his share of the total expenditures made by the Government, as the increase in his net income indicates. In addition there are substantial benefits that will accrue to the farmer from the lend-lease program . . ."

Morgenthau said the regular activities of the CCC and the NYA must conflict with the more important defense program "and should be eliminated or drastically reduced."

He suggested that vocational activities of the CCC, NYA and Office of Education might be consolidated in a new Bureau of Defense Training, integrating in one comprehensive training program vocational activities related to defense.

Reduce Road Aid

Other fields in which Morgenthau suggested cuts:

Public roads. Proposed that Congress rescind the 130 million dollars highway authorization for the fiscal year 1942. He said State and local authorities should be requested to defer undertaking new projects, even though allotments have been made, and some major projects under way can be curtailed or suspended.

Reclamation projects. Suggested such work be reexamined in the light of the defense program, and where possible be delayed existing or postpone proposed projects.

River and harbor work and flood control. Work of this character which can be delayed should be prohibited and funds canceled, he said, when unnecessary for definite defense purposes.

Farm items not reflected in the budget. He proposed that activities under the Farm Security Administration, the Farm Tenant Act, Rural Electrification Administration and Commodity Credit Corporation be reexamined on a basis of defense needs. He said he did not refer to the bulk of activities under the Farm Security Administration, help for the undernourished and aid for sharecroppers and farm tenants still needing economic rehabilitation.

The Treasury chief said all of his recommendations would have these four advantages:

Reduce nondefense expenditures.

Release man power needed for defense plants.

Increase materials and equipment which can be devoted to defense efforts.

13-Year-Old Boy Shot Hunting, Seriously Hurt

A 13-year-old boy was seriously wounded late yesterday when shot by a playmate while hunting rabbits on Eastern Avenue near the District line.

The victim, Richard Leedon, of 6501 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was in serious condition at Takoma Park Sanitarium with a bullet from a .22 caliber rifle lodged in his spine. The bullet pierced his arm and lung.

According to stories told police, young Leedon and two other youthful companions had been hunting rabbits near the District line. Police, piecing together the story, said Leedon playfully shot at one of his chums but missed. The playmate returned the fire, police said, the bullet striking Leedon.

The two boys were being questioned at Sixth Precinct Station by Headquarters Detective Sergt. Herbert Wannamaker. All three boys attend Paul Junior High School.

RAF Bombs Plane Plant in Naples

Cairo, Nov. 14 (AP).—Bombs were dropped on an airplane factory in a British air raid on the Italian west coast port of Naples Tuesday night, an R. A. F. communique said today.

Heavy explosions also were reported in a building believed to have been a power station. Pilots said large fires were started in freight yards and along railway lines through the city.

Cries of Boy, 3, Save Brother, Sister in Fire

"Come see, Mommie . . . Fire!"

Three-year-old Ernest Jumalon was playing in the living room at his home yesterday when flames licked up the wall. His childish cry to his mother, who was in another room, saved his baby brother and sister from possible death.

Mrs. Grace Jumalon, 23, was doing the family wash in the bathroom of their 3-room flat on the top floor of a 4-story apartment house at 48 H Street Northeast, when Ernest ran to her shouting.

She found the living room in flames and the fire creeping toward the crib in which Daniel Jumalon, 7 months old, was sleeping. Flames already were licking at one of his blankets, which hung almost to the floor.

Mrs. Jumalon snatched up the baby and her daughter, Shirley 2, and ran from the apartment, leading the bewildered Ernest by the hand. The young mother shouted to other residents of the 22-unit building. A dozen other children were carried from the building by their parents.

Mrs. Jumalon said she believed the fire started in defective wiring leading to either a radio or a lamp. The blaze completely burned out the apartment and spread to the third-floors rooms of Mrs. Edna Hatfield.

When firemen arrived, the flames already had eaten through the ceiling of the top-floor apartment and spread through an air space under the roof. A second alarm was turned in immediately, bringing additional hook and ladder trucks.

Mrs. Jewell Sol, another fourth-floor resident, found the stairway blocked by smoke and flames and climbed to safety down an outside fire escape. Samuel Fareles vacated the building by the same method.

No official estimate of the damage was announced by the Fire Department, though it was said it would run close to $10,000. Mrs. Jumalon said all her possessions were destroyed.

Second Polar Cub Claimed by Death

Cincinnati, Nov. 14 (AP).—Death took the second of two polar bear cubs today, 48 hours after their birth in Cincinnati's zoo. Aurora, their mother, had disowned them and both were placed in private homes on a special bottle-fed diet of goat milk. The first cub died last night.

2 Air Warden Rallies Call For Volunteers

Washington is the "No. 1 target" for enemy aircraft, Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of Civilian Defense here, declared last night, and for that reason "it is no time to fool around" in organizing an efficient trained Air Raid Warden Service for the District.

The Colonel spoke at a rally in Woodrow Wilson High School as part of the observance of Civilian Defense Week. A similar gathering was held in the Dunbar High School and persons attending both were urged to join the Air Raid Warden Service.

Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, a guest speaker at the Wilson High School meeting, praised the courage of the English women for the part they were taking in defending their homeland. He recently returned from a visit to that country. "I am hopeful," he declared, "that Americans will be sufficiently aroused, sufficiently conscious of the dangers here, to make the smaller sacrifices now that will prevent greater dangers later."

Earlier in the day Jack Dempsey and other sports favorites contributed their part to the success of civilian defense week by stressing the value of physical fitness in the program. They spoke at the two schools, where the Office of Civilian Defense has arranged exhibits.

Today Washington will make the first test of protective volunteer services set up through the District Defense Council—and also survey the citizenry's reaction to an air raid.

The "bombs" will start bursting at 7:30 p. m. tonight at the Monument Grounds. Until yesterday, it was hoped that 2-pound magnesium bombs could be dropped from planes via parachutes. This idea was discarded when it was decided some of them might not land according to instruction and the test of civilian onlookers might be made unnecessarily severe.

With the War Department's cooperation, the demonstration will be lifelike enough to satisfy everyone. Fire department volunteers and specialists trained at Edgewood Arsenal will exhibit bomb and firefighting tactics in a replica of a street scene.

If fewer than 200 air-raid wardens are in the section reserved for them, the audience can surmise something has gone wrong in the "shakedown" test of our defense communications worked out by Capt. Herbert A. Friede.

Exactly at noon, Capt. Friede will hand 15 girls copies of orders he has written for each deputy air-raid warden in the city's 53 defense areas. Via telephone the deputies will be told to assemble members of his unit in his sector. How the deputies get the word around is their communications problem.

Sometime between 2 p. m. and 5 p. m., however, several hundred volunteers must report and be counted. Written reports from the deputies must be in the hands of Col. Lemuel Bolles, before the 7:30 meeting. They can be brought, wired or "sent by carrier pigeon."

Meanwhile yesterday six local civilian defense unit chiefs officially took office at ceremonies tendered by Commissioner John Russell Young, local defense coordinator. The oaths were administered in Young's office by Geoffrey Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners.

Sworn in were: Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, chief of fire fighting service; Maj. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police service; Battalion Chief Clement Murphy, chief of the air raid warden service; P. Y. K. Howat, chief of the public works service; C. Melvin Sharpe, chief of utilities and Herbert A. Fredue, chief of communications.

Young lauded the men for their "public spirit" and warned they would have a "man's size job" ahead of them. The Department of Justice announced yesterday a six-day civilian defense training course by the FBI will be given Washington police officers during the week of November 24.

A demonstration of incendiary bombs was given last night at Woodrow Wilson High School following the defense rally under the direction of Chief Murphy. Also speaking on the program there was Aubrey Williams, national director of the NYA; Mrs. May Thompson Evans, of the Consumer Division, OPA, and Miss Anne Boardman, of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Mild Weather Forecast Today, Rain Tomorrow

The weather man has good news for football fans. That very enjoyable mild weather is due to continue today, with "considerable cloudiness" to accompany it.

The forecast is the same for tomorrow, with "occasional showers likely."

Yesterday's high here was 70, low 31.

The land of sunshine to the south, Florida, is getting a heavy dose of rain, with 5.61 inches reported in 24 hours at Daytona Beach.

Middle Atlantic States are experiencing weather 15 to 20 degrees warmer than normal, with a high of 78 reported in central Virginia.

It Was Just a Dinner Date, Says Lana

CAME THE DAWN, SHE CHANGED HER MIND AGAIN—"As soon as we get a few details settled we are going to try it again," said Artie Shaw, orchestra leader, as he sat beside his former wife, Lana Turner. "Yes," confirmed the radiant screen star, "Artie's right, we're going to try it again." That was Thursday night in a New York night club. Yesterday Miss Turner said it was all bosh, that she was merely having dinner with Shaw. The couple eloped from Hollywood in February, 1940, only to be divorced shortly afterward

Budapest String Quartet Plays Concert for Friends of Music

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress tenders a concert to the Friends of Music on Friday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Artists: The Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Mischa Schneider) and Milton Katims, viola. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 130, with the Grand Fugue, Op. 133 (Beethoven), Quintet in C major, K. V. 515 (Mozart).

Coolidge Auditorium housed last evening the Friends of Music in the Library of Congress as guests of the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation at a concert by the Budapest String Quartet, that sterling organization which has been so continuously active here during recent months as to seem a permanent asset of the city. In weekly broadcasts and on other occasions they have kept the Stradivari instruments of the Whitehall collection in glowing vitality. Their program last night was devoted to two masterpieces, Beethoven's B flat major quartet with the grand fugue and Mozart's C major quintet, and both were performed with superior eloquence.

BROWN

Emile Faguet, the discerning French critic of literature, once declared that a great writer is a contemporary of the future. This truth becomes even more apparent when applied to a great composer, for music has always been more prophetic an art than literature. Both Mozart and Beethoven composed some music which passed beyond the comprehension of most listeners who heard it fresh from their pens, and it has become gradually intelligible to succeeding generations.

It was only the most astute of Beethoven's contemporaries who understood his B flat major quartet, which had the unusual form of six movements, of which the grand fugue was originally the last. In the design of the work, the six movements do not have sequential relations of meaning, but each presents a different aspect of the germinal idea leading to the fugue. The slow introduction to the first movement contains a veiled statement of the fugal subject like a half-seen glimpse of the apotheosis.

The opening allegro has the characteristic impetuosity of Beethoven—flashing phrases, sudden fortissimos. The darting presto that follows has a hushed darkness of mystery preceding the dawn of the wondrously wrought andante. The gayety of the dance movement in German bourgeois style prepares by the method of contrast for the great song of the cavatina, which was one of Beethoven's supreme inspirations.

Mozart's C major quintet is one of the works written while he was emotionally disturbed by his father's illness and death. Its general mood is gently sorrowful, but the sorrow does not have the tinge of tragedy, for Mozart had already reached the conviction that the life of the spirit knows no death.

51 Rail Lines Face Strike December 7

By the United Press

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Chiefs of the "Big Five" Brotherhoods of Operating Railway Trainmen today announced that 51 carriers would be struck at 6 a. m. December 7 in the first day of a three-day shutdown program.

The major roads to be struck the first 24 hours include the Santa Fe, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the New York Central and subsidiaries, the Pennsylvania and the Southern Pacific.

Fifty lines were ordered struck December 8, and 62 on December 9, or 163 carriers in all.

Among the lines to be shut down at 6 a. m., December 8, are the Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern, the Missouri Pacific, the Gulf Coast Lines embracing 15 roads, and the Illinois Central.

On December 9, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Milwaukee, Seaboard Airline, St. Louis & San Francisco, and the Union Pacific will go down.

The instructions were issued by five men representing 500 general chairmen of the "Big Five"—locomotive engineers, firemen, switchmen, conductors and trainmen—to 10,000 local chairmen who are to make the orders effective on schedule.

The strike would tie up United States mail, the order said, because "there is no difference between a mail train and any other train so far as your legal right to strike is concerned."

Truckers' Strike Averted

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Union officials and truck line operators tonight reached an agreement averting a threatened strike of nearly 300,000 A. F. L. truck drivers in 11 Midwestern States.

Bloodshed Feared

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 14.—Grover C. Kreglow, president of the Columbus Aircraft Independent Vertical Union, wrote President Roosevelt today there may be bloodshed at the local Curtiss-Wright airplane plant if another union sets up a picket line.

He asked the President to investigate C. I. O. union organization plans there.

The United Automobile Workers Union (CIO) is contesting with the Independent Union for the right to represent 3200 employes of the plant where powerful dive bombers for the Navy are being built.

"Rumors have been circulated in the plant that the CIO is about to pull out a key department (18) on strike in an effort to close the plant and gain the bargaining rights with the management," Kreglow wrote the President.

Callahan to Probe Barring of Police At Navy Building

Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, police executive officer, yesterday said he intended "to look into" reports that patrolmen were refused admittance to the Navy Department Building Thursday night when they responded to an emergency call.

Called to the Navy Department by an alarm of fire, Third Precinct patrolmen were blocked at the front door by building guards.

"You can't come in unless you've got passes," the guards were quoted. Not having the passes—only their badges—the policemen turned away unable to learn what, if anything, was going on inside that needed attention.

It later developed that a fight was in progress in the cafeteria and that an excited spectator had pulled a fire alarm.

Inspector Callahan said it does not make a great deal of difference whether his men are allowed in the building or not but he thought "a definite understanding should be had in the event of a serious crime on the premises."

The Navy Department denied knowledge of the incident.

Man Who Burgled 20 Houses Gets 10-Year Sentence

Pleading guilty to a near-record of 20 housebreakings, a 21-year-old Arlington (Va.) man was sentenced yesterday to ten years in the State Penitentiary.

The burglar, Chester Gesling, of 2107 North Twentieth Street, was given a ten-year sentence on each of the counts by Judge Walter T. McCarthy in Arlington County Circuit Court, the setences to run concurrently.

Gesling was arrested last August by Arlington Detectives Hugh Jones and John Sanders and Policemen James Scott, Douglas Topley, William Fawer and John Wise.

Subsequently he was taken on a tour of the county and pointed out houses he had robbed in a six-week period.

Rites Held for Mother Of Comdr. Tomlinson

Kansas City, Nov. 14 (AP).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Medora Gosnell Tomlinson, 72, mother of Commander W. Gosnell Tomlinson of the Naval Air Service. She died Wednesday.

Mrs. Tomlinson lived in Washington, D. C., for several years while her son was on duty there.

Arthritis Relief

Joint Is Freed By Removal Of Kneecap

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Nov. 14.—Complete relief of arthritis of the knee can often be accomplished by removal of the kneecap, the Southern Medical Association was told yesterday.

The kneecap is usually considered something to fall on or kneel on, Dr. Frank L. Fort and Dr. Paul H. Martin, of Jacksonville, Fla., declared, but actually it is not as important as it seems.

Many people get along much better without a kneecap, they said, because in some cases of arthritis it is an irritation and a hindrance to normal functioning of the leg.

An injured or diseased kneecap affects the muscles and tendons nearby and the sandpaper-like rubbing makes it impossible to move the leg or walk on it. So, instead of putting the leg in a plaster cast for an indefinite period, they have taken out the kneecap entirely, retied the muscles and tendons and put their patients back on their feet in three weeks or less.

Dr. Fort declared that he had seen one person born without kneecaps who had "perfectly normal function of the knee joints." In another case a football coach who had one kneecap removed declared his operated leg was better than the other in running about the field.

The operation is a simple one, the Jacksonville physicians declared, and is sometimes performed under local anesthesia, but is not done if the person has a local infection of the joint or is too old for any good results to be expected.

Dr. Fort added that arthritis of the leg resulting from irritation between the kneecap and leg muscles and nerves can often be relieved.

"After removal of the kneecap these people may have some decrease in the power of the leg muscles but they can use the knee, without pain, in a normal manner," he declared.

Defense Grip Will Tighten, Batt Warns

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 14.—Only when the full impact of the defense program on the national economy is felt will the American people realize the sacrifices they must make, Materials Chief William L. Batt, of the Office of Production Management, declared today.

The effect of the United States defense effort has not yet been fully felt, Batt said in an informal talk before the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Automobile Association.

Commenting on his recent trip to Russia, Batt predicted that Moscow would not fall this winter and that Russia would continue to fight. He declared that she was not thinking of making a separate peace with Germany.

President Sends Assurance

Earlier in the day the association received President Roosevelt's assurance that the automobile "is today an important utility of the home, office and factory, as recognized in all restrictions necessary for defense."

A. A. A. President Thomas P. Henry read a letter from the President at the opening session of the convention. Mr. Roosevelt said in part that "in times like the present there must be readjustments. But we must not surrender the benefits of our mobility and our system of highways which make it possible."

One of the current problems, the President wrote, "it to assure the full and equitable use of our transportation facilities. In this field the private automobile has an important role."

See Mileage Doubled

President Paul G. Hoffman of the Studebaker Corporation predicted in an address that the country's total annual vehicular mileage would be doubled within the next 20 years if substantial progress was made in developing adequate road facilities.

Hoffman, also president of the automotive safety foundation, termed traffic congestion in cities the major hindrance to highway transportation, saying that "it's high time that city planners, housing authorities and highway planners get together with those four of the five changed their minds.

Death Penalty Hinted in D. C. Kidnap Case

The Government may ask the death penalty for Francis J. Mulvey, 23, and Albert Farmer, 22, facing trial next month for the alleged kidnaping of a Washington waitress, Justice James W. Morris said in District Court yesterday.

The pair escaped a death penalty last May when they were acquitted of charges that they had raped the girl. Defense Attorneys Robert W. McCullough and Andrew A. Lipscomb had questioned whether a second request for execution would not be placing the youths in double jeopardy.

The justice declared that the offenses can be considered separately. He added that in case of conviction, the defense might question whether the victim was harmed and seek mitigation of sentence.

He also stated, however, that if the prosecution introduced any evidence during the trial indicating the act of rape within the District of Columbia the defense could also present the fact of acquittal on that charge to the jury. Otherwise, he said, the acquittal could not be introduced as evidence.

Mulvey and Farmer were originally indicted for taking the girl against her will into nearby Maryland in September, 1940, robbing and criminally assaulting her. The latter charge was erased by the not guilty verdict.

Trial date for the two has been set for December 8. Assistant United States Attorneys Charles B. Murray and William Hitz are representing the Government.

Another 'Liberty Fleet' Ship to Be Launched

By the Associated Press

The Francis Scott Key, named for the man who gave the United States its National Anthem, will slide down the ways in Baltimore today after being christened by Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland.

The vessel is one of the "Liberty Fleet" of merchant ships under construction for the Maritime Commission. It was built at the Baltimore Fairfield Shipyards.

Government to Stay In Business, Batt Says

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 14.—Industrialist William L. Batt, chief of the materials division of the Office of Production Management, told the Nation's adversaries today that "Government in business is here to stay" and that the safety of the United States would be assured when business gets together with Government to do everything possible to end the war quickly.

Although business has been "allergic to the Government we couldn't run," he said, the sooner business realizes Government control will contribute and makes a constructive effort to influence the direction the movement will take the better off business will be.

Batt related his impressions of the recent trip to Britain and Russia and told his 600 listeners "we haven't realized the significance of our commitment to supply all materials they need to the nations resisting the Axis.

"We will all have to make sacrifices we haven't begun to make," he told the joint convention of the Association of National Advertisers and the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Paul B. West, president of the A. N. A. said at the conclusion of Batt's talk that the convention had assembled on a note of business as usual but was adjourning with the determinatin to join wholeheartedly in the defense effort.

Batt said the advertising profession had an opportunity and an obligation to ascertain and inform its clients what they could do for defense.

Before Price Administdator Leon Henderson addressed the convention yesterday, Batt went on, probably four of every five men at the convention considered him a "dangerous crackpot" but after hearing him those four of the five changed their minds.

Freight Cars, Amok, Pile Up In Thorofare

By the United Press

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 14.—Six runaway freight cars raced unchecked at 40 miles per hour through busy traffic intersections today before finally crashing through a bunker and piling up in the middle of a main Memphis thoroughfare.

Although the cars ran loose over a mile and a half stretch of track and crossed several streets—including Union Avenue, the city's main traffic artery—no one was injured.

The runaways struck a gasoline-filled tank car and carried it into the street with them where it burst into flames.

Funeralgoers Killed

Strasburg, Mo., Nov. 14 (AP)—Seven members of a funeral-bound family died today in a grade crossing collision. Their automobile was hit by a streamliner train. The dead are: Mr. and Mrs. Luther Mote; their children, Charles Joe 5, Donna Lee, 3, and Nancy Agnes, 15 months, Mote's sister, Mrs. Frank Cochran, 45, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Egbert, 23.

Nancy Ruth Mote, 15 months, suffered a skull fracture.

Peacemakers Killed

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 14 (AP).—Savage Indians of the Chavantes Tribe massacred at least seven members of an expedition sent to conquer them with gifts and kindness in the little-known interior of Goyaz State, officials of the Brazilian Indian Service said today.

The massacre occurred near Rio del Morles (River of the Dead).

The expedition, sent by the government in an effort to make peace with the Indians, carried no firearms.

The officials said the visitors were given poisoned fruit by the Indians, who then attacked and slaughtered them while they were ill.

Bullock Retrial Move Brings Jeopardy Plea

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday took under advisement in District Court the question of whether Willie Bullock, charged with the fatal shooting of a policeman in 1932, must face retrial for first-degree murder.

Bullock was convicted on that count in 1940, with the prosecution charging premeditated murder, and given a death sentence. Later the United States Court of Appeals held that the Government did not prove premeditation, and reduced the sentence to second-degree murder.

Last October he was reindicted for first-degree murder on the ground that he killed Policeman George W. Shinault while committing a felony, also legal basis for a first-degree verdict.

Shinault was shot while trying to stop Bullock from attacking his common-law wife with a pistol in front of 39 F Street Northwest.

Defense Counsel T. Emmett McKenzie yesterday asked the Court to order a jury trial on the question of whether Bullock could be placed in jeopardy of his life twice for the same offense by a new trial.

Asserting that "for two years this man has been sitting in the shadow of the electric chair," McKenzie argued that the Government would have to use the same evidence in the new trial that it did in the first.

Assistant United States Attorneys Charles B. Murray and Dennis McCarthy countered that there would be no double jeopardy, stating that the two indictments were for separate offenses, requiring different proof.

Floating Mine Found

Long Beach, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—A floating mine, encrusted with barnacles, was found in the Atlantic Ocean off Atlantic Beach recently, a Nassau County official said today.

It could not be ascertained to what country the mine belonged.

Last June the Army Coast Artillery mined a section of New York harbor northeast of Sandy Hook as part of Army maneuvers and practice in planting and sweeping mines.

Girls' Rooming Problem Again Grows Acute

Just as Washington was getting a "little ahead of the hounds" in its constant rooms-for-girls chase, along came word yesterday that the Office of Emergency Management is to have 9000 new employes during the next few months—and most of them girls.

The Washington Housing Association has 100 women volunteers out inspecting rooms for the District's Housing Registry. Now the number may be doubled.

Only that will not do too much good, it appeared yesterday, until the question of "What is a rooming house?" is answered another way by the zoning commission. The answer now is that when roomers number more than two, the house that shelters them is subject to being called a "boarding house." In several sections of the city, boarding houses are zoned out.

Another question that troubles housing leaders in the District is that there are approximately 9000 boarding houses in operation, strictly speaking, and only about 500 of them have licenses. Without licenses, they get very little inspection from fire and sanitary departments.

"Of course, one of the main stumbling blocks here is the $15 license fee. We have been urging a $5 fee," Mrs. Daisy Hoffman, executive secretary of the housing association, said. "In Baltimore, the boarding house license fee is only $2. In other cities, it is a sliding fee based on the number of roomers. Along with the licensing provision, definite standards should be set up and regular inspection provided."

Results of a sample housing survey made by the Work Projects Administration to show vacancies in dwellings of Washington and nearby areas showed the gross vacancy rate during the last two weeks of October to be 1.8 per cent.

Vacancy rates among Negro dwellings was much lower than that in the white areas, being less than 1 per cent, with most of the vacancies lacking some standard facility.

Thomas Given Temporary Rank Of Police Captain

A temporary rank of captain yesterday was conferred on Police Lieut. Walter H. Thomas by the Commissioners. He will replace Capt. Joseph W. Pearson, commander of the Sixth Precinct, who has applied for retirement.

In addition, the Commissioners granted a full rank of captain to Acting Captain Arthur C. Belt, of the Eighth Precinct. Sergt. Harry C. Blackman, of the First Precinct, was promoted to temporary lieutenant and Acting Lieut. Charles H. Warder, headquarters desk officer, was advanced to full lieutenant.

last February and is employed by the British Purchasing Commission. Her husband is in Long Beach, Calif. There are two other Leedom children, Lillian, 9, living with her mother, and David, 14, with his father.

Young Dorsey, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle F. Dorsey, well known in concert circles here, had loved guns and above all, loved to clean and polish them.

Down the hall from his room shortly before her son's death, Mrs. Dorsey sobbed over and over again, "I cautioned him about these guns, I cautioned him about them."

"I said only last night," Mrs. Dorsey wept, "I said, 'Earle, you've had target practice in the basement until you've made holes in the windows and I think it's dangerous.'

"I begged him not to fool around with the guns. But you know how it is. You can't take all privileges away from a 19-year-old boy. You know that."

Mrs. Dorsey is the operator of the Dorsey Concert Bureau and she said that plans had been made for him to carry on the business.

She was on the second floor of their home yesterday when the accident happened, she said. "I didn't even hear the shot," she said. "His father found him there on his face in the basement when he came in." A maid was also in the house at the time, police said.

Young Dorsey went to Central High School, his mother said, and later to Mount Pleasant School for Secretaries.

"MY FAITH LOOKS UP TO THEE"
REV. RAY PALMER

My faith looks up to Thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary, Savior divine;
Now hear me when I pray,
Take all my sin away,
O let me from this day be wholly Thine!

These lines of tender emotion were written by a young teacher in a ladies' school in New York. Kept in his pocketbook for many months. It was not until Dr. Lowell Mason, a friend, asked for a contribution to his hymnal that the hymn was printed.

Rites to Mark Anniversary Of Howard U.

Howard University, now the largest educational institution in the world for Negroes, was born out of a prayer meeting of the First Congregational Church, November 10, 1866, when the church was temporarily using the building of the Columbia Law School.

Tomorrow at 8 p. m. the seventy-fifth anniversary of that prayer service will be marked with joint ceremonies by both the university and the First Congregational Church. The Men's and Women's Glee Clubs and the choir of Howard University will join with the A Cappella Choir of First Church to furnish an elaborate musical program.

Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and a longtime officer of First Church, will speak on behalf of the church in tribute to the founders of the university and in appreciation of its growth. President Mordecai W. Johnson, of Howard University will speak on behalf of the university. The entire community is welcome.

The morning service at 11 o'clock in First Church will be given by Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, whose subject will be "Jesus' Sole Description of the Judgment."

Dr. Tippy to Preach At Mt. Pleasant Congregational

Dr. Worth Tippy, acting executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches will preach on "The Church and the City" tomorrow at 11 o'clock at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

DR. TIPPY

At 5:30 p. m. Dan Carney will lead the discussion for the High School Forum on the subject, "Looking Toward a Just and Durable Peace." William Bannister will lead the worship service.

The 20-40 Club will meet at 6:30 p. m. for supper, followed by worship and a discussion. Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, will speak on "Cooperation Between the Americas in Relation to Child Welfare." This will be the first of a series of discussions on the theme, "Looking Toward Better Relations with our South American Neighbors."

Churches Expect Thousands At Thanksgiving Services

ARCHBISHOP CURLEY

BISHOP FREEMAN

Thousands of local and nearby worshiper will assemble in houses of worship on Thursday to give Divine thanks for the privileges of living in a free land.

Washington's spiritual observance of Thanksgiving Day will be highlighted by community services, as well as many individual rites, in Protestant Churches, while the main Catholic observance will be the annual Pan-American mass at St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G Street Northwest, at 10:30 a. m.

Representatives of Latin-American republics and United States Government officials have been invited to attend the mass.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will address services on Thanksgiving Day at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral. Paul Callaway, organist-choirmaster, will conduct an appropriate program of music.

As the Rev. J. J. Queally, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration, announced plans for his parish's Thanksgiving service, he said in a special statement:

"Many, very many amongst us seem still to be incapable of realizing the national and spiritual gravity of the conflict going on. 'Give us this day our daily illusions' seems to be a widespread attitude."

Protestant congregations of the Petworth section will join in Thanksgiving services at 10 a. m. at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest.

Takoma Park area churches will hold united rites on Thanksgiving Day at 10:30 a. m. at Trinity Episcopal Church Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest.

Many churches are planning special "thanks" services for tomorrow, as well as Thanksgiving Day.

Among other religious services for Thanksgiving Day are the following:

10 a. m.—Wesley Methodist Church, Chevy Chase, joint rites of community's Protestant churches.

10 a. m.—Brookland Methodist Church, Fourteenth and Lawrence Streets Northeast, churches of Brookland-Woodbridge area sponsor joint services, with the Rev. Alvin Lamar Willis, rector of Our Saviour Episcopal Church, preaching.

10 a. m.—Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, First and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, Bloomingdale churches' joint services. Dr. George H. Bennett, pastor of Lincoln Road Methodist Church, speaker.

10:30 a. m.—East Washington Heights Baptist Church, Branch and Alabama Avenues Southeast, union services with Byland Methodist Church.

10:30 a. m.—Christ Episcopal Church, Thirty-first and O Streets Northwest, community services, with the Rev. C. B. Austin, pastor of West Washington Baptist Church, speaking.

10:30 a. m.—Third Christian Church, Sixth and H Streets Southwest, churches of community will attend combined services, with Army Chaplain Col. Walter Zimmerman preaching.

10:30 a. m.—St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Capitol Heights, churches of community will hold joint services, with the Rev. Maurice White, pastor of the First Congregational Church there, speaking.

10:30 a. m.—Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest, "thanks" services also will mark seventeenth anniversary of present building's dedication.

11 a. m.—National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, union rites of Calvary Baptist, Mount Vernon Place Methodist, First Congregational and the host church. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Church pastor, speaker.

11 a. m.—Universalist National Memorial Service, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest, union services of All Souls' Unitarian, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Cleveland Park and Mount Pleasant Congregational, Francis Asbury Methodist, Friends' Meeting and the host church.

Rescue Mission Head Will Talk to Youth Fellowship

Mr. T. R. Holmes, superintendent of the Northeast Rescue Mission, will address the Youth Fellowship of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Eleventh and H Streets, Northeast tomorrow at 7 p. m.

Mrs. Gould Wickey, wife of Dr. Wickey, executive secretary of the United Lutheran Church's board of education, will address the Luther League of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest, tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. It will be the last of a special series of discussions on youth problems.

Young people of Columbia Heights Christian Church will hold a "thanks" service tomorrow at 8 p. m., when the Rev. A. P. Wilson will speak on "The Pharisee and the Publican."

Mr. Francis W. McPeak, new director of the Federation of Churches' social welfare unit, will address the Youth Fellowship meeting tomorrow at 7 p. m. at Petworth Methodist Church.

A city-wide Lutheran youth rally is set for tomorrow at 4 p. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, with Dr. C. B. Foelsch, host church pastor, speaking. A tea and social hour will follow.

"Youth Night" will be observed tomorrow at night at Emory Methodist Church, beginning with a fellowship hour at 7 p. m. and buffet supper at 7 p. m., and attendance at church services at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Clark Main, pastor of Hyattsville Methodist Church, will speak.

The special Sunday evening adult programs at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will continue tomorrow, beginning with the social hour at 5:30 p. m., followed by courses and church attendance.

Congregational Church To Hear Maj. Kelly

Major Edward Kelly, new superintendent of Metropolitan Police, will speak tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. at Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, Tenth and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, on "Washington's Police Problem." It will be first of a series of special Sunday evening programs. Police from No. 9 Precinct will attend. The Eliot Junior High School Glee Club will sing.

Army Chapels To Go Under Chaplains' Unit

Ten new chapels at Fort Meade, Md., will be formally transferred to the Chaplains' Corps in colorful services tomorrow at 3 p. m.

The formal ceremonies will take place in the chapel that is under the care of Chaplain Clarence Herbert Reese, who back in 1914 was assistant rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church here. During that year Mr. Reese won a trip to the Holy Land in a contest conducted by The Washington Post.

The address will be delivered by the Rev. Carroll Moore, rector of St. Peter's Catholic Church in Baltimore, chaplain of the American Legion, Department of Maryland, and chaplain of the 313th Infantry Regiment in the first World War. He holds a Distinguished Service Cross.

Chaplain Reese, who has many local friends, went to Victoria, Tex., as rector of Trinity Church from 1914 to 1917, when he was made chaplain of the 360th Regiment. While in France he was chaplain of the Ninetieth Division, and was cited for bravery in action.

Senate Group To Get Court Bill Next Week

Favorable Senate District Committee action on the House-passed court merger bill is hoped for next week, following a conference on the measure between representatives of the District Bar Association and Renah F. Camalier, Committee municipal adviser.

While no date for the conference has yet been set, Camalier said last night that it was planned to make sure the bill is "in workable shape" before it is considered by the District Committee. The possibility of a domestic relations court will be discussed, he said.

The bill would consolidate the Municipal and Police Courts into a single tribunal and set up a Municipal Court of Appeals with three jurists. It is aimed at relieving the present congested condition of the local lower courts.

Other Measures Up

The Senate District Committee at the same time will consider the House-approved bill setting up a seven-member District Recreation Board, whose membership will include four private citizens, a District Commissioner, a member of the Board of Education and a representative of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

It is expected to act on proposed amendments which would make a Commissioner chairman of the board and a citizen, vice chairman. Another amendment would require all rules and regulations and members of the staff to be approved by the Commissioners.

Other measures to be taken up include those setting up aviation ground school education in District high schools; licensing requirements of out-of-town sightseeing buses entering the District and two bills increasing the power of the Board of Public Welfare to help dependent children.

Police Promotions Asked

A bill to raise four detectives of the Metropolitan Police Department to the rank and salary grade of captain, without taking Civil Service examinations, will be submitted to the House District Committee by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, next Wednesday.

The measure, which would amend the current fiscal year Appropriations Act, has been recommended by the police department and Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, Representative Schulte said.

The House District Committee also is scheduled to consider the measure sponsored by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, to reduce local employers' payroll taxes from 2.7 per cent to one-half of 1 per cent.

While Representative McGehee's subcommittee has not yet reported out the bill favorably, it is expected to do so with the recommendation that the unemployment compensation rates be raised from $18 for 19 weeks to $20 for 20 weeks.

The purpose of the McGehee bill is to reduce the 24-million-dollar surplus which the District Unemployment Compensation Board has accumulated during the past four years.

Nazis Use New Plane Carrying 8 Machine Guns

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Nov. 14.—Germany has brought a new model fighter plane into action against the R. A. F. over northern France, it was learned tonight.

The craft is described as a Fokker-Wulf monoplane with a radial engine of about 1320 horsepower. Its performance is believed to be about 370 miles an hour at 19,000 feet, with a ceiling of 40,000 feet.

British pilots say the craft appears to be more maneuverable than the Messerschmitt 109. It is said to carry eight machine guns, making it more formidable than the ME-109, which is equipped with one cannon and two machine guns.

Church Loyalty Week Near End

Tomorrow will mark the close of Church Loyalty Week at Petworth Baptist Church. Members who have not signed cooperation cards for the coming year will be given another opportunity.

The subject of the morning sermon by the Rev. James P. Rodgers, will be "Perpetual Thanksgiving." The male chorus will sing "We Gather Together" by Kremser, and the choir anthem will be "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem" by Maunder. "Loves Last Appeal" is the subject of the evening message, and the evening choir anthem will be "Come Ye Thankful People, Come," by Elvey.

Dr. Weaver to Speak

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District Baptist Convention, will occupy the pulpit of Fifth Baptist Church tomorrow morning. The Rev. J. Herrick Hall will preach at 8 p. m.

Shuler Lecture

The eighth week of the Shuler Bible lectures, at the Bible Auditorium on Eastern Avenue, at the end of the Georgia Avenue street car tracks, will be opened tomorrow night by an address on "The Seven Terrible Plagues of Revelation 16 Soon to Smite the Earth."

14 Parochial Schools Hope For Penny Milk

Fourteen of the Capital's parochial schools, all situated in sections heavily populated by families living on relief, private charity or extremely low incomes, appeared eligible yesterday for inclusion in the proposed one-cent milk program.

James E. O'Hearn, of the Catholic Charities staff, made the report to Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools and chairman of the city-wide committee which is endeavoring to obtain a penny half pint project for undernourished children.

The 14 schools, said O'Hearn, have an aggregate enrollment of about 5000, only a small proportion of whom receive free lunches distributed by the WPA central kitchen. None receive milk at the morning recess.

O'Hearn expressed the belief that the schools are eligible for penny half pints under the rules of Surplus Marketing Administration.

An application in their behalf will be made when Haycock, O'Hearn and other members of the special milk committee confer with SMA officials. There were indications that the conference would be held early next week, though the Federal bureau has not yet answered a letter requesting the meeting.

Deferred Draft Registrants Face New Call To Service, Gen. Hershey Declares

America's speeding national defense may shortly force curtailing the number of persons granted Selective Service deferment for dependency or other reasons, Selective Service Director Hershey declared yesterday.

Gen. Hershey warned of the impending reduction in dependency deferments as District Selective Service headquarters announced that almost more than 40,000 Washington registrants have been deferred for their dependents.

Speaking in New York City before the annual conference of the Child Study Association of America, Gen. Hershey said: "The swift impact of events may quickly force a regearing of the machine, with the requirements of the armed forces paramount to all other needs.

"Deferments are temporary, and it may become necessary to withdraw many of them in the national interest."

A total of 40,605 out of 47,871 married registrants classified here have been deferred for dependency, according to a progress report of classification and induction through September 30, 1941, issued by local draft officials.

The report showed that 119,502 men were registered in the District under the Selective Service Act, including 39,073 Negroes. The highlights of the report were:

The total number of men for whom classification has been completed was 89,751. Of these men, 1549 were in Class I-A awaiting induction. Men placed in Class I-B, subject to limited military service, totaled 5823. Four conscientious objectors were in the I-B group and 12 objectors were awaiting induction.

Registrants who are members of other services totaled 7275. Men over the age limit amounting to 8909 have been deferred for this reason and 2274 were given occupational deferment.

Other figures were: Number in Class I-B, fit for limited military service, 1504; Class IV-A, men who have completed training in the service, 1562; those deferred because of official positions, 22; aliens, 521; ministers, 1331; conscientious objectors assigned to civilian camps, 16, and conscientious objectors deferred because of age, 10.

Number of men rejected as a result of physical examinations, 3737; number rejected because of obvious physical or mental disability, 1118, and those rejected for other reasons.

The report showed 53 men too young to register had volunteered, and that 30 under-age volunteers had been inducted. A total of 762 other volunteers have been inducted.

By the last of September 7412 men had reported at induction stations, 6106 had been accepted and 1306 rejected. Reasons for these rejections were given as: 526, fit for limited service only; 362, physically disqualified; 259, mentally disqualified, and 159 turned down for other reasons.

Police Open 'Lights-Out' Drive

A "turn off the lights" campaign which may save Washingtonians some $2000 annually was inaugurated in the Police Department yesterday by Inspector Milton D. Smith, supervisor of police equipment and property.

Smith, who controls all police precinct stations and pays the bills necessary to the operation of them—with taxpayers' money, of course—ordered the force to turn off all lights not necessary.

In addition, the order said, bulbs of 100 and 200 watts are being used where smaller ones would do as well.

"You will make a careful check," Smith instructed precinct commanders, "of all electric lights in your precinct, particularly in the basement, locker rooms, and garages to reduce the use of electric current in the interest of economy."

Smith said one precinct already has cut down its watts by 2806. He estimated a $12 saving per month on the basis of an 8-hour day at this rate, and a yearly total of $1906.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN!

In Sunday's Washington Post

Any woman might well envy Helen Hayes! She does so many things so well: stage actress, movie star, radio producer, mother and wife. Parade's picture story shows her superb acting before the microphone, some of the roles she played on Broadway, and intimate scenes from her home life.

Picture Stories in the new magazine section

"PARADE"

Every issue of Parade has several features especially for women. This Sunday there will be NINE of them—starting off with fascinating picture facts of the radio career of Helen Hayes.

Others include the 33-year farming adventure of John and Celia Monsees, ending in an auction sale . . . how clever Czech housewives outwit German secret police . . . Parade's baby (73-week-old Lois) in a squabble with her playmates . . . candid pictures of a famous movie actress in an exercise gym . . . a page on the new Western influence in riding clothes . . . and a story about a Los Angeles girl who teaches men to fly.

Yes, Parade has the modern viewpoint on women's interests—you'll find every issue entertaining and informative.

A COMPLETE NOVEL: "Candle In The Wind"

Back from the dead—to face the girl he loved and the man who left him to freeze in the Antarctic

Diane was so proud of her explorer husband until the man he had cowardly deserted in an Antarctic blizzard came home! Diane's contentment shattered like a house of cards. Should she leave her husband as he had abandoned another or stay by his side and help undo the cruel wrong?

Here's a powerfully dramatic story of human frailties. You will read it with unusual interest—complete in the illustrated novel section of Sunday's Post.

Ark Royal

The disaster of the Ark Royal seems an illustration of the principle enunciated somewhere in Herr Hitler's book that merely by repeating the same lie often enough you can make it come true. At intervals since the very beginning of the war the Germans and Italians have announced that this great aircraft carrier, pride of the Royal Navy, had been sent to the bottom. German propaganda usually credited the destruction of the vessel to bombing planes. And there is reason to believe that on one or more occasions she really was hit by bombs. Meanwhile, however, the Ark Royal continued to give the Nazis and Fascisti plenty of proof of her continued existence. It was one of her torpedo planes, for example, that gave the coup de grace to the Bismark.

It was not a bomb but a submarine—and probably an Italian submarine at that—which finished the Ark Royal. The communique stated merely that she had been hit by a torpedo from a submarine, and had sunk while in tow. Nothing was said to indicate where this happened, but there is reason to believe it was in the Mediterranean, and in the vicinity of her base at Gibraltar. The loss is bad news for the British. And yet the catastrophe of the Ark Royal, great as it is, is not quite of the same magnitude as those of the carriers Courageous and Glorious. The former was torpedoed in the Channel in the early months of the war, and the other was sent down by bombing planes off Narvik in the Norwegian operations. More than three-fifths of the officers and crew of the Courageous, and nearly all aboard the Glorious were lost; but the admiralty has announced that the casualties on the Ark Royal were "fortunately not heavy."

Finnish Talks

The continuing effort which is being made in the State Department to get Finland to quit the war with Russia is commendable. There is no occasion for abruptness. Our official relations with Finland always have been happy and cordial. Our people retain and always will retain the warmest feeling of friendship for the Finnish people. But a situation in which the acts of the Finns run athwart national interests which we feel are in peril leaves no room for sentiment other than the sentiment which counsels as much patience and persuasion as can be spared. We are committed to a partnership with the Russians in virtue of our common struggle against Nazi Germany. There can be no acquiescence, consequently, in any step that the Finns and their German allies might take, now that they are at the Murmansk railroad, in stopping or bombing the supplies which we are landing at Murmansk and Archangel for the munitioning of the fighting Russians. How the Finns can deal with the Germans in their midst is another problem, and one of extraordinary complexity.

Perhaps Finland has become a Nazi pawn. In the reply to Secretary Hull's peace proposal, the Helsinki government denies it, and affirms its independence. But that may be merely a way of speaking, as the French say. If the State Department is satisfied that Finland in fact has lost its freedom of action, then there is no point at present in treating Finland any differently from Nazi Germany. The test of Finland's independence could be put to a very simple test. If, as the Finns allege, they are fighting a war within a war, surely they could declare their war aims specifically and separate themselves from the Germans. This they have not done. Secretary Hull has asked only that they withdraw in principle to the 1939 frontier. Doubtless our Government would be satisfied if the Finns were to dig in at the positions in eastern Karelia, where they are now situated, and allow the uninterrupted conveyance of American and British materials to the Russians elsewhere.

Of course, the problem of winning even such an agreement is hedged around with extraordinary difficulty. Finland has a suspicion and hatred of Russia which has existed in her racial bones for centuries, and she will want guarantees which must be supplied by America and Britain, with Russian acquiescence. Doubtless a way to give pledges is now being explored in the State Department. If the Finns think that any such pledges are not substantial enough, let them ponder the alternatives. These are that if Germany were to win this war, the Finns would have saved themselves from the Slav only to find themselves the helots of the Teuton; and that if the anti-Hitler forces win, they will have sacrificed friendship and status in a libertarian world in which hitherto they have occupied a front-rank position.

Plea For Statesmanship

Yesterday's conference at the White House illustrates the infinite variety of methods that are at the disposal of a democratic government in working out controversial issues. Many previous efforts to settle the dispute between the captive coal mine operators and John L. Lewis had failed. Yet the President called them together and asked them once more to settle their differences without interrupting the production of coal necessary to keep the steel mills going. He did not give the disputing parties an ultimatum. But he left no doubt as to the imperative necessity of keeping the mines in operation.

The President's statement, moreover, clearly indicates a determination not to permit the defense program to be imperiled by a dispute over the closed shop. If there was any hope on the part of Mr. Lewis and his colleagues that the President would repudiate the sound decision of the National Defense Mediation Board, that hope has been dispelled. The President firmly indorsed the principle that the Government must not order any employer to institute the closed shop. To order non-union miners into the union by Government decree, even though they are only 5 per cent of the total, he said, "would be too much like the Hitler methods toward labor." Here is a commendably straightforward and clear-cut statement of policy that should dissuade any union from striking during the emergency to enforce a closed shop. A great deal of confusion and much loss of precious time in the manufacture of war supplies might have been avoided if this statement of principle had been made several months ago.

This statement means, of course, that the Administration will not permit the United Mine Workers to cripple the defense program to gain the closed shop. Either that concession will be granted by the operators in uncoerced collective bargaining or John L. Lewis will have to be satisfied with a lesser objective. For, along with the President's determination not to use force to bring about a closed shop, is a very strong indication that force will be used, if necessary, to keep vital defense industries operating. "It is a national necessity," the President said, "that the production of coal be continued without delay."

The inevitable consequences of another collapse in the negotiations are still veiled by long-suffering democratic methods, as they should be. Mr. Roosevelt has asked the disputants to consider the imperative demand for coal and settle their differences accordingly; in other words, he has asked for a show of industrial and labor statesmanship. But behind that request is the understanding that if this fails the Government must not.

Economy Plan

Secretary Morgenthau appeared yesterday before the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nondefense Expenditures with some very valuable suggestions as to how Government costs could be reduced without impairment of essential functions. His testimony deserves the widest publicity.

Mr. Morgenthau went much further than simply to show the money savings possible at a time when our budget is pledged to the hilt for defense. He pointed out that a reduction in outlays for nondefense construction projects would release men and materials for defense use. There is much "velvet" in these activities. Actually the current scale of nondefense spending for reclamation projects, rivers, harbors, and flood control exceeds the average annual outlays for the preceding ten years. Plainly, as Mr. Morgenthau suggested, work on projects that can be postponed or canceled without endangering the defense program should be prohibited. A request to State and local authorities to do likewise—even if allotments have been made—is called for by the urgent need for conservation. Such a proposal also implies the rescinding of the 1943 Federal highway authorization, and new roads required by defense activities could always be specifically authorized as defense projects.

Public competition for our scarce materials and our industrial man power is not limited, however, to such activities. Another group of agencies—the CCC, the NYA and the Office of Education—are expected to spend approximately half a billion dollars during the present fiscal year. All three agencies are, Mr. Morgenthau notes, primarily concerned with the vocational training of youth, with present emphasis on employment in defense occupations. Consequently he advocates elimination or drastic reduction of the regular activities of the CCC and the NYA, and consolidation of all vocational training activities in a new Bureau of Defense Training. Such organizational changes would be in the interest of efficiency. And they would undoubtedly make for much more economical administration of the training program. Certainly the improved employment opportunities have reduced the number of young people needing assistance. Thus there is need also for the review of the grants made by the Office of Education to States and to educational institutions which Mr. Morgenthau also recommends.

Nor did Secretary Morgenthau spare the farm program from his pitiless analysis. No proper idea of the breath-taking magnitude of this program can be gained merely by examining budget items. Not only are the regular budgetary items, estimated at 968 million dollars for the current fiscal year, higher than last year. As Mr. Morgenthau reminded the committee, agriculture is also benefited by various outlays not reflected in the annual budget. For example, loans for rural rehabilitation, farm tenancy, and electrification have recently been shifted from the regular budget to the RFC, which is authorized to advance large sums to the Secretary of Agriculture for the purpose of making loans. Then there is the Commodity Credit Corporation, the estimated disbursements of which during the current year are 187 million dollars in excess of receipts. There is room here for savings, surely. Mr. Morgenthau concludes that the time is at hand when we could afford to make drastic cuts in regular budgetary expenditures for agriculture. Certainly if the riotous farm program is not pruned now, with farm income nearly three times as large as it was ten years ago, the outlook for the economy program is, indeed, black.

Mr. Morgenthau has done an excellent job in uncovering the vulnerable features of the spending program. Congress will no longer be able to plead lack of expert guidance as an excuse for failure to cut Government costs.

General Huntziger

If the sudden death of Gen. Charles Huntziger changes in any way the political climate at Vichy, it can only change it for the worse. He was, certainly, no special friend of the British. But neither was he one of Hitler's puppets, nor a total collaborationist after the pattern of Darlan. It was Huntziger who, acting in what he conceived as his duty, signed the tragic armistice of June, 1940. But as minister of war in the Vichy government he did what he could to insist that the terms of the armistice be observed by the victor as well as by the vanquished. He did not succeed. And the last 17 months of his life were a sad and bitter, but not ignoble, climax to what had been on the whole a brilliant career.

Huntziger can scarcely be included among those French generals who are popularly accused of having betrayed France, either voluntarily or involuntarily. Half Breton, half Alsatian, Huntziger combined a good deal of Celtic intelligence with a great deal of Teutonic competence and determination. He was one Frenchman who recognized the "sit-down war" of 1939-40 for the fools' paradise it was. He apprehended all the disaster inherent in the "Maginot psychology" and sought vigorously to eradicate it. "Wars," he reminded his men, "are not won without battles. There are no victories without sacrifices." At a time when the prevalent opinion was that Hitler could be beaten by the simple method of doing nothing, Huntziger adopted as the motto of his Second Army the phrase, "We are capable of more!" ("Plus est en nous!").

Ironically, this motto was painted on the very plane in which Huntziger and 17 others crashed to death near Nimes on his return from a conference with General Weygand at Algiers. Nevertheless the motto had already justified itself. The French Second Army stood up to the invading Germans at every inch, counter-attacking again and again. They were still standing up when the final collapse came in the second week of June, 1940.

Community Chest

Once again Washington is being asked to care for its own by contributing to the Community Chest. There seems no reason to believe, in spite of the drain of charity for the victims of war-made trouble, that residents will not respond as generously as of old. After all, charity begins at home. The average citizen may regret the need of it, but he will not, we feel sure, hesitate to help meet the needs of the poor, the sick, the weak, and the helpless. In so doing he will emphasize a custom of democracy by showing a willing concern for the problems of others.

IN A TIME OF DROUTH

O pity, come, and conquer rage!
It burns me with consuming fire.
Disperse the faggots of my pride
And bid the choking breath suspire—
The taut frame slacken,
The embers blacken.

Deep I had dreamed were living springs
Are only pools, and they are dry.
I have no faith, I have no hope,
I have nor love nor charity—
But blazing anger through the night,
And driving hunger for the light.

O tenderness, let fall your dews
Upon this arid spirit! Come
Compassion, and these eyes suffuse
That are so bright and hard and numb.
O mercy, take me,
O love, come slake me!

Cleave the cold stone that is my heart
Until the living waters flow;
Though I should drown beneath the flood
Better it were than living so—
Let me not carry to the grave
The passionate hatred of the slave!

Isolationism

Now it is reported by the Associated Press that the Rev. Bernhard Lichtenberg, Dean of St. Hedwig's Catholic Cathedral in Berlin, is being held by the Gestapo for offering prayers for Jews. His sermons also had something to do with his arrest. He criticized the Nazis, in particular the Gestapo; but American isolationists do not even murmur against such onslaughts against personal liberties.

If a visitor from another sphere happened in on one of the meetings of the America First Committee, for instance, he would learn little or nothing of the terrible destruction being wrought throughout the world by Hitler and his gangsters. In fact, he might be led to suppose that Britain was our enemy and all our preparations for war were being directed against her, so much stress is laid upon what Britain did in the past . . . that she should not have done.

It is extraordinary that past wars that have been won and past injustices that have been cured should be the motif for a present war, while cruelty and oppression beyond anything ever before attempted are devouring the world like a greedy flame, yet are being practically ignored by these strange people who profess, nevertheless, a belief in liberty in all its ramifications.

Isolationism is, indeed, a good name, for these curious people are surely isolated from all sense of reason, justice, understanding or humanity.

Living Standard

The ordinary working man is the backbone of the defense program. He is anti-Fascist and it is not he who interrupts defense production; rather it is usually the company that has doubled and tripled its profits but ignores the fact that the retail food prices are 18 per cent higher than in 1939.

Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States, says "losses in production from sickness and accidents are 50 times greater than time lost in strikes and lockouts."

If we are truly interested in national defense and uninterrupted production we should ask that employers be compelled to meet the rise in living expenses with a raise in wages. To ignore the prices of food, clothing and rent and call for no-strike legislation is to force the American workers into a lower standard of living which will mean many times more man-hours lost. An alarming number of our people are already physically unfit for preventable reasons. Our Government is anxious to improve the health and well being of the American people. Let us not allow a few industrialists to reduce the standard of living nor interrupt the defense program by refusing to meet these just demands.

Pegler's Crusade For Freedom

I have been following Westbrook Pegler's articles and am impelled to give expression to some of the thoughts which they arouse, especially the one published on November 4, entitled "Hitler's Propaganda Hits America."

Pegler seems to be almost as much in advance of his time as the modern chemist is ahead of the man with the long robe, the pointed cap and the wand, who sought to transmute base metals into gold or to discover the elixir of life. Semmelweiss and Pasteur were neither understood nor commended by the throng and particularly by those whose special monopolies were threatened. The physical scientist accepts the conclusions proposed by all the discoverable premises and thus acquires additional premises for a further advance on solid ground. Hence the modern inventions which timid souls fear may eventually destroy us.

On the other hand, lawyers and politicians, both capitalistic and labor, choose ends to their immediate personal profit, call them conclusions and either distort or deny the existence of any premises, however vital, which do not fit into the pattern designed to give the illusion that their deductions are inescapable, irrefutable conclusions. Consequently, the results are utterly useless as antecedents for further advance. To be quite frank, this is not intellectual honesty as practiced by the scientist, who has opened up in his laboratory a new world for the benefit of man. It is to be wondered at that so-called political science continues to go in a vicious circle! Just imagine what would happen if the legislative-legal habit of ignoring or suppressing or twisting premises were attempted in a laboratory. Yet we wonder what is wrong with the art of government.

Those who damn Pegler, aside from downright crooks, are like the doctors who opposed Holmes and those who tried to destroy Semmelweiss and Pasteur. They fear his objectivity, because they argue backward from false conclusions. They have one-track minds, because through years they have been trained to win cases regardless of the facts or the general welfare. Take, for example, the inquisitorial investigations of many a Senate or House committee. As for elections, he who perpetrates the biggest swindle on the public is lauded as a clever politician. The lawyer who is the most successful in circumventing the law or in securing the acquittal of guilty criminals is held in the highest esteem by his colleagues and by the multitude. In reality, our standards are basicly but little different from those of the Dark Ages.

When Theodore Roosevelt braved the lightnings of the then all-powerful corporations who named every official from President to street sweeper, everyone thought he would surely perish; whereas, he led us to a new freedom. Now the labor czars are striving to get a strangle hold on the Government and people of this country. Another "Peter the Hermit" has arisen and many wonder at his immunity thus far from physical violence.

As between the highwaymen of Wall Street and those of Union Square, there is no essential difference, as far as the country is concerned. Each struggles for monopoly, for power over the lives and properties of their fellow citizens. Like Pegler, I see nothing to choose as between the several types of tyrants, be they of foreign or domestic origin. You and I will get the worst of it once our freedom has been forfeited.

Now that I have had my say about lawyers and politicians and Wall Street and professional unioneers, all of whom prey on the public (and many of them on their knees on Sundays), I venture to express the hope that supporters may not be wanting to Mr. Pegler in his well-nigh one-man crusade for freedom (for it is essentially that) and that the laboratory method of reasoning may become more widely practiced in dealing with national affairs, because otherwise—the deluge.

U. GRANT-SMITH.

Our War Policy

Roosevelt says in America there is no neutrality of thought. It seems to me that merely proves that he has his enormous hordes of bureaucrats he controls with the people's money, broadcasting British propaganda.

It seems to me a resistance should be worked up among American youths against being shipped 3000 miles from America to be used as British cannon fodder, shipped over there to live and die like rats in ditches as in the last war while millions of Britishers who should do their own fighting loll in luxury.

As long as the British can get Americans to do their dirty work they will. It seems there is enough to do here which should be cleaned up before Americans are shipped to be British slaves, incidentally, at American taxpayers' expense.

If Roosevelt would cease to be one of Churchill's office boys and be an American (chances are he was reelected on his promise to stay out of European wars), it seems he would chase those British propagandists infesting Americans with hatred against the Germans and into war fever out of America because, according to the Constitution, Americans have the right not to have their minds infested.

A defense second to none always was and will be the best policy. It is a sin to be offensive.

Radio Forum Comedy

The worst enemies of America are those of our own national household, and it does not better the matter that many of them are moved by nothing worse than vanity or the cacoethes loquendi in disturbing the country's welfare. I refer to the professional boy orators of various ages and intelligence quotients who daily, by performing on radio forums, give aid and comfort to our actual and potential enemies. At the least these foolish spellbinders convey the idea to an eagerly listening enemy that we are a nation of scatterbrains.

I do not question the patriotic purposes of our various radio organizations, nor would I suggest a political censorship of radio broadcasts, but I do not think it makes for national unity for the radio systems to donate their time to every publicity hound to exploit his personal venom or idiosyncrasies. It is one thing to suppress free speech, it is quite another thing to encourage foolish and disruptive utterances.

May I respectively suggest to our radio friends that some of the current forums are nothing better than very low comedy.

Official Apology

We of Detroit, believers in decency and respect for and consideration of the rights of others, feel abashed and humiliated over the abominable treatment accorded the cultured and gentlemanly Halifax. The barrage of not overly fresh eggs, tomatoes, and vile billingsgate hurled at Detroit's elderly and goodwill visitor is almost unprecedented in ambassadorial relations, a disgusting performance that has put an indelible blot on Detroit's escutcheon.

All civilized countries respect an Ambassador's freedom and inviolateness of person, but it remained for the city in which I have been a resident for 30 years to set a precedent for revolting incivilities that even the untutored Indian was never known to stoop to.

The least we of Detroit can do is by official public act to dispatch an apology to Lord and Lady Halifax (she, too, must feel the affront) for the execrable conduct of the anti-British element here.

The Post Impressionist

Chicken Chop Suey

"But, Mom, you're bound to win first prize with that recipe if they try it out."

"Er, maybe the judges won't be especially fond of chicken chop suey," I argued, never disdaining an alibi when it can be counted on to sustain even one of the props under the pedestal upon which Sonny has placed me.

"They've gotta like it when they taste it," he insisted. (Ten years old can be opinionated.)

So that was that! I realized what I had to live up to and began to pray. Sure enough the next morning's mail brought me the first-prize check for $10 and notice that my recipe would be printed in The Post's Friday morning edition signed by my initials, V. H. H. as I had requested. (Since the time I was summoned into Traffic Court for over-parking and chanced to read my name among the offenders in a newspaper that evening, the sight of my printed full name gives me a real start.)

Sonny was elated over my success. "Bully for you!" he shouted. Those Sunday afternoon broadcasts of the British children have had their effect. I prefer a good Western "Yippee!" He did do several authentic American somersaults the next moment when I opened another letter and read him my sister's invitation to come to Bethesda, Friday afternoon, for the weekend.

Sis must have guessed Perry was going to be on the road (my husband travels) anyway; her invitation couldn't have come at a better time. We had lived in Bethesda several years before we had moved to Virginia. I had belonged to some clubs there and could praise Heaven for a number of very good friends. Ditto for Sonny!

We made the trip in about two hours Friday afternoon and such was our anticipation for once the heavy Wisconsin Avenue traffic didn't worry us. Sis, red-faced and perspiry, darted from the kitchen door to greet us. "Viv, I've discovered a divine recipe for chicken chop suey," she gurgled. "Just wait 'til you taste it!"

"Oh, oh, did you get it outta The Post?" Sonny queried. In the brief pause I managed to kick him on the nearest shin.

"Why, yes," Sis answered. "Don't tell me you saw it and have already tried it?" she asked, turning to me.

"Heh, don't worry about that," Sonny interposed, hurriedly. "I was going to say, Mom gets a lotta her recipes outta The Post. When do we eat?"

Saturday morning was filled with telephone calls, the first five dating us up solidly until Monday afternoon, when we planned to return to Virginia. At noon we walked down the block to Marge's. You've guessed it. Her main dish was chicken chop suey. It was as good as Sis, but there was a difference. I began thinking up quips about personality being expressed in cooking, but nothing brilliant came of it because I was too apprehensive about Sonny's behavior. However, all he said was "Ummm, I could eat this all night and all day!"

As we neared Lucille's house that evening, I had a premonition. "Listen, dear," I said to Sonny, in a voice of supplication, "there's a possibility Lucille will have chop suey, too. Now be a man and remember your manners."

He saw the humor in the situation and both of us practically had the giggles by the time we reached the doorbell. "Mom, you're to blame for all this," he teased. He was just a little irritated the next morning, though, when Sis put a tablespoonful of leftover chop suey mixture in the center of each biscuit. "Did you say we were going to Marshall's for dinner today, Mom? Wonder what they'll have?" he mused, while I made warning eyes at him.

Myrna Marshall startled me and pricked my ego when she announced she had varied a chicken chop suey recipe she had obtained from The Post and had made a really succulent dish. Secretly I deplored the change and wished, while she was at it, she'd have disguised it completely for Sonny's sake. I braced myself for nothing less than a tantrum and decided, grimly, that he wouldn't hear one word of reproach from me. After all this was too much!

He was gingerly taking a very small helping when Myrna said, brightly, "Oh, take lots more, Sonny. There's reams of it. Enough for supper tonight."

His spoon stopped in mid-air. His face was a study. "Now!" I thought. But there was no outburst, just his quiet voice, "Really, Mrs. Marshall, people have fed us so well, I'm not hungry today. I 'spect you'll have chicken chop suey on up until Wednesday because mother and I are going to take you and Lucille and Marge and Auntie out to supper tonight."

I could already see the $10 prize nestling in some restaurant till and what a small prize it seemed in comparison to the gift of a diplomatic child!

Today And Tomorrow

In Regard To The Vote

A CLOSE VOTE on a great measure is no novelty in American history. As a matter of fact, because the Government is altogether free, the greatest decisions of the American people have almost always been taken after hard and prolonged debate, and as often as not by a small majority.

LIPPMANN

In the struggle to ratify the Constitution itself, the vote of the Pennsylvania convention was 46 to 23; of the Massachusetts it was 187 to 168; of the New Hampshire, 57 to 47; of the Virginia, 89 to 79; of the New York, 30 to 27; of the Rhode Island, 34 to 32. The North Carolina convention rejected the Constitution in August 1788 by a vote of 193 to 75 and did not ratify until November 1789. Thus in a majority of the original 13 States the decision was taken by what we now call a "photo-finish."

SO IT HAS been also on some of the greatest measures which Congress has dealt with. On the famous bill of 1790 for the assumption of State debts the vote of the first Congress was 34 to 28; the vote on the declaration of war in 1812 was 79 to 49; on the Missouri Compromise it was 90 to 87; on the Public Law Act of 1841 it was 117 to 108; on the annexation of Texas it was 120 to 98; on the Gold Standard Act of 1900 it was 190 to 150. The immense majority for a declaration of war in 1917—the vote was 373 to 50—came only when the German attack had become violent and only after two and a half years of intense debate in which Congress was even more divided and more isolationist than it has been since 1939.

Anyone, therefore, who interprets a division of opinion as inherent disunity in the Nation is not well versed in the American way of life. He has not understood that among free men agreement develops out of differing views and that almost never can there be uniformity of opinion at the beginning of a great undertaking.

THE EXACT PROPORTIONS of the vote in the House have no lasting significance. For it was evident to anyone who followed the debate and felt the atmosphere of Congress that few of the votes were cast on the technical issue itself. The House had already voted by a wide majority to arm ships, and therefore, to regard the Nazi navy as lawless and dangerous. After that the question of whether to send armed ships under escort to Britain as well as to Iceland was a very important question only because the isolationists, who have cried wolf on a dozen issues since 1939, decided to utter a particularly loud cry of wolf over this measure. Just why naval hostilities on the route to Iceland are still "peace" while naval hostilities on the route to England are "war" was something that Mr. Hamilton Fish never did explain.

The fact of the matter is that the House knew that we are engaged in hostilities with Nazi Germany, and that the vote on abolishing the combat zone was symbolic rather than substantial. On the symbolic vote a majority chose to present a strong front to the outside world; others felt the time had come to present a strong front at home, caring less for the moment about the impression abroad than about strengthening the American position at home. This was the position of Senator Byrd, and though fortunately Congress did not risk the consequences of defeating the neutrality repeal, the final result was an unmistakable victory for Senator Byrd.

THERE can be no doubt any longer that Congress is deeply aroused by the spectacle of the labor leaders who defy the Government, and that it will be a fatal mistake for the President not to invite Congress to express its will on the subject of labor disputes. The question has got beyond the point where the mere avoidance of a coal strike, where some kind of personal arrangement to avoid trouble, will satisfy or ought to satisfy Congress. With the American Navy in action, Congress has the right and the duty to declare a national policy on the duty of labor unions, as it has already done on the duty of property owners, in times like these.

The President should not carry upon his own shoulders the burden of relations between labor unions and the national defense. In the realm of foreign affairs and in the realm of the strategical command, the President must take the initiative and bear the responsibility of decision. But in the realm of the relations of Americans to one another, of labor unions to employers and to the Government, he should welcome rather than shrink from coordinate action by Congress.

PRECISELY because it is not easy to formulate a perfect industrial code for war conditions, the responsibility of making the experiments, indeed of making the more or less inevitable mistakes, should be shared by Congress. It is intolerable, for example, and Americans will not stand much more of it, that the chances of shutting down the steel industry should turn on the bitter personal feelings of Mr. Lewis toward the President. Congress should legislate, and when it has, Mr. Lewis will be dealing not with one man alone, Mr. Roosevelt, not even with the President of the United States alone, but with the Government of the United States.

If ever there was Congressional business this is it—to place the rights and duties of labor unions and labor leaders on a firm base of clearly declared principle. Congress has fixed the duty of corporations when their services are needed for defense. It has fixed the duty of the young men registered in the Selective Service Act. It should now fix the duty of Mr. Lewis so that there may be no doubt left in anyone's mind as to whether it is or it is not legitimate to interrupt the production of weapons for the defense of the United States. Congress wants to do this. Congress should be helped to do it, and to do it wisely.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 14.—One of the many morale problems in the American Army today is the resentment of the draftees against strikes in the defense industries, particularly in those cases where the workers on strike include young men deferred from the draft because they are needed in industry.

If the public had its way, all such deferred draftees would be inducted into the Army when they go on strike.

The public's attitude is revealed in a Nation-wide poll conducted by the Institute on the following issue:

"Should all workers in defense industries who have been deferred from the draft because they are defense workers, be drafted if they go on strike?"

Yes	76%
No	20
Undecided	4

The vote is an interesting indication of the public's present mood so far as labor unions are concerned. Its hostility to strikes in the defense industries is such that it is apparently not inclined to make distinctions between one strike or another on the merits of each case, but favors drastic action to curb all such stoppages.

In four separate national polls on the strike issue during recent months, the Institute has found majorities of from 72 to 76 per cent in favor of taking the extreme step of passing a law to forbid all strikes in defense work.

The primary objection to drafting defense strikers, in the minds of those voters opposed, is that "coercion does not solve labor problems."

A granite manufacturer in Barre, Vt., interviewed by Interviewer Mabel W. Mayforth, stated the viewpoint typical of those opposed when he said:

"There's no point in using the draft as a means of punishment. It would make a poor soldier out of a striker."

The chief arguments put forward by those who favor the idea of drafting strikers are that such strikers are "violating a trust" imposed on them when the Army allowed their deferment, and that it is unfair for workers to go on strike when the drafted men have had to make their patriotic sacrifice at a wage which begins at only $21 a month.

South American Defense

AT AN ENORMOUS SACRIFICE which few of them can afford today, the more important countries of South America are building up their fighting strengths. They remember incidents during the last World War which indicated a lack of respect for their defenses.

German submarines torpedoed four Brazilian steamers, three Argentine and one Peruvian passenger ships. More than once interned German ships managed to leave South American ports while the authorities remained helplessly looking on, with no ships on hand to stop them.

Territorial waters of two neutral countries were violated by sea engagements taking place in sight of land. Admiral von Spee's South Atlantic fleet fought the British off Falkland Islands, Argentine territory still claimed by Britain. The Dresden, a German cruiser, escaped from that memorable seabattle of Falkland Islands, managed to circumvert the southern tip of South America by navigating in Chilean waters and find refuge in Juan Fernandez Island, the famous Robinson Crusoe island and Chilean territory. Chile's protest against the flagrant violation of neutrality led a British transport and two cruisers to the spot. Right in the Bay of Cumberland the Dresden was sunk in March of 1915, with Chile still protesting. The British left the German survivors for Chilean authorities to intern in an island off Talcahuano, where these sailors remained throughout the war. Some of them liked it so much that they remained even after the war, building homes there.

Brazil is the possessor of the largest army in South America, followed by Argentine and Chile. The total number of officers and men of the A. B. C. is close to 190,000 in active service, but all three of these nations have compulsory military service and have hence an additional reserve of about 800,000 men.

AN INTERESTING step has been taken by the Mexican government through its department of education which might well be used throughout the Americas.

A government-printed booklet has been distributed throughout all educational centers for teachers to use in familiarizing students with the good-neighbor policy. The ideals of Mexico's doctrines are featured in simple, plain language for anyone to understand, and an excellent resume of the present-day Nazi ideology is presented in sharp contrast. The conclusions drawn are that the United States of Mexico cannot help but be 100 per cent with the United States of America and all other nations of the hemisphere in their foreign policy and that its cooperation is wholehearted.

FRENCH GUIANA, in northern South America, is today the forgotten land of the world!

It is claimed that the French authorities in charge of the penal colony, or what once was a penal colony, have lost complete interest in their charges because of lack of pay. The Vichy government is too busy with more important things than an isolated spot of land in tropical South America. They have allowed their neighbors, the Dutch and British colonies, to do the worrying for them by keeping a sharp eye out for fugitives who never had a chance to be returned to France before the war.

Of the three Guianas, undoubtedly the French colony is the most backward, and its reputation as a penal colony has not helped it. The French never have been proud of it and discourage in every way the landing of "sightseers" who with morbid curiosity have always made it a point to inspect and see the homes of the "free French," those who have been paroled but were compelled to remain in French Guiana. This unhappy lot, Frenchmen from Paris, Dieppe and every other part of France, are compelled to earn their few cents by picking up odd jobs, negotiate with the Bush Negroes for hardwood.

Devils Island, erroneously thought by many to be the penal colony itself, is only a tiny rocky island practically at sea level in which specially "hard cases" were relegated for a time. Visible from the mainland, this island together with two others nearby, is impossible to visit. Even planes are prohibited from flying over or near the penal group.

French Guiana is today certainly a place that is looking for an owner. An escaped French felon gained for himself the sympathies of the authorities of British Guiana by claiming that he wanted to get to Europe on time in order to bring personally M. Hitler to Devils Island!

BOLIVAR, the liberator of six American republics, rests in a shrine which undoubtedly is the most impressive chapel in the Americas. At the Pantheon, which once was a convent church, near Caracas, Venezuela, the Libertador sleeps in a massive bronze sarcophagus. The walls of the chapel are covered with tablets, tributes of the nations that owe their independence to that South American leader.

Bolivar was born in Caracas but, following the custom of the Spanish aristocracy living in the New World, he was sent to Europe to complete his education. Upon the outbreak of the war of independence, Bolivar offered his services to Gen. Miranda, a brilliant leader, against Spain. Miranda was compelled to surrender to the Spaniards, and Bolivar, not yet 30, took over command of the troops, fighting continuously for 13 years to defeat Spain in South America.

He died at the age of 47, having sacrificed his entire considerable personal fortune to free a good part of South America.

Women And War

By J. B. Priestley

In And Outside Of The Home

Another in a weekly series by the famous British novelist, essayist and playwright.

London (By Wireless).

ARE WOMEN ready to do their share in the British war effort? Some recent reports would suggest that they are not. We are told that a more determined drive must be made to bring girls into the war industries and the women's branches of the three services. And some newspapers here have lately given us accounts of the sudden rush of young women liable for service who have fled to the Isle of Man.

While I have no doubt that perhaps, at the most, a few score young women have lately sought refuge in the Isle of Man, I have equally no doubt that the newspaper accounts exaggerate the whole affair.

OUT of millions there are bound to be some shirkers. Moreover, it happens that to the Isle of Man have been sent—to live in greater peace and security than the rest of us can find—those men who were known to have Nazi sympathies, the remnants of Mosley's blackshirted organization. Those men have wives, sweethearts, sisters, and probably among the young women who have recently slipped over to the island are many of these girls and women who are opposed to our war effort. But their number is trifling.

But why has it been necessary to make a more determined drive to find more girls for the A. T. S. W. R. E. N. S., W. A. A. F. S. (territorial, naval and air women's auxiliaries) and the war factories? There are, in my view, two main answers to that question and neither of them discredits the women of Britain.

In the first place, I think, some of the earlier official recruiting drives for women suffered from faulty organization. There were appeals over the air to women, who often responded at once only to find that apparently they were not urgently required after all, and that no proper machinery for receiving and distributing them had been established. So, impatient or disgruntled, many girls and women returned home declaring that there was too much muddle and "messing about."

THE SECOND REASON is the more important. It comes from the fact that the female is the more responsible sex and so finds it harder to shed its domestic commitments. There is an old father or an invalid mother who cannot be left. Or there is a sister or brother who is not very strong and amounts to a responsibility. Or again, if a girl marries and has a child it may be difficult to make arrangements all at once for that child to be properly looked after.

A man can usually drop his domestic responsibilities simply because some woman can take them over. But when we come to the women themselves we are down to bedrock. Here there is no easy shifting of responsibility. It may take time to find some other and older woman who will shoulder the burden. And it is that problem, and not indifference to the war effort, which keeps so many women still at home.

DURING the last war, women and girls did jobs they had never done before and so often it was all startling and dramatic. Now we take all this for granted. We hardly notice how many jobs women are doing. Girls working the land, girls in the factories, girls working in railway stations or as conductors on buses, all pass almost unnoticed. Even girls in uniform excite no comment except from young men in uniform. Everywhere you see the neat khaki of the A. T. S. and the pleasant blue of the W. A. A. F. S. girls who work for the Royal Air Force as cooks, waitresses, typists, clerks, etc. Altogether, there are hundreds of thousands of them, but now we take them for granted.

It must be remembered, too, that girls and women left at home rarely are living the sort of life they lived before the war. There are probably evacuees to be cared for, gardens to be attended to (which means digging up a vegetable patch, not tying up rosebushes), fruit and vegetable preserves to be made, much sewing and knitting and, in addition, probably some kind of air-raid precaution work to be undertaken. The Women's Voluntary Service, which conducts evacuated children to their billets and does a hundred and one similar jobs, is now a gigantic organization covering the whole country.

The fact is, women are now complete partners in a war effort which would be impossible without their entire cooperation. This is not the kind of war in which women sit weeping at home, wondering miserably what is happening to their distant menfolk. No doubt they still do plenty of private weeping and wondering, being still women. But their active, courageous partnership, though it may mean extra physical strain, is of great psychological benefit to them. They are busy and useful, which is something all normal women like to be, and they know exactly why. It is their war too—and though some of them may still need to be told what to do and where to do it, they no longer need to be told why such stupendous national effort is necessary.

Portugal's Strategic Macao Oldest Chinese Treaty Port

A reminder that Portugal is among the European nations with territorial interests in war-shadowed China comes with the report that Japan has asked for joint administration of the port of Macao, about 40 miles southwest of British Hongkong.

"Macao has been a Portuguese possession for nearly 400 years," a bulletin from the National Geographic Society says. "Its settlement in 1557 represented the first European foot to be thrust in the long 'closed door' of China.

Overlooks Vital Sea Lanes

"Although its early commercial importance has declined as a result of the rise of Hongkong and other foreign-held ports, Macao still enjoys an exceedingly strategic position along the southeast coast of China.

"Situated on a peninsula extending into the mouth of the Canton River, it forms one of the points of a triangle which may be drawn on the map between Hongkong, Canton and Macao. It overlooks one of the busiest traffic lanes of the East, the northern entrance to the China Sea by way of the channel which separates Japanese Taiwan (Formosa) from the northernmost islands of the Philippines.

"When the Portuguese colony was young, both the Netherlands and England desired it and at late as 1935 news dispatches told of attempts by the Japanese government to purchase it.

"Portugal came into possession of Macao, which today comprises two additional neighboring islands, as a result of early trade with China and naval assistance rendered the Chinese authorities in their struggle against Canton River pirates. The Portuguese, however, paid an annual fee for the use of the colony until 1849, when they refused further payments.

"In 1887 a treaty between China and Portugal confirmed the permanent independent status of Macao, although the exact boundary is still subject to occasional dispute. A barrier gate raised across the neck of the Macao peninsula, long has been guarded by both Chinese and Portuguese soldiers.

East Meets West

"Macao (officially known as the 'City of the Name of God, Most Loyal of the Colonies') is an odd mixture of East and West. The 200,000 people who live within its less than a dozen square miles include Chinese, Hindus, Africans, Europeans and Eurasians. In 1936 there were an estimated 4,000 Portuguese. The colony has a reputation as a refuge for missionaries, merchants, and political dissenters during China's troubled times.

"Above the picturesque little harbor of Macao, in which ancient Chinese junks and modern steamers seem to jostle for room, rises a settlement whose architecture is reminiful of southern Europe. Its pastel shades of yellow, blue and pink slanting across the hillsides, once earned for it the title of a 'stranded Eastern rainbow.'

"Modern Macao, with its improved harbor works, normally makes its living by trade and fishing, manufacturing and gambling. Its dozen or so fan-tan houses have given it the rather grandiloquent name of the 'Monte Carlo of the Orient.' From its factories come such assorted products as cement and firecrackers, preserves and opium."

Keep 'Em Flying, But High, Urges State Director

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—A better slogan for all aviators in this national defense period—civilian, military and naval pilots—would be "keep 'em flying high," as well as "keep 'em flying," Capt. Allan C. Perkinson, State director of aviation, declared today in commenting on instances of low flying over populated areas.

Violations of low-flying regulations, Perkinson pointed out, come within the scope of all civil and local police, State police officers, civil aeronautics inspectors and the State division of aeronautics. He said that it is the duty of all named officials to see that such offenses are punished.

"Complaints on these violations," Perkinson stated, "are of very little value, unless eyewitnesses submit information as to the time, place and identification of planes charged with the offense. Marks on planes can easily be seen, even at 3,000 feet."

Minimum safe altitudes must be observed, the director warned all civilian fliers in Virginia, especially those pilots who have become affiliated with the Virginia civilian flying corps, air arm of the Virginia protective force.

Untouched Fields For Advertising Cited at Parley

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—American advertisers were advised today to use advertising to promote an expanding "dynamic economy" as the best answer to threats to the advertising industry.

James Webb Young, senior consultant of the J. Walter Thompson Co., advised the joint convention of the Association of National Advertisers and the American Association of Advertising Agencies to use the powerful weapon advertising has created for a real consumer education and for a renewal of faith in free enterprise.

Advertising has potentialities far beyond its present levels, he said, and should be used extensively by governments, political parties, labor unions, farm organizations, the National Association of Manufacturers, philanthropic foundations, churches and universities. He urged its use also for open propaganda in international relations, to wipe out "diseases of ignorance" and to do the nutritional job this country needs.

The crux of the advertisers' problem he summarized was "to bring about in this country a new faith in the possibilities of the dynamic economy . . . so strong that business will be ready to back it with the necessary capital investments."

Payroll Tax

Boss—You say you might take a job with us?

Applicant—I think so. What is the pay?

Boss—It's 50 minus.

Applicant—Minus what?

Boss—Minus what the Government doesn't take out of your envelope.

* * * *

Applicant—I'd have to get more money than that.

Boss—More money than what?

* * * *

Boss—Let's be practical. How much money do you want?

Applicant—Well, on my last job I got $35 if.

Boss—If what?

Applicant—If the Government didn't get there first. And I know right now where I can go to work on a salary of 60 provided.

Boss—Provided?

Applicant—Yes, provided not too much is extracted.

* * * *

Applicant—I'll take 58 E. U.

Boss—What's E. U. stand for?

Applicant—Envelope untouched!

* * * *

Boss—I can't do that. The best I can do is to put you on at a salary of 57 S. F. A. W. K.

Applicant—S. F. A. W. K.?

Boss—Yeah. That stands for So-Far-As-We-Know.

* * * *

Applicant—That means my salary is S. T. W. W. W., or Subject to Washington Weekly Whims. I can't run my house according to whims. I've got to know how much I am going to get each week.

Boss—You can solve that by buying groceries and paying rent on the Federal I. Y. H. A. L., or If-You-Have-Anything-Left plan.

* * * *

Applicant—No. You see, what I want is to know how I stand at the end of each week.

Boss—I have the same dream, mister. There's nothing in it.

Applicant—But ain't a man entitled to know from week to week how he stands financially?

Boss—Don't talk like a reactionary! Listen, this is my last proposition. I'll give you $57.50 S. T. R. and M.

Applicant—S. T. R. and M.?

Boss—Subject to Roosevelt and Morgenthau.

* * * *

Applicant—No, thanks. But I know a feller who might work for you. He's a beginner. What do you pay a beginner?

Boss—We pay $10 minus to begin with. At the end of a year if he makes good we advance him to $15 minus.

Applicant—That leaves him owing both you and the Government money.

Boss—Yes.

Applicant—I can see there's no future in working.

Boss—Nonsense. One of our best men here started with us on $1 a week and worked it up to a mere pittance.

Applicant—That's an exceptional case.

Boss—Not at all. Look at me. When I began here I worked for nothing. Now my salary has grown to such proportions that everything I get goes to the Government.

Applicant—In other words, you still get nothing.

Boss—Yes, but if I work hard I can double it.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

In Answer To An Editorial

THE INTERNATIONAL Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of the American Federation of Labor recently held its convention in St. Louis and, according to its own peculiar interpretation of the house cleaning resolution adopted with hesitant piety by the A. F. L. in Seattle, elected to international office three men with criminal records. The three are, in order of their ranks:

PEGLER

William A. Hogan, of Local 3 of New York, treasurer.

Michael J. (Umbrella Mike) Boyle, of Chicago, vice president.

Harry Van Arsdale, jr., business manager of Local 3, member of the executive council.

HOGAN was convicted of grand larceny, first degree, in New York, after trial, on June 30, 1922, and was sentenced to serve not less than one and one-half years nor more than three years in Sing Sing. He was commuted by Gov. Al Smith in July, 1923, two months before the expiration of his minimum term, as a hardship case. The indictment which arose from the Lockwood investigation of corrupt practices by unioneers and others in the building industry, charged that, as financial secretary and trustee of Local 3, Hogan stole $21,675. Notwithstanding his conviction on a charge of robbing his own union, Hogan was restored to office in Local 3 and raised to a position of even greater financial trust in the international union on the ground that his conviction was "a bum rap."

Boyle, who is a habitual vice president and notorious unioneer of the Chicago area, was convicted of extorting money from builders and served a term behind the bars, but was released on the plea of the late Sam Gompers, notwithstanding the remark of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals that he had been depicted as a highwayman, a betrayer of labor and a leech on commerce.

Van Arsdale was convicted of shooting two fellow unioneers in an intra-union fight in Local 3 on February 24, 1933. He was sentenced to serve from 6 to 12 years in Sing Sing. During the trial reference was made to Henry Godell, a member of the faction opposing Van Arsdale, and William Sorenson, one of the wounded men, said, on the witness stand, "He is dead; he was murdered right afterward."

GODELL had helped Sorenson to his feet after he was shot down. Godell undoubtedly was murdered, but the murder never was solved. He was waylaid and shot and the fact that he had been a witness to the original affray prompted the prosecutor to ask Sorenson about him.

Sorenson, in a statement, a short time after he was hit, said, "Van Arsdale pulled a gun. He fired at me. The first bullet hit me in the stomach. He fired another shot at me."

Van Arsdale's conviction was reversed on trial errors, no question of perjury being involved, and the indictment was dismissed, without retrial, on the recommendation of an assistant prosecutor on May 5, 1935, with the explanation that the two wounded men desired to withdraw their complaints because "the best interests of the union warrant that attitude."

These two men had received $15,000 from the union and the assistant prosecutor stated that they were not indicating their desire to withdraw the complaint "because of this consideration."

SINCE THEN, however, on April 9 of this year, Van Arsdale was convicted of rioting and he is now under sentence to a term of from one to two years in Sing Sing. A certificate of reasonable doubt has been granted and an appeal is pending.

During the trouble over the shooting in 1933, another member of the local, by name Adelbert Letscher, was sprayed in the face with acid after he had given testimony in a preliminary hearing, which preceded Van Arsdale's indictment. He, too, has since decided in favor of union solidarity under Van Arsdale's leadership and his name has since been recorded in the police files as Albert Litscher.

THE NOVEMBER 5 issue of the Electrical Union World, the official organ of Van Arsdale's ruling group, contains an editorial covering an entire page in which it is represented to the membership that these dispatches have twisted the facts, "greasing them with innuendoes, sneering and snickering about them, until a totally false impression is created."

The truth is that Van Arsdale himself has admitted to your correspondent that the facts as stated in this column are true. He remarked, however, that some of the boys in his organization disliked the manner in which the facts were presented.

The editorial itself might be accused of attempting to deceive the union members at their own expense and for the advantage of their union bosses, for it totally ignores most of the facts here presented, and wholly neglects to remind the members that three men with criminal records were elected to high office in their international union after the A. F. L. had been compelled to adopt its bashful resolution in favor of purification.

Farming Appeals To These Maryland Coeds

MILKING TIME—Jane Showacre and Elizabeth Magruder, agricultural students at the University of Maryland, lead a pair of pure-bred Holsteins into the dairy barn. The cows are milked by hand or by machine, depending on temperament

Coeds at the University of Maryland are learning to raise sheep, horses, cows, pigs and poultry—and they're good at it, according to Dean Harold F. Cotterman, of the College of Agriculture.

It used to be that women students went in for only the daintier subjects, such as botany, bacteriology and horticulture. Now they take up stock raising and farm management.

For example, Marie Weschler, of St. Mary's County, is studying animal husbandry and wants to breed horses—not race horses, but draft animals. Elizabeth A. Magruder, of Baltimore, is preparing for a career as a farm manager.

There are several women who are married and plan to manage farms for their husbands, who have Government jobs in Washington.

After graduation, Dean Cotterman said, girls from the agriculture college have little trouble in finding jobs. Hope Swann, of near Leonardtown, Md., a recent graduate, now is manager of the State prison farm for women at Bedford Hills, N. Y.

Others find jobs as research technicians in private businesses or with the Department of Agriculture. Some are in the poultry industry and with large commercial nurseries.

The college of agriculture has an enrollment of 26 women students, although a few years ago, Dean Cotterman said, it was almost unheard of for any but a man to study there.

New Trend in Student Art Seen in Exhibit Opening Tomorrow

By Bill Brinkley

There's a young fellow out at Eastern High School who can steam a baseball over the plate in a manner that would curl the edges of your cravat, then go home and from a block of stone fashion a Madonna to move your soul.

Or he can take a chunk of mahogany and carve a discus thrower in action; or an easel, paper and water colors and present you with a landscape.

Varsity Baseball Pitcher Kenneth Curles, 19 years old, who has blond hair textured like his name, typifies young artists now being bred in the city's schools. He is a product of a new tide that is knocking into the old ash can the idea that there is something sissy about a growing, husky boy who takes up art.

Art is life, it is being emphasized again and again to the students. The experiences of life, they are told, are the materials of art.

Parents of Washington school children are going to get plenty of proof of the identity of art and life tomorrow. Then at the biennial exhibition of pupils' work at the National Museum there will be a parents' openhouse, from 2:30 to 5:30 p. m.

Drop in on an art class, for example the one at Eastern High, and you get an idea of what is back of all this.

There's a broadchested lad intently knocking a hammer on a steel chisel poised on a 60-pound block of limestone. The chips fly. The lad, deeply absorbed in his work, takes no heed of them.

It was Gene La Mar's first sculpture assignment and he didn't have any more idea of what he would make out of a 60-pound stone block than he did of what the Emperor of Japan was thinking about yesterday noon.

But he began turning the matter over and out of his mind and hands and out of crude stone is now coming art in the form of a kneeling woman. And it's hard to get him away from his work.

Here is Douglas Chapman digging a steel straightedge into white pine and after three weeks now there is taking shape a scene the boy has often witnessed: a telephone lineman at work high on a pole. A truck roars below. The scene is detailed, right down to individual tools on the lineman's hips.

"We urge the students to take their ideas out of their own experiences," says Miss Ethel Brayer, who is art director for public schools here. "We know if they really get interested in something, they will want to create."

Thus on the walls of the museum and on tables will be the experiences of elementary, junior high and high school children—formed in paint, wood, clay, stone and other materials. There is the Washington Monument, Ellis Island, a football scrimmage, a canoe, a scene recollected from a Sunday afternoon stroll, a beautiful girl modeling.

For "the subject matter includes all of the things significant to human experience."

The students are getting the idea. The hope is that the parents will do the same tomorrow.

Leaders Approve Banneker Fieldhouse as Recreation, Service Center for Colored Soldiers

Decision of the recreation division of the District Defense Council to turn Banneker fieldhouse into a service center for colored soldiers was approved yesterday by leaders there should be a "mixed personnel" at both Banneker and the center being opened in the Gunton Building for white soldiers and that neither center should be closed to service men from the other race.

At the same time, however, the leaders stressed their viewpoint that

Also, it was declared, they will continue to work for equal or better facilities in "a more centrally located downtown area."

Resolutions voicing these sentiments were adopted at a meeting called by Hugo Wolter, director of of various religious and civic groups in Washington's colored population.

defense recreation, and held at the Council of Social Agencies.

Dr. Thomas J. Anderson, of the Howard University faculty, presided and explained why Banneker had been selected. "For years," he declared, "it has been a white elephant on our hands. It is not used to full capacity over the weekend, even when its pool is open in summer, and its upper floor—where we were able to put 50 double-decker cots for soldiers until the Anacostia area was opened—has been out of use most of the year.

"We will get it heated now. As to the complaints that soldiers will lower the tone of the neighborhood, I think we are getting onto very slippery ground when we assume that. Banneker is logically located in a Negro populated area, among the people who will have to be responsible for entertainment of our Negro soldiers."

James W. Geater, special representative from the Federal Security Agency, said the Federal Government is ready to insure funds for furnishing and heating the fieldhouse and that his survey showed it to be a facility that could be profitably utilized in a crowded area of approximately 80,000 colored persons.

He said that in passing the Lanham Act, through which funds for recreation are made available, the Government had no intention of going into the "morals of a community."

"My idea is that soldiers should not be used as a lever with which to open community questions of long standing. They are part of the emergency problem facing the community," he declared.

Col. Cutchins Given Desk Job In Army Shift

By the Associated Press

Rockingham, N. C., Nov. 14.—Col. John A. Cutchins, first high ranking officer of the Twenty-ninth Division to be affected by the War Department's policy of transferring over-age officers to desk positions, today relinquished his post as chief of staff to assume new duties as provost marshal of the Army's Third Corps area with headquarters in Baltimore.

He was replaced by Lieut. Col. Milton B. Halsey, Regular Army officer who arrived at division headquarters ten days ago from the Twelfth Infantry Regiment of the Fourth Mechanized Division.

The new acting chief of staff assumed control only a few hours before the division moved into the final phase of a two-month maneuver program in the Carolinas. GHQ directors will open the largest mock battle of the fall training schedule tomorrow morning at 3 o'clock.

Steadily Advanced

Col. Cutchins' military career was one of steady advancement since his enlistment as a private in the Richmond Light Infantry Blues in 1904. He was promoted to captain in 1916 and served with the Richmond regiment, since changed into a Cavalry unit serving on the Mexican border.

He was with the Twenty-ninth Division, training at Anniston, Ala., when the United States entered the war, serving as a major and assistant chief of staff. The next promotion was in 1919 while in France with the Paris Peace Commission. He was advanced to his last post in 1923 when he also received the rank of full colonel.

Native of Richmond

Colonel Cutchins, a native of Richmond, was a prominent attorney and author in civilian life. For six years he was director of the Richmond Public Safety Commission, a post in which he performed duties similar to those entailed in his new position as provost marshal.

Included among his published works are "History of the Twenty-ninth Division During the World War," and "An Amateur Diplomat."

Capt. Richard I. Goldsmith, of Baltimore, another over-age officer who with several others was transferred to the air corps about two weeks ago, received orders today to report to Maxwell Field, Ala.

The new acting chief of staff graduated from West Point in 1917 and served in the army of occupation in Germany at the end of the war. He is a graduate of command, general staff and infantry schools. A native of Huntsville, Ala., his previous service includes duties as a staff officer in several Army units.

29th's Fine Show Will Open Again

Cheraw, S. C., Nov. 14 (AP).—Maj. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, said today the ill-fated divisional show, "Snap It Up Again," may be revived when the Blue and Gray troops from Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia return to their home station at Fort George G. Meade about December 12.

The presentation was closed by War Department order several weeks ago in Richmond when troupers were in the middle of a booking schedule which would have taken them on a circuit including Pittsburgh, Washington and Philadelphia. Near capacity audiences attended opening performances in Baltimore.

No official release explained why the show was closed, but some officers said the War Department hesitated to allow military entertainers to compete with civilian professionals.

Gen. Reckord said War Department officials, in a letter authorizing the show's revival, stated performances would be allowed only in areas where enlisted men of the division were residents.

L. B. Kirkpatrick Named President

Lyman B. Kirkpatrick was elected president of Alexandria's new East Side Citizens Association last night. An organization meeting was held in Carpenters Hall.

G. Anderton Burke was chosen secretary, and Mrs. George T. Klipstein was made treasurer. Four others to serve with the elected officers on an executive committee will be appointed by Kirkpatrick.

Pole Describes Nazi Rotation Of Slave Labor

The Nazis have a formula of "rotation" for utilizing Polish "slave labor" in Germany, a member of the exiled Polish government told a press conference here yesterday.

They import several thousand Poles from occupied territory, work them in German industry and agriculture until they are no longer able to produce, then send them back to Poland and import "another batch," said Jan Stanczyk, minister of labor and social welfare of the Polish government in London.

So emaciated and diseased are the Poles after their period of enforced labor that 30 per cent of them die on their return to what was Poland, according to Stanczyk, who came to this country to attend the recent International Labor Office conference in New York.

850,000 More Taken

Some 750,000 Poles were imported for such work in 1940 and so far this year the Germans have taken 850,000 more, he said.

For their work, he said, the Poles receive no money—only "very meager nourishment and the right to sleep in barracks on straw."

Each is compelled to wear an arm emblem identifying him as a Pole—a black "P" inscribed on a black-bordered yellow square, the minister reported. Jews are further identified by a star, he said.

Germans are ordered to give no succor to persons wearing the emblem, according to Stanczyk. They are not allowed to speak to the Poles, or give them "cigarettes or a piece of bread," he said.

Befrienders Humiliated

As an example of what happens when a German violates the order, the minister produced a picture showing a German woman on a street corner with her hair shaven and carrying a sign which read: "I was in this place the biggest pig because I allowed myself to have dealings with Poles."

Stanczyk also reported that progress was being made in negotiations with the Russian government to allow American Red Cross officials to enter the Soviet and supervise relief of more than one and one-half million Poles who have fled from the war zone.

He said he had a "very satisfactory" interview along those lines Thursday with Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Jan Ciechanowski, Polish Ambassador to the United States, served as interpreter at the press conference, which took place at the Polish Embassy.

He said Stanczyk planned to make a tour of the United States before returning to London.

Stanczyk, a diminutive, mustached former skilled mechanic, headed Poland's I. L. O. delegation. During the World War he served as an Austrian soldier, revolutionary and saboteur in Czecho-Slovakia's Skoda arms factory. Once sentenced to death by the Austrian government, he was freed when the revolution broke out and Austria collapsed.

Intoxicated Driver Labeled Potential Killer by Judge

A motorist who drives while under the influence of liquor is "a potential murderer," Justice T. Alan Goldsborough warned in a District criminal court yesterday in sentencing James H. Kirk, 35, to a prison term of one to three years in connection with a traffic death.

"This court will entertain no leniency in such cases," the justice added.

Kirk had pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter following the death of Anna Minor, 59, from injuries received in an automobile accident. Kirk's car struck her while she was walking across the intersection of Georgia Avenue and Aspen Street Northwest on July 9.

Women Get Plea to Aid In Defense

Ladies' V. F. W. Head Asks Members to Take Red Cross, Motor Corps Courses

Members of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars were urged to study Red Cross first aid and motor corps courses and to take part in planning recreational programs for service men, in a message yesterday from its national president, Mrs. Alice M. Donahue, of Glen Cove, N. Y., who is spending the weekend in Washington.

Mrs. Donahue was honored with a dinner by the local auxiliary last night at the American Legion Clubhouse at 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest. She discussed the Auxiliary's national defense program in her address at the dinner, which was attended by representatives of the District department, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In addition to the auxiliary's activities for disabled service men, Mrs. Donahue urged widespread participation in programs for the new service men. She told how auxiliaries in localities near camps are arranging social events for soldiers, and inviting them to homes of members.

Now 100,000 Strong

Mrs. Florence W. Armstrong, District president of the auxiliary, was in charge of the meeting which followed the dinner. Mrs. Dorothy Lohman, senior vice president, was chairman of the dinner.

The organization, which now has 2500 auxiliaries, with approximately 100,000 members, has shown a marked membership increase in the past year, Mrs. Donahue said.

She and a group of local members visited Mount Alto Hospital yesterday afternoon. Along with conferences with officers here, she will be entertained at a tea this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Marie Anderson, 1322 Somerset Place.

Mrs. Donahue is on a tour which will take her to the South and West. Leaving here tomorrow, she will visit auxiliaries in Louisville, Ky.; Columbia, S. C.; Memphis, Atlanta and Chicago. From there she will go on a Western trip from which she expects to return home the latter part of December.

To Visit Annapolis

She will visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis December 18, when the auxiliary will present an award to an outstanding student in the class finishing there.

Mrs. Donahue was elected national president of the auxiliary at its 1941 convention in Philadelphia. She served as department president of New York in 1934 and advanced through numerous national offices: color bearer, chaplain, national junior vice president and national senior vice president.

Chapter L, P.E.O., Entertains At Tea for District Officers

Chapter L of the P. E. O. Sisterhood entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon in honor of the officers of the District of Columbia Chapter and presidents of the 20 local chapters, at the home of its president, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, in Bethesda, with Mrs. A. B. McManus assisting hostess.

Receiving with Mrs. Haig were Mrs. Anton Heitmuller, vice president of Chapter L, and the officers of the State Chapter, Mrs. T. A. Hutton, president; Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, first vice president; Mrs. Ward M. Buckles, organizer; Miss Jessie O. Elting, recording secretary.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. John W. Frizzell, past president of Chapter L; Mrs. William F. Hall, also a former president; Mrs. Joseph F. Milans, Mrs. Warner W. Stockberger, Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson and Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds, former presidents of the District Chapter. Others assisting were Mrs. Richard Green, jr., Mrs. Haig's daughter; Mrs. Albert Milans, and Mrs. James H. Harper.

Preceding the tea a business meeting, presided over by Mrs. Haig, was held. A talk was given by Mrs. Edith Allen, an "An Introduction to South America."

Mrs. Mary Carroll Greathouse, president of Chapter C, announces that a dinner, sponsored by the ways and means committee of the chapter, will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Robbins, 1220 Emerson Street, this evening, from 5 to 7, to which P. E. O.'s are invited. Assisting Mrs. Robbins in arranging for the dinner are Miss Mary Bean, Mrs. F. C. Brinley and Mrs. Richard Powers. This dinner is being given to assist the philanthropic work of the chapter.

Chapter to Honor Mexican Counselor

Senor Dr. Don Luis Quintanilla, counselor of the Mexican Embassy, will be guest of honor at the annual donor luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Women's American ORT Monday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. May Vladeck Bromberg will come from the national organization's headquarters in New York City to speak at the luncheon. Mrs. Leon A. Tashof is in charge of tickets.

Dr. Fisher Will Lecture

Turkey's political, economic and social position as she faces the world crisis will be discussed by Dr. Sydney N. Fisher, of Ohio State University, in the Near East Lecture Series at 11 a. m. Tuesday at the Shoreham Hotel.

Dr. Livingston Wright, former president of Robert College, Istanbul, Turkey, will introduce Dr. Fisher.

Mrs. William C. Johnstone and Mrs. Frank A. Linzel will be chair-man for the program.

Dr. Fisher formerly taught at Robert College, and while living in Turkey married a Turkish woman, Miss Elizabeth Scipio, whose parents were on the faculty of the college. Dr. Fisher was a close associate of the late president of the Turkish Republic, Kemal Ataturk.

Since his return to this country, Dr. Fisher has been on the history faculty to Ohio State University. He has taught and lectured on European and Near Eastern affairs at Chautauqua, N. Y., for the past two summers.

Travel Lecture Opens Alliance Season Monday

Alliance Francaise will hold its first meeting of the season at 4:30 p. m. Monday at the Sulgrave Club, when Mme. Claude Eylan, author and traveler, will speak on her sojourn in the Dutch Indies.

M. Sokolowski is a former counselor of the Polish Embassy. He and Mme. Sokolowski arrived here a few days ago to spend the winter. Paintings to be shown on Monday evening will not be on sale during the preview.

Christening Announced

The christening of Francois Berger Moran Hudgins and Richard Scott Blackburn Hudgins, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hudgins, took place Sunday at St. John's Church in McLean, Va., in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends. Luncheon was served immediately afterward at the Hudgins' country home, Benvenu. One of the children is named for his paternal great-grandfather, Francois Berger Moran, who was well known in Washington social circles 50 years ago. The other is named for his paternal great-great-grandfather, Dr. Richard Scott Blackburn, who was prominent in northern Virginia during the War Between the States.

Mexican Craft Features Meeting Of D.A.R. Group

An exhibition of native silver, pottery, weaving and needlecraft formed the setting for a program on Mexico at the meeting of the District filing and lending bureau committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution last night at the Chapter House.

Mrs. Guy Withers, musical director of the committee, was in charge of the program, which included the showing of pictures on Mexican life, by a projector. Mrs. Withers arranged for Hector De la Garza to sing several Spanish songs and pupils of Sophocles Papas to play Mexican music on stringed instruments.

Honor guests were D. A. R. members who went on the goodwill pilgrimage to Mexico last summer. Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State chairman of the committee, presided.

Press Women To Have Guests

Honor guests "From the War News Front" will attend the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at 1 p. m. Tuesday at the Willard Hotel.

Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary of Agriculture, who recently returned from a study of the food situation in England, and William L. Batt, of the Office of Production Management, will be among the guests, in addition to a group of newspapermen.

This group includes Frank Gervais, Thomas Kernan, author of "France on Berlin Time;" Raymond Clapper, columnist, who recently returned from London; Joe Harsch, Christian Science Monitor correspondent and author of "Pattern of Conquest;" Clifford Prevost, of the Detroit Free Press, who made a recent trip to London; Richard Hottelet, of the United Press, who has covered the French and Belgian fronts and has been in Germany.

Alpha Sigmas Hold Founder's Day Meeting

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Sigma Alpha educational sorority, will hold a Founder's Day meeting at 7 o'clock tonight. Miss Jean Collier is entertaining the group at her home, 410 Cedar Street, Takoma Park.

The sorority is observing the fortieth anniversary of its founding.

Adas Israel Group Meets Wednesday

The Adas Israel Sisterhood will have its second "member-bring-a-member" tea prior to its donor luncheon Wednesday at 2 p. m., in the vestry rooms of the synagogue at Sixth and I Streets Northwest.

Mrs. Louis Rodis, membership chairman, has planned for a Mah Jong and card party following the tea.

Church Women Hear Mrs. Sibley Speak Tuesday

Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., nationally known leader in church women's activities, will speak on "The Opportunities of Church Women in the World Today" at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol Street, at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

Church women of Washington have been invited to attend, in a letter from the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches. The invitation is being circulated through the Washington Council of Church Women.

Mrs. Saunders' Marker To Be Unveiled Today

A commemorative marker will be unveiled in Glenwood Cemetery at the grave of Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders this afternoon by Elizabeth Jackson Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was State chaplain and regent of this chapter.

National and State officers have been invited to the ceremony. Mrs. Saunders was instrumental in the organization of the Police Boys Clubs of Washington, so a representative has been asked to attend.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Issued Haughty Ultimatum to Negligent Suitor, Who Seemed to Forget Her After Summer Romance, Girl Wants to Mend One-Sided Quarrel

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a college girl from a Southern State. Last summer, while attending summer school here in Washington, I met and fell in love with a boy who lives here. We met on a "blind date." He seemed to be in love with me, too; because we dated three or four times a week for ten weeks. He told me he loved me, of course, and while I never said that I loved him, I knew in my heart that I did.

At the close of summer school, we parted, promising to write. I was to write him first, which I did,—two days after returning home. I had no reply for two weeks,—when his letter came, giving good reasons for the delay. So I forgave him. Then, early in September, he went off to college (out of town) and I came back here to school. Our correspondence continued,—and it was the kind of correspondence exchanged by a boy and girl who are in love.

Then, one weekend, he came home on a visit—and I didn't see him. I was miserable, because I knew he was in town, as some of my friends had seen him. It seems he telephoned me both Saturday and Sunday, and was told that I was "out." I really believe this, because his brother and several friends said he tried to reach me. I was worried all weekend; but kept thinking, "Maybe something is wrong at his home."

After a week, I had a letter from him. But as I didn't exactly like the tone of his remarks, I sat down and wrote him a sarcastic reply, telling him if he wanted to "call quits," to please return my picture and I would understand we were through. I further said if he didn't want to break off, to write me at once, explaining a few things to me. That was four weeks ago, and as yet I have had no word from him—one way or the other. (And his mother hasn't heard from him in three weeks.)

I am living in a state of suspense. I must get "down to earth" again. I only wish he would write and tell me where I stand. I would rather be told that I "don't count" any more, or never did, than to go on wondering what his silence means. I love him very much, and I am worried sick about the whole matter. Please let me hear from you soon. PUZZLED.

The Reasonable View Of Man's Behavior

DEAR PUZZLED: The young man's behavior—since parting from you at the close of the summer term—suggests that, with him, to be out of sight is to be out of mind. As some wag has said, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder—of somebody else!" And such, apparently, is the influence of a sweetheart's absence on him.

Unquestionably he is an extrovert personality,—whose interest centers in external objects and action; who has a propensity for finding satisfaction in the associations of the hour and the immediate environment; who is not disposed towards an "inner life" of thought and fancy. His forthright, enthusiastic, consistent court of you,—during the summer,—bespeaks the extrovert. He felt that he loved you,—so he suited his actions and words to his thought in the matter. He enjoyed the sentimental adventure for all it was worth, while circumstances favored its flourishing. And when the time came that your paths diverged, he turned with typical forthright enthusiasm to other sentimental companions and adventures.

He is the type of person for whom there is "never a dull moment," wherever he is. It is bonebred in him to be more interested in the "here and now" than in the "then and there," or "the time and place to come." So, while his actions have disappointed you, you cannot fairly consider him a "gay deceiver."

And being an extrovert, letter writing would seem a chore to him. It would (for him) involve too much "thinking,"—of "what to say next." His kind would much rather talk, from the surface of mind, to present company, than engage in correspondence. Why? Because, in company, he depends upon lively repartee to mold his next remark; and in solitude, most often he finds himself without anything to offer in the way of conversational subject matter.

Thus, whatever "good excuses" he may have given earlier, for writing infrequently, the truth is, simply, that he has no aptitude for that type of social exchange. And this inability to communicate himself in writing probably explains, in large measure, his seemingly stony silence in the face of your documentary onslaught of recent date. He probably wouldn't know how to begin to "explain" whatever it is you want explained. He probably doesn't understand, himself, why it is your erstwhile importance to him seemed to fade, after you went one way and he went another.

And he probably was almost as mystified and coldly aggrieved by your snarling reaction to his latest letter, as you were baffled and annoyed by his fumbling failure to get in touch with you, during his visit home. For, say what you will, the feelings you expressed in that epistolary outburst stemmed from the emotional upset of the previous weekend, and the so-called "tone of his letter" was merely you" excuse for "letting him have it."

The fact that he has not returned your picture—a gesture which was to have been the sign and symbol of his desire to "call quits"—indicates that he dosen't want to be a party to a friendship-killing quarrel. It looks, indeed, as though he was doing his man's best to avoid a quarrel—since it is instinctive with well poised, peace loving men to take refuge in silence when their women start picking a verbal fight with them. And it is ironic that, in holding his peace, he has unknowingly hit upon the "upper-hand" answer. For, as G. K. Chesterton has written, "Silence is the unbearable retort."

Inasmuch as you love him dearly, your impulsively haughty ultimatum has placed you in an almost irremediably awkward position. It seems to me the only possible way of relieving the tension for yourself and for him,—supposing he is giving the matter anxious thought; which is not likely, however, in view of his temperament,—consists in mailing him a "second-thought" note, somewhat to this effect:

Dear Jake: Pardon me for living, after that temperish outburst I mailed you a month ago. I don't know what came over me; but, anyway, I'm sorry. I hope you will forgive me for the tone I took. About the picture: don't bother to send it back. If you still think of me as a frank, I should be pleased to have you keep it. And if I have behaved so badly that you can't bear the thought of me, just put it in the ash can. I should like to hear—within the next few days—that you are accepting my apologies in the spirit I extend them. But even if I don't hear, I am writing this note to you for the good of my soul. The things I said to you were false to the feeling of real friendship I have, and expect always to have, for you, and I wanted you to know it. Amen."

Ballerina Dinner Dress

Recommended in today's Fashion Forum is this type of dinner dress, as practical for the teen-ager rather than the matron. The pale pink marquisette skirt is topped by a black jersey top. With the new short cap sleeves, wear long, cover-up gloves. The skirt, just ankle length, gives a dancer grace. This is one of the new fashions featured by local stores for "younger set" merrymaking.

Next Year's Hemline

A MIDDLE-AGED party-going matron asks if the longer length "after five" type dress would be a practical investment for her. She also asks if this style is just a fad or one likely to last.

As far as predicting the life of the uneven hemline or longer length type dress, no one can speak with conviction. Past attempts show this type to be one that is fairly short lived—that is, a style not likely to be repeated the next year or the year after. For this reason it is considered faddish, or more aptly stated, a "high style" fashion.

There is much to be said for the chicness of a dress of varying hemline for a woman who is not concerned with the practicality of her clothes. If, however, she wants to be certain her dress will be in style next year, she should select one of standard hemline. The dress that is unusual is always remembered in a gathering—something to think about if one is moving among women.

The longer type dress is more practical in the ballet style gown shown for the young in heart. A local store has such dresses with the taffeta and net skirts and sweater or jersey tops. They are a little longer than the daytime versions—reaching almost to the ankles and are recommended to be worn with ballet type evening sandals.

Shoe Investment

"I AM buying a new pair of shoes," writes a young married, "to liven my winter costumes. Is it too late to buy suede shoes? What type would you suggest? I would like to be able to wear them into spring."

Although winter is presumably just getting underway, as women start wearing their fur coats, spring is here as far as the shoe industry is concerned. That it is too late to buy suede shoes (if you would wear them this spring) will be evidenced by the fact that suede shoes will soon go on sale.

By late December, even, you will notice patent leather shoes being shown—a leather that is strictly for spring shoes. If patent leather seems premature, however, choose one of the polished calf shoes that are slated to be in the fashion picture again next season. One store has an entire new shipment of these calf shoes as midwinter styles that will go into spring.

Antebellum Note

FROM a coed in Maryland University comes a query about wearing hoops this year under an evening dress. She has two dresses from last year which are still wearable, but being of tulle and net they need something to hold them out. She also asks if the buckram underskirts she has heard about are practical, as a possible substitute for hoops, if the latter are not in style.

While full, ethereal skirts are in vogue this year, hoops are not—as Miss Maena Hayden, gown buyer of a local store, states. If the skirt is full enough, the hoops may be removed entirely. There also are buckram underskirts, such as you mentioned. Miss Hayden does not recommend wearing them with hose, however, as they tear them. Without hose, the buckram skirt would substitute satisfactorily for the hoops to give body.

Cosmetics Urged For Britain's Gallant Women

Should the women in the units attached to Britain's fighting forces get cosmetics, lipstick and powder in the necessity packages sent over by the British War Relief?

This is the question now being debated at the society's headquarters at 730 Fifth Avenue, New York City, where such necessities as gumboot socks, toothpaste, soap, flashlight and hot water bottles are being assemled for the personal aid kits that will be shipped by the thousands to England's gallant women.

Mrs. Alfred F. Hess, chairman of the necessity packages committee, states her opinion on the question with spirit. "Of course they should," she says.

"No woman worth her salt wants to face the world without cosmetics, not if she has a spark of spirit left. When she's up against it the way these English women are, goodness knows she needs them even more.

"We over here can scarcely picture the life those women lead—digging trenches, ferrying planes, often working with little or no sleep. It's when you're tired and worn out that you need lipstick most.

Baba au Rhum Now Sold Ready to Serve

NEW DESIGNS for living pop up these days just like mushrooms after a warm rain. And delicious desserts all ready for serving is one of the newest designs for entertaining without benefit of kitchen. If you are one of those persons who has parlor, bedroom and bath—but no kitchen—and want to have friends in for tea or snacks you will be interested in the tempting baba au rhum and crepe suzettes to be purchased, ready to serve, at a local store which has just installed this type of merchandise.

Whether you have a state dining room, a small dinette or just a cozy corner, you will want to try these delicious desserts. If it's maid's night out, and you are too busy to whip up a final course, these desserts will be a godsend to you.

The same ingenious Georges Binon who has made and sold candy to celebrities of the Old Paris makes these desserts as well as delicious Rose Marie chocolates. Mr. Binon, a Belgian by birth, has in the changing course of world affairs transferred his Paris business to New York as headquarters. He personally supervises the making of all his products and does not dash off candies in the twinkling of an eye, but allows the candy pastes to ripen for eight days. Mr. Binon invented a machine for extracting the cacao from the South American chocolate beans.

Here is a menu appropriate for this season of the year that includes baba au rhum as the dessert.

Do Exercises With Precision, Or Their Value May Be Lost

By Ida Jean Kain

STREAMLINING exercises has as much form as golf. And yet a friend of mine who is an excellent golfer tells me that she goes through her half-dozen lickety-split to get it over with, but that she is not getting anywhere. All I can say is that if she swung away at her game with the same abandon she wouldn't win any prizes.

If your sole aim in exercising is to get it over with, you might better be darning your husband's socks. All your huffing and puffing is for nothing. You have to take your time to get precision and results.

We'll suppose you want to slim 4 inches off your waistline. This is about the average. You know that twisting will trim you down. So you stand up with your feet planted wide apart and your arms held straight out at your sides and swing wild. You don't benefit your waistline the slightest exercising this way.

Twist, but Slowly

Do your twisting slowly and you can center it smack at this measurement. Try sitting on the floor with legs straight out and stretched wide apart, trunk straight and arms out at shoulder level. Make your midway muscles give as you whirl around to touch the outstretched right hand to the left, then reverse your direction. Throughout the exercise the lower abdominal muscles should be kept pulled up.

Even rolling must be done with precision. My roly-poly pal said, yes, she rolls over and over every day and isn't making a dent in anything except the furniture. You may feel the same way. If you go in for this exercise, it is probably because you want to reduce your hips. Lie full length on your back on the floor and roll full across the hipline from thigh to thigh. Or sit up and try this version: Lean back on your arms, hands braced on floor at sides, legs straight down, and propel yourself vigorously from one side to the other with your hands.

It is easy to be accurate about most exercise that is done on the floor. In the lying-down exercises, you don't have to think about your posture. You can concentrate on the muscular pull where it is needed. Another good hip slimmer and waist stretcher can be taken lying face downward on the floor, head resting on folded arms. From that position raise alternate legs slowly from the hips, hold, and slowly lower. As you raise one leg do not let yourself roll over on the other.

Exercise is not anything you take to naturally, so it really pays you to make every movement count. You will find that you progress faster by taking your time and stressing precision.

Liberal Protein Diet Is Called Aid to Slimness and 'Oomph'

WITH even a moderate talent for arithmetic you may eat, rather than starve your way to slimness and health.

How this may be done is told by Donald G. Cooley, nationally known writer on medicine and science, in "The New Way to Eat and Grow Slim," just published by Wilfred Funk.

Knowing your vitamin and calorie tables as well as your multiplication tables will enable you to select not only the foods that will reduce you to normal weight, but that will also give you charm, looks and longevity and even "oomph," maintains Mr. Cooley. It's not how many calories you eat so much as what kind you choose.

New Theories

The "new knowledge of nutrition" as presented in this book gives proteins an increasingly important role in reducing. That is because proteins help to keep the liquid balance of the body at normal and because its surplus calories are disposed of by chemical action instead of being stored in the body as are fat and carbohydrate calories. Thus the person in search of slimness as well as added up should go strong on lean meat, milk, eggs, and cheese, eat plenty of green vegetables and fresh fruits, but stay away from starches and heavy desserts. Light nonconcentrated sweets recommended are baked custard, dates, dried figs, gelatin, ices, ice cream, malted milk and an occasional chocolate nut caramel, marshmallow or peanut bar.

Affects Disposition

Emphasizing the relation of food to personality the author says, "Even though you take in enough calories and may even be overweight, you may not be getting the right food to feed your personality." For instance, that tired feeling may be due to shortage of food containing vitamins B 1 and C. Or a poor skin, may be due to lack of Vitamin A—possibly also B and C.

In a chapter entitled "Eating for Oomph" the author warns that mild starvation may lower interest in romance. To keep up "the glamour quotient," he says the diet should be liberal in proteins. It should also include iron, which may be obtained from molasses—the blacker the better. Among the other bloodbuilding foods recommended to produce a "glint in the eye" are liver, calf, pork, beef or chicken, eggs and apricots.

D. C. Art Lovers Throng To See French Works

Many Gay Parties Precede Chester Dale Display at Washington's National Gallery

By Patricia Grady

Not since the opening of the National Gallery of Art last spring has Capital society donned its top hats and ermines, ordered its limousines and presented itself en masse of an evening for a special artistic event. But last night was almost a repeat performance of that first thronged opening night, for the Chester Dale collection of nineteenth century French paintings was being previewed and it seemed as though every invitation from the director of the National Gallery, David E. Finley, to view the collection had been accepted.

But before the gala event at the gallery, most of the art enthusiasts had been wined and dined at one of the number of dinners preceding the showing. Director Finley and Mrs. Finley entertained at a dinner in their Georgetown home in honor of the owners of the spot-lighted collection, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Dale, of New York. Heading the guest list were the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, who are usually on hand for any Washington artistic happening. Mrs. Paul Mellon came from her home in Upperville, Va., for the event, though the Army's plans for her draftee husband kept him from being present at this noteworthy affair in the gallery made possible by his philanthropist father. Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth came down from Milton, Mass., to join her husband, Representative Richard Wigglesworth, for the party, and others at the dinner included Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Senator and Mrs. Peter Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish and David Bruce.

From New York came a number of the Chester Dales' friends for the dinner and opening as well as art connoisseurs and critics. Among them were Judge and Mrs. James Foley and Henry McBride, Edward Alden Jewell and Nelson Lansdale—all are critics.

25 Paintings Are Put on Display

Mr. and Mrs. Dale chose 25 paintings from their extensive collection for display here—a collection they have been building up for many years. Until the present world chaos broke, Mr. Dale, who is a retired investment banker, and his authoress-wife regularly spent part of every year on the Continent tracking down the best in French nineteenth century paintings. Interested in the research aspect of art, Mrs. Dale has a number of books on art and artists to her credit. Best known is her scholarly work "Before Manet to Modigliani," in which she traces the trends of the art of that period. They have also collected paintings by the artists who had such a great influence on the development of the particular period in which they are interested, with the result that their home in New York is a treasure house of El Grecos and Tintorettos.

Among the other dinners given last night before the preview was one at which James Clement Dunn was host. Entertaining in the absence of his wife—Mrs. Dunn is in Florida with her daughter, Countess de Bailliet-Latour—Mr. Dunn included in his guest list a number of his colleagues from the State Department, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips invited 16 guests to dine with them before going on to the opening and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey entertained at a similar party. Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth invited a few friends to their Tracy Place home to dine with them informally before spending the evening at the Gallery.

John Walkers Entertain at Dinner

The Chief Curator of the Gallery and Mrs. John Walker were still others who entertained at dinner before the exhibit of French Impressionist and post-Impressionist paintings. From New York for their party came Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Pichetto. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Watson, Mrs. McGill James, Winthrop Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Rene D'Harnoncourt, Mrs. Barbara Sessions and Benjamin Koehler. The Secretary of the Gallery and Mrs. Donald D'Arcy Shepard also entertained at an informal dinner in their Georgetown home. Covers were laid for ten.

Finishing up the festive evening, the Chester Dales invited a number of guests in to a buffet supper at the Carlton, where they are staying. They will stay in the Capital only a few days before returning to their home in New York.

Many at Dance At Sulgrave Club

While a great segment of Capital society was out art-viewing, another segment was attending the opening dance in the series planned by the Friday Supper Club Committee at the Sulgrave Club. Memebers of the committee who are responsible for this "purely social" endeavor include Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr., Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Wheeler, 2d, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. Thomas Clagett, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Marion E. Shouse, Harold D. Fangboner, A. Britton Browne, Capt. G. Tinsley Garnett, James F. Mitchell, jr., and Lieut. Comdr. Myron A. Hofer.

Mrs. Joseph K. McCammon is serving as secretary of the committee and members of the all-important financial committee are Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, Maj. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carrol Morgan, Dr. and Mrs. Harry H. Kerr and Mrs. John R. Williams, who is treasurer for the group.

Miss Julia Mills, who will be presented to Capital society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Bach Mills, of Madison, N. J., and 2101 Connecticut Avenue, at a tea dance at the Sulgrave Club on December 29. The deb, who is now in her freshman year at Sweetbriar College, will arrive here the day after the second Thanksgiving, November 28, for a weekend holiday with her parents. With her will come her classmate, Miss Mary Wood, of Philadelphia. Miss Mills, who was president of the Dramatic Society at Holton Arms last year, is an enthusiastic athlete and is skilled at riding, swimming, tennis, golf and hockey, though her family insists that hockey is now a thing of the past for her. She spent ten days on crutches after her last hockey casualty

Mrs. Pierson Entertains for Miss Fries

Another prenuptial party was chalked off the calendar last evening when Mrs. W. Theodore Pierson entertained at her home in Briarcliff in honor of her sister, Miss Carol Stephanie Fries, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, whose marriage to Ensign Robert Gwathmey Merritt, United States Navy, will take place on Thanksgiving Day at 3 o'clock in the Great Choir of the Washington Cathedral.

The event was also a linen shower and guests included Mrs. Fries, mother of the bride; the mother and sister of Ensign Merritt, Mrs. Peterson Merritt and Miss Elise Merritt; Mrs. Owen O'Hare, Mrs. Rose P. Pope, Mrs. Harrison T. Slaughter, Mrs. Thelma Powell, Mrs. Cary L. Bonini, Miss Ella Harllee; Mrs. Stuart G. Fries, sister-in-law of the bride; and Miss Rosalie Fahey.

Also Miss Edna Mae Miller, Miss Laura Terry, Mrs. Eunice L. Pierson, of Humbolt, Iowa, mother-in-law of the hostess; Mrs. Elizabeth Henney, Mrs. Joseph Findlay and Mrs. August Larson.

Miss Rosalie Fahey and Miss Edna Mae Miller will entertain for Miss Fries at a luncheon on Tuesday at the Shoreham Hotel.

The list of the wedding party has only recently been completed and best man will be Lieut. (Junior Grade) Albert T. Church, jr., son of Rear Admiral A. Church, who is director of the Naval Experimental Station at Annapolis, and Mrs. Church.

Ushers will be Lieut. (Junior Grade) Frank Jones, Ensign Chester W. Smith, Ensign Charles M. Quinn, Ensign John R. Burwell, Ensign Ramon M. Perez, Ensign Robert D. Macklin and Ensign Howard D. Montgomery.

Social Calendar Is Enlivened By Several Cocktail Parties

Several cocktail parties accented yesterday afternoon's social calendar, among them being the one given by the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Edgar Prochnik; the affair given by Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley at their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue and the 5-to-7 party given by the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Hugo Gouthier at their home in Leroy Place.

The event at which the Prochniks were hosts was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill, who have, by the way, been in a constant whirl of parties since their return from California, where they were married last summer.

Assisting Mrs. Prochnik in receiving were her two daughters, Mrs. Jean de Sibour and Miss Patricia Prochnik. Officiating at the tea table was Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling.

Meanwhile, at the Gouthiers, partying was progressing merrily both upstairs and down, for the hospitable Brazilian couple always has viands and drinks for their guests at a lavishly filled table in the upstairs drawing room, as well as at the dining table on the first floor.

M. Gouthier greeted the guests at the door, at this second in their winter series of parties, while Mme. Gouthier did the honors upstairs. Gowned in a street-length black frock, fashioned with a tiered skirt, she looked, as always, refreshingly young and vivacious. A gold clip at the neckline was the only jewel on her frock, but a barrett of brilliants held her dark hair and accented her flashing Latin eyes.

Diplomatic, residential and official society made up the guest list and one of the early arrivals, who stayed a full hour and seemed to enjoy every minute of it, was the Colombian Ambassador, Gabriel Turbay.

Another envoy who was early upon the scene was the Minister of Bolivia, who was accompanied by Senora de Gauchalla, the latter wearing a becoming bright-red turban with a matching scarf draped around her chin and throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holland Duell were trying to decide whether they would go on to the first Friday Supper Club dance at the Sulgrave Club. The Charge d'Affaires of Rumania and Mme. Coste brought with them the former Rumanian Consul at Tokyo, M. Flondor, who will sail soon for his new post in Brazil.

Still others noted were Mrs. Sims Snow, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., who was hatless and wearing a smart black frock; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Miss Sue Rosenberg, of New York, who will make her home in Washington for the winter; Carlos Pusta, who said that his sister, the Baroness Bodisco, might come to the Capital from New York for the season; David Cohn, George Abell, Mrs. James C. Sappington 3d, in a black ensemble and a small black hat perched atop her upswept blond coiffeur; Louis Montague, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton, and so on for many, many more.

A. B. Fragosos Are Feted at Dinner Party

The First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senhora de Pardo entertained at a dinner last night in their apartment on Connecticut Avenue in honor of the retiring Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. A. Boulitreau Fragoso.

Mr. Fragoso will leave with his wife for Rio de Janeiro November 23, where he will be attached to the staff of the Minister of Foreign Affairs. Today, the staff of the Embassy, headed by the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, will honor the Fragosos at a luncheon.

Guests at last night's dinner were the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senhora de Rodriguez, Senhorita Carmen Fragosa, sister of the honor guest, the Commercial Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senhora de Nunez, and the new Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Guillermo Ureburo.

Underhills Give Cocktail Party For Officers

Col. James L. Underhill, U. S. Marine Corps and Mrs. Underhill entertained yesterday afternoon between 5 and 7 at cocktails at their home in Aurora Hills, Va., in honor of the officers, who have come here to be members of the Marine Selection Board.

Receiving in the drawing room, Mrs. Underhill was gowned in a black crepe frock. In the dining room and throughout the house masses of autumn flowers gave token of the season.

Ranking guests included Representative and Mrs. Thomas Rolph of San Francisco; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandergrift, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Denig, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Roy Geiger, Brig Gen. Edward Ostermann, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell Putnam.

Mrs. Worthington Goes to Hot Springs

Mrs. George Y. Worthington has gone to Hot Springs, Va., where she expects to be for 10 days or so.

Mrs. Worthington, who makes her home on LeRoy Place, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lee Boinist at the Virginia Spa.

Miss Hagner Is Entertained

Entertaining at a dinner at the Friday Supper Club in honor of a soon-to-be debutante, Miss Isabella Hagner, Miss Marilynn Himes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Himes, was hostess to a group of the young set at the Sulgrave Club last night.

Mrs. Randall Hagner, the mother of the predebutante, has not yet selected the date for the supper dance at which she plans to present her daughter to Capital society this season. The Hagner family have moved from their summer residence, their farm near Rockville, Md., to their home in Washington for the winter months.

Guests at the dinner were Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Rosemary Merrill, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Edith Wright, Miss Elaine Darlington, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., Dick Hutchinson, Fred Mechlin, Barbner Smith, William Fitzgerald, Merritt Swift, Stephen Elkins, Bill Mitchell, Peter Dewey and Britton Brown.

Mrs. Walter Wyatt Entertains Guests At Luncheon

Mrs. Walter Wyatt entertained yesterday at a luncheon in her Kalmia Road home in honor of Mrs. George Brainard. The latter is in the Capital visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas J. Montgomery, from her home in Youngstown, Ohio.

Guests were Mrs. William O. Douglas, Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador; Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Golden Bell, Mme. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Legation who is now in Chungking; Mrs. Thomas J. Montgomery, Mrs. Francis Parkinson Keyes and her house guest, Miss Jean Darling.

Turkish Envoy Gives Luncheon

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun entertained at a small luncheon yesterday at the embassy.

Guests included the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, the Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis, the Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Georges-Picot, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Villard, Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco and Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Eaton.

Mrs. Emmet Feted At Luncheon

Mrs. Grenville Temple Emmet, widow of the former United States Minister to the Netherlands, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Arthur Fowler gave a small luncheon yesterday.

Recently arriving here to spend the winter, Mrs. Emmet has taken Mrs. Lionel Atwill's house at 1400 Thirty-fourth Street. Mrs. Emmet, who has a host of friends in Washington, is the mother of Grenville Emmet who married Miss Anne Livingston Eustis, daughter of Mrs. William Corran Eustis in 1937.

Mr. Emmet, the father, who at that time was serving as Minister to the Netherlands, was planning to come to Washington for the marriage when he contracted pneumonia. Death followed shortly. Mr. Emmet was a close friend of President Roosevelt, and at one time the law firm with which he was connected had Mr. Roosevelt as one of its heads.

Freers to Honor Guests Today

Commissioner of the Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Robert E. Freer will gather in a small group for cocktails this afternoon at their home in Kenwood, from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Honor guests at the party will be Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry LaBrum, of Overbrook, Pa. Mr. LaBrum is the supreme justice of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity.

Chestosky–Williams Nuptials Held in Famous N. Y. Church

The marriage of Miss Mary Martha Chestosky and Robert Wright Williams took place yesterday in the Little Church Around the Corner in New York City. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Chestosky, of Steubenville, Ohio. Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bassett Williams, of this city.

The Rev. Randolph Ray officiated at the ceremony before an altar banked with white chrysanthemum and Easter lilies. A reception and buffet followed in the Colonnades of the Essex House.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown with a basque of taffeta and a bouffant tulle skirt. Her shirred bonnet of tulle held the veil in place. She carried one white orchid with streamers of lilies of the valley.

Miss Jeanne Morgan, of Royal Oak, Mich., served as maid of honor. She wore a powder blue marquisette gown with a fitted bodice and full ballet skirt. Her matching cap was ostrich-tipped and she carried a nosegay. David Watrous, of New York City, was best man.

Mrs. Chestosky, mother of the bride, wore a Ming green frock embroidered in gold. Her matching velvet hat was set off with a gold bow and she carried green orchids. Mrs. Williams had selected a powder blue silk jersey ensemble embroidered in chenille and seed pearls. Her coronette of blue was trimmed with dubonnet feathers.

The bride was graduated from Fairmont Junior College here and attended Ohio Wesleyan University. Mr. Williams, who received part of his education abroad, attended Culver Military academy, Coate Preparatory School and Northwestern University. He is now relief manager of the American Airlines in Toronto, where the couple will make their home.

Guests Wear Oriental Attire at Tea By Mrs. Walker to Aid Chinese

All for China

Mrs. J. A. Dougherty And Mrs. Pinchot Give Short Talks

With several of the guests picturesquely garbed in Chinese attire a cross section of Washington society turned out for the tea given yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harold Walker on Leroy Place. The reason: To raise interest in the gala Chinese benefit planned for November 25, at the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold. The fete will be opened by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Wearing a simple black frock with a rope of pearls, Mrs. Harold Walker received at the head of the stairway. Meanwhile her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson wandered about in attractive Chinese dress. Mrs. Robert wore a heavily embroidered jacket of gold and black over her pajamas. Mrs. Pierson's white satin brocaded mandarin coat was worn over a green slit skirt—and she even went so far as to wear long, fake fingernails.

Mrs. Dougherty Gives Talk

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who is handling arrangements for the fete, gave a short speech and then introduced Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who also talked briefly. Mrs. Pinchot, who wore a cinnamon-colored wool suit, had much to say on the subject of Chinese cooperatives that the guests found interesting. She said that they hoped to make the benefit "more than just another fete for raising money—but rather a symbol of our admiration for the magnificent fight the Chinese are putting up."

Following the speeches, guests wandered into the flower-decked tea table to try the sandwiches and tea, or out onto the sunporch to try the iced punch. Looking quite smart with a swooping red and green bird perched on her hat was Mrs. Paul McNutt, who is working hard for the benefit. Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovak Minister, and Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, chatted together.

Youngsters Wear Chinese Dress

Making an attractive appearance were little Miss S... e Walker, Charlotte McNary and Alice Birney Robert—quite impressed with themselves in Chinese dress. Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt sipped tea and talked over plans with a group. Wearing a vivid purple wool frock was Mrs. Robert Keebler.

A group of Senatorial wives, including Mrs. Charles McNary and Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark, were there. Mrs. McNary wore a black frock with a yoke of white lace. Mrs. D. Worth Clark was smartly turned out in cherry red wool outfit and others there included Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. George M. Pettengill, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Ernest Wagner, Mrs. James Lawrence Hoghteling, Mrs. Robert Highfield, Mrs. Emmett Davison, Mrs. Bruce Smith and several dozen others.

East and West seem to blend very nicely, after all, to judge by the Oriental costumes adorning the Occidentals above. Mislaid—Two Torpedoes

Along with other troubles ship masters were warned by the Navy yesterday to be on the lookout for two dummy torpedoes. They were dropped and lost in Hampton Roads Channel in Chesapeake Bay, presumably in torpedo plane practice. If anybody sees them and is not frightened out of his wits, he should advise the Naval Air Station at Norfolk, Va.

OPM Cracks Down—On OPM

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—The OPM, whose priorities division is limiting metals to manufacturers of civilian goods, has cracked down on itself. William A. Dunlop, of the Corry-Jamestown Manufacturing Co., said the OPM "has told us to hold up" an order for metal letter files for the OPM Washington office "because it could issue no priority rating on metal files for its own use."

Nation-Wide Traffic Drive Is Proposed

International Police Chiefs Sponsor Emergency Meeting On Program Here

A 75-point traffic law-enforcement program, which in part would bring every policeman in every police department in the Nation into the disturbed traffic picture, was formulated at an emergency meeting sponsored at the Willard Hotel yesterday by the International Association of Police Chiefs.

Stimulus for the meeting, over which Capt. Donald S. Leonard, of the Michigan State police, presided, was the anticipated 1941 traffic fatalities of 40,600, "the blackest in history," and the national emergency, calling for "efficient movement of traffic . . . into every highway and street of our States and cities" where "efficiency is synonomous with industrial production."

Keep After Speeders

Calling its program an emergency one, the conference said "the first and immediate necessary action is enforcement."

Some of the program's high points were:

Concentrate police action on excessive speed and other hazardous violations at the places and during the hours of greatest accident frequency.

Relieve congestion through the selective assignment of available traffic control personnel.

Assign to special traffic law enforcement duty as many officers as possible and stimulate all members of the department to the greatest possible participation by orders, meetings, supervision and special training. (The Washington police traffic school is attempting this now.)

The program asked for the immediate use of all available Government-owned motor vehicles for emergency patrols and "all possible equipment necessary to the effective performance of investigative, patrol, analytical and other activities related to the emergency program."

It also urged these measures:

"Concentrate traffic officers and (insofar as possible) other police personnel in accordance with enforcement demands indicated by accident and congestion analyses.

"Concentrate personnel during the hours and in the areas having the most accidents and greatest congestion."

Insure maximum patrol strength by "rigid curtailment of special duty assignments; use whenever possible of private and military police for congestion relief and military motor march escorts. (The Washington police now are training soldiers for this duty.)

The immediate release for patrol duty of all officers who can be spared from nonessential duties by use of less personnel or civilian employes, was advocated. Intensification of pedestrian regulations was urged. "Give special attention to intoxicated pedestrians," it was said. Maintenance of comprehensive violation records to insure effective suspensions and revocations was asked, along with follow-up enforcement on all suspensions and revocations of licenses.

Special traffic prosecutors were advocated and the maintenance of close contact between police and prosecutors to improve case preparation and presentation was urged. urged.

Many Groups Represented.

The emergency program spoke out against unnecessary continuances, irregular disposition of cases and remission of penalties. It opposed civil settlement in accident cases. Establishment of traffic courts (such as Washington had) was urged.

The conference intended having six regional meetings toward putting its emergency program into effect. Enforcement, it was emphasized, "is but one of the primary implements with which to attack the problem. Education, engineering and other important collateral activities are essential. The emergency program, it was said, will be carried forth on a continuing basis.

Represented at the conference were the United States Conference of Mayors, International City Managers, American Association of Motor Vehicles, National Association of Attorneys General, the American Bar Association, the National Conference of Judicial Councils, National Committee on Traffic Law Enforcement, Highway Traffic Advisory Council, the Governors' Conference and the War Department.

By Howard F. Wentworth

In the year and almost two months since formation of the police Accident Prevention Unit—now known as the Accident Investigation Unit—Washington has increased its traffic arrest and conviction record by an estimated 30 per cent.

Back in the days before trained and specially equipped men were assigned to full-time traffic enforcement and accident work, the city's highway safety program was admittedly haphazard and decentralized.

Prior to September 22, 1940—when the accident squad came into being—citizen groups, imported safety authorities and even the then Board of Commissioners strongly advocated a modernized police traffic-control system for the Capital.

Under the direction of Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who was sent to Northwestern University Traffic Institute for a year's training, such a setup was finally established.

For more than a year, this group has functioned with little fanfare. But now, its efficiency has been questioned. Police Supt. Edward J. Kelly, acting on orders from the Commissioners, has begun an inquiry to determine if the special unit "shall remain in existence."

The estimation that arrests and convictions for motoring violations—in both accident and nonaccident cases—have jumped 30 per cent over years before the squad was formed—comes from Inspector Miller, who has kept a constant eye on its progress.

To eliminate the special unit, he said, would mean reverting to the time when Washington didn't "pay any particular attention" to to its accident problem and permitted crash violations to go unprosecuted when the parties concerned agreed on a financial settlement of damages—even in instances of personal injuries.

Officers—motorized or afoot—in the various precincts, said Miller, have been freed of accident investigations since the special squad was established. Where traffic statistics and records once were scattered throughout the precincts, they are now kept in a central file room, available at a moment's notice.

With 6 cars and 40 members, including 3 sergeants, the specialized unit—comprised of men who have completed intensive traffic training courses—now handles approximately 70 per cent of all accident cases and investigates every instance of a personal injury or death.

The only time, said Miller, that precinct officers are called upon to conduct a traffic inquiry is when an A. I. U. car is not available.

According to headquarters records, 88 per cent of all accident cases involving major traffic violations have ended in court convictions on evidence presented by the squad.

He pointed out that there hadn't been one unsolved hit-and-run case this year, while prior to the special squad's activities, the city averaged four or five unsolved cases of this type a year.

Two members of the unit, Miller explained, are assigned to solve hit-skip accidents and have been thoroughly schooled in tracking down evidence.

For the first six months of this year, the squad made arrests in 2161 cases involving no accidents and 2026 cases in which an accident occurred.

Miller declared that the city's efforts to curb traffic lawlessness and obtain a true picture of its accident problems "depends entirely" on retention of the special squad and either its existing or an augmented personnel.

Green Light Given Bridge Widening

Potomac Rail Span Will Be Doubled; Planners Approve Temporary Buildings

Culminating in a controversial final session, highlighted by an argument as to whether tunnels or bridges are more vulnerable to bombs, the two-day monthly meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission came to a close late yesterday.

Before adjourning until December 18, the planners approved sites for three more temporary Federal buildings in the Mall, rejected a plan to open Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway to buses and acted on a number of other proposals affecting the Capital and environs.

Spirited debate accompanied the presentation of a report by Harland Bartholomew, St. Louis consultant to the commission, on the Pennsylvania Railroad's request for permission to strengthen and remodel its Long Bridge across the Potomac, paralleling Highway Bridge.

Yesterday's commission was in closed session, as always, but John Nolen, jr., director of the planning staff, admitted that considerable debate ensued over Bartholomew's report. It was "received" by the planning body, rather than "approved," Nolan said.

However, the commission will enter no objection to alteration of the railroad bridge, which will make of it a double-track span.

Buildings Approved

At request of Public Buildings Administration, the group voted to permit construction of two temporary office buildings in Constitution Avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets, and another in Independence Avenue, between Sixth and Seventh Streets.

All three structures are intended for occupancy by defense workers. A fourth, proposed for erection to the rear of the Munitions Building, was rejected.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was informed that any one of three sites will be acceptable for its proposed new building. Locations were not disclosed. Secretary Thomas S. Settle said, however, that one is in the Southwest section and two in the Northwest.

Ground use plans for the new Army Medical Library nad Museum to be erected on East Capitol Street, east of the Folger Library, were approved. The commission also indorsed the bill to increase the District gasoline tax from 2 cents to 4 cents.

A measure pending in the Senate authorizing Federal acquisition of the Nevius tract of 25 acres adjoining Arlington Cemetery was approved. While this legislation is going through the mill, plans are under way for construction of a 968-unit apartment hotel development on the site.

In a joint session with the Commission of Fine Arts, the planners approved designs for extension of Independence Avenue westward from Fourteenth Street Southwest to the river, modification of the roadway system at Lincoln Memorial and alteration of Columbia Island Circle.

The above projects are necessitated, according to the planners, by the anticipated increase in use of Arlington Memorial Bridge when the 20,000-employe War Department building across the river is completed next year.

Left unsettled yesterday, however, was the question as to whether the Independence Avenue extension through Potomac Park will cross the north arm of the Tidal Basin by bridge or causeway.

Meeting separately, the Fine Arts Commission approved:

A design by Paul P. Cret, noted architect, for the Maine Avenue overpass to be built at the intersection of Fourteenth Street, also for the purpose of relieving traffic congestion.

Designs submitted by Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, for a junior high school at Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast and a municipal incinerator at West Virginia and Mount Olivet Avenues Northeast.

Designs for the Mall temporary buildings approved by the planning agency.

Pretty Baltimore Girl Meets Young British Flight Student After 4-Year Mail Romance

Began 'Good Neighbor' Correspondence When Both Were in School

By the Associated Press

Arcadia, Fla., Nov. 14.—A young British flight student, who hopes to become a pilot for the Royal Air Force, climaxed four years of romance by mail today when he met pretty 20-year-old Doris Mae Stevens, of Baltimore.

Ray Keeling Dean, 21, wore his blue-gray dress uniform of the R. A. F. for the first time since he came here from Liverpool, England, when he greeted Doris at Carlstrom Field.

They had never seen each other before. They had kept up for four years a monthly correspondence, started when both were in high school. Doris left her job as stenographer for a chemical company in Baltimore to fly here for the week-end.

Dean was busy in classes when she arrived in Tampa earlier today, but a friend, Robert Fowler, drove her to Arcadia.

"I'm so glad to know you at last," she exclaimed as Dean stepped forward to greet her, with hands outstretched.

"This is a big moment in my life," he replied, grasping her hands and holding onto them for several minutes.

For the benefit of photographers, the couple managed a modest hug and kiss. Young Dean needed no urging to gaze at Doris, a pretty brunette with dark hair and eyes and fair skin. Standing 5 feet 2 inches, she was dressed in a blue wool turban and a blue crepe dress with light collar.

Dean's duties at Riddle Aeronautical Institute here limited his schedule for the weekend. He got off for the afternoon, but had to be back on duty at 8:30 p. m. and he was ordered to training flights tomorrow morning and afternoon.

For Saturday night, he planned a trip with Doris and their friend, Fowler, to Sarasota, where they will met Fowler's girl friend for dinner and a dance. Dean will devote most of Sunday to his visitor, but must be back on duty at 5:30 p. m.

Arrangements were made to fly Miss Stevens to Tampa Monday, to board a plane for the return to Baltimore.

The couple's courtship by mail began four years ago when both were in high school, as part of a "good neighbor" policy started by a teacher between students in American and English schools.

Chest Drive Lags; Speed Urged of Aides

Community Chest volunteer campaigners yesterday were urged to show "more speed" at the second report meeting yesterday as reports showed that but 13.81 per cent of the $2,000,000 goal had been attained.

The day's results of 9641 gifts, totaling $141,860.16, brought the campaign total to 16,490 gifts for $276,233.77, it was announced.

For the first two days this is an all-time low in the Chest's 14 years of campaigns, it was observed by Herbert L. Willett, jr., the director.

Addressing the meeting in the Willard Hotel, Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, said "You are the group who make possible every constructive thing in this community; you are the ones who must carry on in the face of confusion and despair. Within 12 blocks from where we are now sitting is a neighborhood from which comes 34 per cent of all the juvenile delinquent cases, 53 per cent of the cases in St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The response yesterday from business firms and employes was reported as 1380 pledges for $66,098.38, bringing the group solicitation unit total to 2345 pledges for $138,708.54, or 20.45 per cent of its quota.

The metropolitan unit reported 815 pledges for $23,268, enlarging the unit total of 2024 pledges for $49,536, of 12.2 of its quota.

The Federal Government unit reported 7263 pledges for $50,413.20. Thereby its total was brought to 11,660 gifts realizing $84,146.10, of 10.04 per cent of its quota.

Reporting for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Norman Cann, the bureau's assistant commissioner, said that the bureau now stands 93 per cent of its quota, with $28,276 in hand, out of a goal of $30,400. Reported as exceeding the quota assigned was the miscellaneous tax unit, with 110 per cent; personnel division with 101 per cent and the technical staff, with 104 per cent.

The "Rose of Distinguished Service" was awarded Mrs. Stanley F. Reed by the general chairman, John Clifford Folger. Mrs. Reed is in her third year as chairman of the Community Chest League of year-round volunteers for the Chest and is a vice chairman of the Committee on National Mobilization for Human Needs. Group singing was led by Justin Laurie, choir director, Foundry Methodist Church. The invocation was given by Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church and director of the Catholic Charities, a Chest agency. Coleman Jennings, president of the Chest, attended.

House to Act Monday on Rent Bill

Rep. Patman May Block Consideration Under Unanimous Consent Rule

Unanimous House consent to Senate amendments of the District rent control bill, fixing rent rates at the January 1, 1941, level, may be sought next Monday, Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, said yesterday.

His announcement followed a discussion of the bill with Chairman McCarran, of the Senate District Committee, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas ,and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

If there is objection to unanimous consent concurrence, House conferees will be appointed to meet with Senate conferees on the measure, he said.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, sponsor of an amendment basing a rent administrator's fair-rates decision on the investment value of a landlord's property, said Thursday he will oppose House passage of the bill without his amendment. The Senate dropped his amendment when it unanimously passed the measure Thursday.

Representative Randolph, sponsor of the bill, said yesterday that he was "highly pleased" with the bill in the form it was passed by the Senate.

'International Squadron' Flies Familiar Air Routes

Ronald Reagan and Competent Cast Work Valiantly to Make Old Theme Seem New; Diversified Variety Bill on Earle Stage

"INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Frank Wead, adapted to the screen by Barry Trivers, featuring Ronald Reagan, Olympe Bradna and James Stephenson, with Cliff Edwards, William Lundigan, John Ridgely, Reginald Denny, Joan Perry, Selmer Jackson, Holmes Herbert, Crauford Kent and Michael Ames. Directed by Lewis Seiler. At the Earle Theater.

THE PRINCIPAL HANDICAP borne by "International Squadron" is that it is the last of its line to reach the local screen, instead of the first. It comes now as a slightly dim carbon copy rather than a fresh and novel original. Its chief point of difference from its predecessors reposes in the unnecessarily subordinated "international" aspect of its flying personnel. The story is of the foremost figures in a fighting ariplane squadron in the R. A. F., composed of exiles from all of Europe's conquered countries and a few self-expatriated Americans. The accent is heavily on the Americans and their squadron commander.

RONALD REAGAN

This Warner Brothers adaptation of a story by Frank Wead, foremost of the cinema's scenarists in anything having to do with combat aviation, utilizes the familiar formula of flip young Yankee flier, impetuously joining the Royal Air Force after ferrying a bomber to England, playing havoc among the women, incurring the enmity of his comrades and the stern rebukes of his superior officers, by defying all the laws of "playing the game," and finally winding up the tragic hero of the outfit, to whom everybody drinks a final respectful toast.

Except for slight variations, the identical story has been seen in "Dawn Patrol," "Dive Bomber," "Test Pilot," "A Yank in the R. A. F." and a considerable list of other recent and remote releases.

Except that the cloud formations forming the background for the aerial dog fights are not quite so picturesque and decorative as usual, "International Squadron" is about on a parity with its numerous blood brothers. It is pitched in a high key, is sparked by a steady flow of crisp dialogue and leavened with a reasonable amount of rough-and-ready comedy. Its romantic elements are a little underdone, but that is compensated for by some early air raid shots in London that are proportionately overdone—if that is possible. Anything can happen with bombs raining down from the skies and here it does, usually on the miraculous side, lest one of the principals be wiped out too soon for the later benefit of Mr. Wead's belated fable.

Competent Cast Plays With Zest

The pivotal characters are portrayed with speed and spontaneity by a youthful cast that gets plenty of zip into its work, especially Ronald Reagan, the present counterpart of Tyrone Power, Errol Flynn and the other soaring smart alecks who have jeopardized their outfits before covering them with glory. Reagan has a great facility in the turning of the smart-cracking phrase and both looks and acts like a hair-brained young fellow who might do precisely the things he does. Olympe Bradna, wearing her most delightful French accent, is as prominently cast as the secondary feminine roles will permit and both Julie Bishop and Joan Perry add brief touches that lend the film a vague sort of balance. The late James Stephenson contributes the best male performance, next to Reagan's, as the squadron commander, with William Lundigan, John Ridgely, Reginald Denny and Cliff Edwards, for "comedy relief," swelling the list of competents.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is more straight vaudeville than closely coordinated revue, but no less diversified and diverting on that account. Practically any act on the program could be the headliner. Wally Brown and Annette Ames score, as usual, with their lively patter, songs, dances and the ebullient Mr. Brown's disjointed chatter. Lester Oman with his "little people" demonstrates to what perfection puppeteering can be brought. Stuart and Lea execute some flashy dances, in which a red and black cape is important, and the Canestrellis, all five of them, prove again that they are among the most expert of the equilibrists. The Roxyettes, not quite so infallible as usual, are in and out in routines that could have done with a bit more precision yesterday afternoon.

"Meet the Champs"—Ken and Walt Wilhelm, wizards with the bow and arrow—a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," with Ted Husing providing the commentary; "Rookie Review," a Merrie Melodie cartoon in color; the Paramount News, and overture, conducted by Freddie Clark at yesterday's first performance, supplement a feature that shouldn't have missed that first bus.

Metropolitan

That hairline between the completely unbelievable and the bewitchingly incredible is strung on the screen of the Metropolitan these days, where "The Maltese Falcon" is again on view after a stanza at the Earle. One of the surprises of the year, this taut and engrossing mystery yarn is tops at keeping practically everything from its audience without once losing its interest.

A reformed Humphrey Bogart—and a likable, if wily, individual he turns out to be—costars with Mary Astor, a past mistress at the art of being mysterious. They are brought together when she applies for help at the private detective office he runs with a partner who's something of a masher. Before their adventure ends, they mix with a sinister Peter Lorre, a tearful Gladys George, a sniveling Elisha Cook, jr., and a fat fellow whose screen debut must be one of the events of the year—suave, roly-poly Sidney Greenstreet, whose recent years on the stage have been with the Lunt-Fontanne acting ensemble.

Credit for the corking success of "The Maltese Falcon" goes to John Huston, who made the adaptation from Dashiell Hammett's book and also directed. It's a shrewd and thorough job. His father, Walter Huston, makes a brief appearance near the end in a pivotal role.

Also on the Metropolitan screen is Robert Benchley's advice on how to take a vacation, good and typical Benchley. R. L. C.

Colbert Gets Comedy Role

When Claudette Colbert's experiment into slapstick comedy for Director-Producer Mark Sandrich in "Skylark" proved a huge success, the star set herself right up for a picture with Director-Writer Preston Sturges, who has put slapstick into the realm of art. As a result, Sturges now is writing for Miss Colbert and Joel McCrea, who did his first slapstick in "Sullivan's Travels," a story which will be wholly comedy.

And whenever any of the Milford youngsters was hurt in a play, that man treated the player and tended the wounds . . . His administrations were quite helpful—for that afternoon the school had, as its team's doctor, the most eminent practitioner who ever sat on a players' bench in all the history of football. He's Thomas Parran, Surgeon-General of the United States Army.

"The Black Stallion," a juvenile book which has been selected by the Junior Literary Guild, now is being released. The publishers decided, as a publicity stunt, to send a rider astride a black horse up and down Fifth Avenue, carrying signs advertising the book . . . Application was made to the License Bureau, which refused to issue a permit . . . "You may use a baby-carriage or a steamroller," was the edict, "but no horse. The municipal ordinances prohibit horses from being used as publicity stunts on Fifth Avenue. The ordinances, however, make no mention of baby carriages or steamrollers."

Maynard Barnes, who was Charge d'Affaires at the American Embassy in Paris—before he returned to this country—was invited to attend a dinner given by Alexander K. Small, the correspondent who headed the American Press Club in Paris. Pierre Laval was one of the scheduled speakers . . . Barnes accepted, but on condition that any attack Laval made against the United States would not go unanswered. When Laval arose, he began to deliver a one-hour harangue concerning America . . . "I'm not going to sit by and have no reply made to this," said Barnes—and asked: "May I please have the floor?" . . . "No, sir," Small ruled. "You're out of order."

In Greenfield Village, where Henry Ford has brought and restored to their original state the historic buildings and implements associated with his own and the past of America, is the little red schoolhouse he had attended. There, beside the Lincoln buildings and the home where Tom Edison had made his experiments in light and sound, Ford frequently returns and sits in the house of his childhood . . . When Ford purchased that schoolhouse he, and a classmate who still is his friend, discovered that the original desks and chairs had been sold many years before. He therefore employed an architect to build duplicate sets, from specifications tugged from their memories. After the desks were installed, Ford and his friend sat in the places they once had occupied, drew knives, and carved their initials—just as they had done, 70 years before.

Into the shop of Ponce de Leon, the Manhattan shirtmaker who bears one of the most historic of Spanish names, came a quiet, modest man who ordered some shirts . . . "You're Spanish, eh?" he asked the customer. "What's your name?" . . . "Alvarez," was the answer—Alvarez, a name which is as common in Madrid as Smith is here . . . "Do you plan to return to Spain?" asked Ponce de Leon . . . "Although I am Alvarez, a common man," was the reply, "I will not return while Franco remains" . . . Alvarez was his name—but only his first. His full name is Alvarez del Vayo, refugee Foreign Minister of the Spanish Republic.

They're In Again!

Hollywood, Nov. 14 (INS).—If Buddy De Sylva laughed himself sick over the first part of "Road to Morocco," the rest of us ought to get a few laughs, too. That's as much of the script as is finished, but in the movie will be Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour—the three who brought the paying customers into the theater to see "Road to Singapore" and "The Road to Zanzibar." In "Road to Morocco" Dorothy Lamour changes her sarong for a sari when she plays the queen of the harem. Well, Dorothy could be a queen of almost anything, according to the soldier boys, who write so many letters about her that I am getting writer's cramp trying to answer 'hem.

DOROTHY LAMOUR

One reason Dotty and Bob retain their popularity is because they are always so nice to the fans and go out of their way to sign autographs and never act in the least bored. I was amused at Bob at Suzanne Danker's birthday party. His little daughter, Linda, refused to drink her milk unless he held the glass—and if you don't think that he's her slave you ought to see him with her.

Marlene Dietrich is back in town, and when I told her of the reports that she and her husband, Rudolph Sieber, had discussed a legal separation after her attorney, Greg Bautzer, joined her in New York, she laughed and said, "You've been denying that story for eight years. You can say again that I will never divorce my husband nor he me. I have a great affection for him and we are excellent friends. Moreover, I respect his judgment and opinion." Marlene is getting ready for "The Spoilers," which she says starts December 15. "I still have another picture to make for Universal on my contract, since 'The Spoilers,' which Charlie Feldman arranged, is not counted on that agreement."

I had a talk with the new Academy president, Bette Davis, at Kay Francis' party. I had just finished reading "In This Our Life" and I was curious to know whether Bette is playing Stanley, the selfish sister, or Roy, the one who loses even her husband to Stanley. "Yes, I am playing Stanley, the meanie," said Bette, "and loving it. Olivia De Havilland's role of Roy is just as important, and she is a much nicer girl. I am killed in the end, which, I suppose, is the just retribution the Hays office feels necessary." Bette, who won the Academy award two years ago and was a strong contender last year, will make a fine president. Always in the past there has been so much grief over seating arrangements at the award dinner, but, knowing Bette's absolute fairness, you can know this year it will be first come, first served.

Uncle Sam Peeks in the Mirror

Hollywood, Nov. 14.

Every studio in town has from one to five fine pictures ready for release, and it's being talked about all over the country by public and critics. People are asking why there are so many good ones. Well, I'll tell you. For years, Hollywood made pictures for the foreign trade. Pictures were pseudo-sophisticated and a bit on the decadent side, about and with people who were sometimes unpleasant. Now, since the world market has gone bye-bye, we're making pictures for and with Americans. After all, we're the pappy of this industry, but for long stretches we forgot that fact, and America seemed less important than Europe. Now that we're concentrating on our own, the public's again standing in line at the box office.

NORMA SHEARER

You can make book on the fact that Hal Wallis will not join the RKO group, even though there's been lots of chit-chat about it.

I asked Norma Shearer for news, and she said, "Well, we're finishing 'We Were Dancing' two and a half weeks ahead of schedule, which is the first time that's ever happened on a Shearer picture." I watched her do a scene with Lee Bowman, and left regretting the fact that he, instead of Melvyn Douglas, didn't get her for the fadeout. I have a hunch many of the audience will feel the same way.

The reason Jane Tibbett didn't remain here for all the parties planned for her and Larry was that the day she arrived she had a telephone call from her 19-year-old son, saying he had eloped with an 18-year-old Southern belle. Jane flew back to arrange a real wedding and reception for them. Larry's son, Larry, jr., will be joining the Army this month.

Ran into Louis B. Mayer congratulating Van Heflin on his performance in "Johnny Eager." Said Louis, "It's one of the greatest performances I've ever seen on the screen." Of course, I had to put in my two cents worth, and said, "That statement's going to cost you money when his option rolls around." "Oh, no," replied Louis. "Van Heflin is a gentleman, and he wouldn't think of doing anything like that." Well, I'll say this for Louis. He's one of the few producers here who doesn't wait for an actor to become dissatisfied with his pay check. Those who make good get an increase before they ask for it.

Senator Ernest McFarland, who helped the movies in that Washington investigation, will soon be headed our way to be house guest of Jack Moffitt, who did O. K. by us, too.

That next Lum and Abner epic ought to be something, with ZaSu Pitts, as Geraldine, Pine Ridge's old maid, playing Lum's big moment. Geraldine keeps backing out of the yoke because Lum isn't romantic enough.

Well, for pity's sake! Everybody bosses me these days. An irate fan writes in: "You said Jeffrey Lynn was fine in 'International Squadron' and never mentioned that my darling Ronald Reagan was the star. Do something, quick!"

Irving Cummings will use records from his musical library made by the Sun Dodgers Jazz Band, waxed in 1921, for cutbacks in "My Gal Sal." If he'd get the original My Gal Sal—Louise Dresser—in the picture, he wouldn't need a cutback.

For his part in "Martin Eden" Stu Erwin has a tattooed lady on his chest and, as a muscle dancer, he makes her do her stuff all through the picture.

Bucknell Turns Back George Washington, 6-0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To hear Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty tell it, the first five minutes of the Redskins' affair with the Bears at Chicago tomorrow will be the most important five minutes of the game. He said so yesterday before shepherding his athletes onto the Capital Limited for the West.

POVICH

"That five minutes after the opening kickoff is either going to ease my mind or be the forerunner of a lot of suffering for me on Sunday afternoon," said Flaherty. "That's when I can tell what kind of a job I've done in firing this team up to the game with the Bears. I'll know before a third of the first period is over whether we'll win or lose."

Ever since he brought the Redskins to Washington five years ago, Flaherty has been hepped on the subject of pregame moods. As he explains it, his big, adult, hard-bitten college graduates go up and down the emotional scales like a collection of all the temperamental grand opera divas of history. Flaherty vows that their frame of mind is completely unpredictable.

"They don't have to go out and score a quick touchdown against the Bears to show me they've got a lot of determination Sunday," said Flaherty. "If they are out their putting a lot of zip into their game it will be all right with me. If they're sluggish at the start, Heaven help us, because I'll know we're licked. If a club doesn't have it at the start, they'll never have it that afternoon."

Redskin Coach Feared Worst

Making no attempt to second-guess himself, Flaherty confesses that he was deeply disturbed on the eve of the Redskins' 73-0 defeat by the Bears last December. "I knew then, but I couldn't afford to say so, that we were in no shape mentally to beat a team like the Bears. Our club was off-guard after beating the Bears a couple of weeks before. I could see that beating by the Bears coming for a week, although not by any such score as 73-0. Our fellows were acting as if the Bears were going to beat themselves without any help from us."

Flaherty's worst fears were realized that day when on the second play from scrimmage Bill Osmanski galloped 68 yards for a touchdown to turn on the torrent of 11 touchdowns that followed. A line backer-up, a guard who was pulled back into the secondary, missed his assignment and Osmanski, instead of being throw for a loss behind the line where Jim Barber slowed him up on his deep end run, broke into the clear. "I knew then that we weren't wide awake," said Flaherty.

The Redskins coach says, however, that he always will believe that his team might have pulled itself out of that awful beginning if a Redskin end had held onto Sammy Baugh's pass a couple of minutes later. "We came back pretty strong after first touchodwn and if Baugh's pass had been held, we'd have had a tie score in the first five minutes. As it was, we had to give up the ball on their 20-yard line. We muffed our first scoring chance and with the Bears scoring right off the bat, we were gone cookies. Our own failure to score took a lot out of us."

The odds in Chicago are 4 to 1 against the Redskins, but for 4 to 1 shots they are in pretty good hands. If any football coach can bring a team up to a game in the proper frame of mind, Flaherty seems to be the fellow. We saw him in action in the dressing room when the Redskins were meeting the Giants in the 1936 play-off at New York. He had them whipped to such a fury that any Redskin who might have smiled during his pep-talk would have been rent limb by limb by his grim teammates. On the opening play of that ball game, three Giants were hit so hard by Redskins that time had to be called and Giant Halfback Tony Sarausky was taken from the field with a broken leg.

Has Faith in Five-Man Line

As for stopping the Bears' T-formation, Flaherty has been won over to the five-man line, invented by his old mentor, Steve Owen, of the Giants. It was the Redskins' five-man line that kept the Bears outside of the Redskin 15-yardline in their first battle last year, until the final minute, and Flaherty is convinced it is the solution to the T-attack despite the 73-0 affair a couple of weeks later.

"It's up to us, strictly, said the Redskin coach. "Our five-man line stopped 'em once and it can again, if we play it right. But if one man in our secondary muffs his job or isn't wide awake, it can be pretty sad for us.

"The Bears can do a lot of things off that T-formation. In fact, they don't know what they're going to do themselves until Sid Luckman takes that ball from center. He has protection and time enough to see how the defense lays. If our line backer-up had Osmanski covered on that touchdown play last year, Osmanski wouldn't have gotten the ball behind the line from Luckman. That play would have been a pass downfield. Luckman saw that our line backer was sucked in by the left half back's fake into the line, and that's when he handed the ball to Fullback Osmanski. Against the Bears, you can't make mistakes."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

FROM LAB TO GRIDIRON

New York, Nov. 14.—New York's modest and unassuming football teams, Columbia and New York University, where the scholars hardly have time to change from the white aprons of their thoughtful laboratory work before it's time to get into football gear, meet the rather awesome invasion of Michigan and Tulane tomorrow.

CONSIDINE

Adjusting their horn-rimmed spectacles, and peering down into Baker Field from the distant windows of their classical classes, the Columbia team caught a horrified sight of Michigan's big and unending squad aggressively working out today at the scene of tomorrow's battle.

Many were the soft ejaculations that emitted from the size 12½ necks of Lou Little's team. One of the rowdier Lions, a 146-pound fullback, was heard to swear "Gee Willikens," which infamous language nearly caused Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler to ask for the player's uniform.

The New York University players, among them some of the finest young swivel-hipped botanists and broken-field running premedical students, were spared the sight of the huge and hostile Tulane team's workout.

Even when the Violets, as they are appropriately called, were told after their course in petunia husbandry that there isn't a man in the Tulane line who weighs less than 200, and that regular Tulane Tackles Blandin and Bufour stand 6-feet-4 and total 486 pounds, they maintained an academic calm.

Violets Don't Need to Shrink

"Dr. Badger has promised us that those men won't hurt us," a 135-pound guard assured his fellow players. He was referring to a recent article by Dr. Philip O. Badger, the school's board of athletic control chairman. Explaining why N. Y. U. still plays one of the toughest schedules in the country, even though the team has been purified to the point of bloodlessness, Dr. Badger badgered critics by flatly stating that none of the Violets' opponents have hurt a single Violet player.

At a late hour last night Dr. Badger had not yet accepted our invitation to take a position in the N. Y. U. line tomorrow and enjoy one of those nice little workouts with the congenial opponents. If the prof accepts, and dons those moleskins, we want to be there when 235-pound Harley McCollum, all-America tackle, mousetraps him playfully and 251-pound Ernie Blandin gives him a mild case of decapitation with a hoydenish, fun-loving block.

Anyway, it will be a great consolation in Ward A at French Hospital, after the Tulane-N. Y. U. game, for the bandaged Violets to reflect on the good professor's cheering words. Not since the first fight manager—he was a friend of either Cain or Abel—uttered that deathless line, "Get in there and fight; they can't hoit us," has a sentence been spoken with more chance of ringing down the corridors of time than the professor's statement that big boys don't hurt little boys.

Kuzma at Michigan, Via Harmon

Columbia has met teams as big as Michigan, and sometimes it has conquered them. But it is unfair to Little to expect too many miracles. Fritz Crisler has brought one of his better teams East. One hears a lot about Crisler's backs, especially the immortal Harmon. But one, maybe more, overlooks the fact that year in and out Crisler builds great lines, and this year is no exception. And great lines make, or do a lot to make, all-America backs. Michigan has more than its share of great backs this year.

Variety Club Plans Game In December

Post-Season Tilt Would Be Played For Charity; Details To Be Arranged

Negotiations are under way to match the football teams of Georgetown and Georgia Tech in a December post-season charity game at Griffith Stadium, The Post learned yesterday.

The game would be sponsored by the Variety Club, under the direction of Carter Barron, Georgia Tech '27, and most of the proceeds would be used by the club for local charity work.

The last local Variety Club-sponsored football game was played in 1937 at Catholic University between a District all-star scholastic team and Georgia Trades and Vocational School, coached by Red Barron, brother of Carter.

While Barron emphasized last night that neither Georgia Tech nor Georgetown had agreed to the game and that many details had to be worked out, he appeared confident that it could be arranged and he predicted that it would arouse great interest.

Georgia Tech, long one of Dixie's football powers, has never appeared here, Barron pointed out, and many of its alumni in this section would welcome the sight of their alma mater eleven. Though Tech hasn't played here, the Engineers and Georgetown's Hoyas are not exactly gridiron strangers.

Met Five Times

A search of the files revealed that Georgetown and Georgia Tech met five times at Atlanta, from 1919 through 1923, and each time the Engineers gave their visitors a most inhospitable walloping. Tech won, 27-0, 35-6, 21-7, 19-7 and 18-10.

In the light of Georgetown's repeated promises to bring powerful teams into the District, this post-season game with Georgia Tech may presage a renewal of formal relations between the intersectional rivals.

Though neither Georgetown nor Georgia Tech is currently among the Nation's pigskin elite, each boasts a troublesome and flashy eleven. As of last night, both had won three games and lost three, with Georgetown's most notable victory a 16-6 upset of Ole Miss, and Tech's outstanding accomplishment a 28-14 trouncing of Auburn.

Tricky Attack

Under the coaching of Bill Alexander, class of '12, Georgia Tech is noted for its tricky attack and speed, and it always is a high-scoring team, win or lose. For instance last year the Engineers encountered a particularly bad year with only three victories against seven defeats, yet they scored 20 points on Notre Dame, 19 on Georgia, 13 on Alabama, 19 on Vanderbilt and 13 on California.

With Tech pitting its modified Notre Dame system against Georgetown's bewildering spread formation, their game probably would produce the kind of sensational football that the fans love.

Though no hint of the date of this proposed game has been given, it would be no surprise if it were to be played on Sunday. Georgetown is known to have no objection to playing on the Sabbath day—it contemplates regularly scheduled Sunday games in the future—and Tech probably hasn't either.

Po' Plainfield: Little School That Wasn't

By George Kirksey

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 14.—Ain't it a shame about the Plainfield (N. J.) Teachers? With an unbeaten, untied season in their grasp they came a cropper in a telephone booth last Tuesday.

With perhaps the mightiest collection of football satellites ever gathered on one club, the Plainfield Teachers were headed for gridiron immortality until along about sundown Armistice Day. They had bowled over all opposition and were getting ready to entertain bowl bids until a certain party, identity unknown, dropped a nickel in a telephone box and dialed Pennsylvania 6-4000.

"Hello, Herald-Tribune," said the voice. "Let me have the sports department."

When the sports department of the Herald-Tribune answered, the voice said: "I'll give you fellows a tip. There ain't no such college as Plainfield Teachers. Bunch of fellows down in Wall Street are kidding you." Then he hung up.

That's how the bubble that was Plainfield Teachers burst when it was sailing serenely on to gridiron greatness. Plainfield was just a phantom, make-believe college. It never had a real flesh in the blood player, a campus, a student body or coach. Irving Marsh of the Herald-Tribune, acting on the anonymous tip, ran down the truth of Plainfield Teachers and found out that since October 25 New York papers who had been running scores of Plainfield's games were being hoaxed.

It all came about when some of the boys at Newburger, Loeb & Co., one of Wall Street's big brokerage houses, who had a lot of time on their hands, decide to create a fantasy college. They hired a mythical coach, a publicity man, subsidized some high school stars and arranged a fancy schedule. Every week the make-believe publicity man, "Jerry Croyden" called or wired the New

G. U. Favored Over Wolfpack Here Today

After a lapse of 20 years, Georgetown and North Carolina State will renew football relations at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Griffith Stadium before about 12,000 fans.

The Hoyas and the Wolfpack will be meeting for the ninth time in a series begun in 1908, and Georgetown will be seeking its fifth victory against two losses and as many ties with the North Carolinians.

Georgetown, despite a backfield riddled by injuries, rules a comfortable favorite over State, which will feature a pair of former Anacostia High stars, Art Faircloth and Flash Gordon.

Hoya Hopes on Dornfeld

The Hoyas, improving steadily since their disastrous early season upset by V. P. I., should be ready today. Last week they knocked off Maryland, 26-0, with a spectacular display of passing by Frank Dornfeld, and today Dornfeld again is expected to head the Georgetown attack.

This triple-threat junior halfback will start the game at wingback, but will alternate with Benny Bulvin at tailback in a backfield which may be missing two of its brightest figures. Joe Gyrogydeak, sophomore fullback, definitely is out of the game and Benny Reiges, promising sophomore passer, is on the doubtful list. Even should Reiges manage to play, he hardly will be able to pass, for his injury is in his right shoulder, which is his throwing arm.

Outside of Gyrogydeak and Reiges, the Hoyas appear in pretty fair shape. Quarterback Lou Falcone may be a little under the weather owing to a bad hand and a weakness lingering from an attack of grippe last week, but Coach Jack Hagerty has adjudged him fit to take his place in the starting backfield.

Aerial Battle Looms

Only change in the Georgetown lineup will find Whitey Erickson resuming his place at center, with Ed Derringe being held in reserve.

With Georgetown hoping to utilize the newly found passing ability of Dornfeld and also the proved deadly throwing of Bulvin, the game may turn out to be a duel of the air lanes, for North Carolina State is

Northwestern Picked to Beat Notre Dame; Duquesne Choice Over Mississippi State

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Durham, N. C., Nov. 14.—On a college football program like tomorrow's, almost any selection you make is likely to bounce back in your face. Virtually every game renews a traditional rivalry, and tradition has a nasty habit of packing an upset punch.

Of the eight front line teams which still are undefeated, this corner looks for two to b eeliminated from that select group, Northwestern attending to the eliminating in the case of Notre Dame and undefeated, untied Duquesne being the choice over unbeaten, once tied Mississippi State.

That leaves Minnesota, Texas A. and M., and Duke in the all-winning class, and Texas and Utah in the tied division. All of them are picked to win, yet even Duke, against a North Carolina team that has been whipped five times in eight years, can't afford to take anything for granted—and no one is more certain of that than the most loyal Duke rooter.

Having stuck out its neck in a general way, this corner proceeds to get specific about its selections (home teams first', probable attendin parenthesis):

Northwestern-Notre Dame (48,000)—This choice goes to Northwestern because of an inescapable feeling that somebody should be able to whip the Irish. That task must include stopping the passes of Angelo Bertelli, something no team has done on a dry field. Getting shakier every minute, but still a vote, if a shaky one, for Northwestern.

Stanford-Washington State (30,000—With the Rose Bowl almost in

48,000 to See Northwestern, Irish Game

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 14.—Two of the high ranking teams in the Nation—Notre Dame and Northwestern—come together before 48,000 fans tomorrow. With Notre Dame's chances for its first undefeated season in 11 years riding on the outcome.

The Irish, who'll wind up their schedule a week hence against a mediocre Southern California eleven, will enter the tilt a slight favorite. One reason is sentimental, for thousands of fans are pulling for the Irish to roll on to their first unbeaten record since Knute Rockne's last team did it in 1930.

The other reason, and a more solid one, is the pitching magic in the arm of Sophomore Angelo Bertelli, who has completed 52 of 89 passes for 813 yards.

The only game in which Bertelli's aerial attack grounded this fall was that scoreless tie in the mud with Army. The forecast for tomorrow indicates a dry field which should aid not only Bertell but also a Notre Dame line which has an edge in speed.

Northwestern, however, has a passer of note in Sophomore Otto Graham. The Wildcats, loser of close ones to Michigan and Minnesota, also have a dangerous breakaway runner in Bill De Correvont and a power driver in Don Clawson, who almost single-handedly whipped the Irish 20-0 last year.

Gus Lesnevich Scores Over Mauriello

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 14.—His left hook hitting like a cannon, Gus Lesnevich retained his world light-heavyweight championship before a howling crowd in Madison Square Garden tonight by giving young Tami Mauriello an artistic going-over for 15 rip-roaring rounds. Lesnevich weighed 173¾, Mauriello 173½.

A surprisingly good turn out of 12,213 contributed to a gross pot of $28,268 to sit in on the festivities.

Turning in his second decision in three months over the kid from the Bronx, the rugged Russian from Cliffside, N. J., had Tami wobbly legged three times during the fight, piling up a big early margin, and was the decisive victor, despite an amazing comeback by Mauriello.

It was Lesnevich's first defense of the 175-pound crown since he became undisputed king of the division three months ago—and it may be his last. He had trouble getting down under the light-heavyweight limit for this tussle, and has his eye on the big boys now. His first outing among the heavyweights may be against Billy Conn, for whom he has been tentatively penciled in as a February opponent.

Staggers Tami

There was no question about the winner tonight, as there was in the last fight. Referee Arthur Donovan and both judges voted in his favor and the Associated Press score card gave him eight rounds, with five for Mauriello and two even.

Gus used two things during the fight that Tami couldn't fathom. A left hand, particularly when fired as a hook, landed in Mauriello's face as regularly as the landlord arriving on the first of the month. The game but somewhat inexperienced New Yorker just couldn't help getting his head in the way of it every time Gus let it go.

In addition, the Jersey joiler, fighting one of the best battles—particularly from a ring-generalship point of view—belted Mauriello about the body so thoroughly and so hard that Tami was gasping for air by the time the tenth round came around.

For a while in the second and third frames it looked like Tami wasn't going to be with the party long. In the second, Gus landed

Colonials' Fumble Aids In Victory

Bisons Recover Ball On G. W. 20, March To Goal; OPM Delays Start to Save Power

By Jack Munhall

George Washington's most disastrous football season since 1929 continued to grow worse last night when a tricky Bucknell eleven seized upon a second-period fumble for a touchdown and managed to preserve the margin to the finish for a 6-0 victory at Griffith Stadium.

An estimated 6000 fans, including about 2000 soldiers admitted free, watched Bucknell score its fifth triumph against three losses, while the punchless Colonials capitulated in their sixth loss as compared with one success and one tie.

The game was mysteriously delayed 15 minutes. G. W. spokesmen said the delay was prompted by an order from the OPM, but this could not be confirmed. Pepco officials denied any shortage of power.

Fumble Leads to Score

Bucknell's touchdown was set up when Johnny Pollock fumbled on his own 20 and Chet Podd recovered for Bucknell. Co-Capt. Mel Knupp, the Bisons' great halfback who later was carried from the game with a possible shoulder fracture, passed to Frank De Angelis for a first down on the 7. Two plays later Knupp took the ball from Fullback Jim Reichert on a delayed buck and shot over his own right guard for the score. With Walter Wenrick holding, Knupp's placement attempt was wide. Wenrick, a fine blocking back, played 60 minutes for the Bisons.

George Washington, its attack as spotty and uncertain as ever, was unable to pass Bucknell's 33 and did not get that far until late in the final quarter. Then the Colonials, with Sophomore Pollock and Walter Fedora sparking their running attack, marched 29 yards before a fourth-down pass failed and the Bisons took the ball on downs.

Graham Injured

Statistics failed to bear out Bucknell's superiority in this hard-fought game, in which Jim Graham, G. W. halfback, suffered a badly sprained ankle and several other players of both teams received lesser hurts.

First downs were even at ten each and George Washington outgained Bucknell, 208 yards to 148, but the one big break of the game—Pollock's fumble was enough to

65,000 to See Army-Penn Battle Today

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Army and Penn, both beaten once this season, meet tomorrow at Franklin Field before a crowd expected to reach 65,000—including 600 cadets—in the third game of a series renewed last year. The kickoff is scheduled for 2 p. m.

The game stacks up as a battle between two evenly matched teams although Penn is rated a slight favorite by many observers. Army fell last week 20 to 6 to Harvard, a team beaten 19 to 0 by Penn in the opening game of the season.

Jere Maupin, the Cadets' forward passing ace who was kept out of the Harvard game because of injuries, is scheduled to return to the lineup against the Quakers.

Penn, beaten only by Navy, 13 to 6, will be at full strength with the exception of Bert Kuczynski, injured last week against Columbia and is expected to be sidelined for the remainder of the season. Sophomore Frank Quillen will start in his place.

Pennsylvania and Army first met in 1901 at West Point with the Cadets winning 25 to 0. Last year Penn evened the score with a 48 to 0 victory.

Raiders' 1st-Period Lead Is Overcome; Vikings to Face Anacostia Thursday

Their two-year clutch on the interhigh football crown was reluctantly relinquished by Western High's Red Raiders yesterday when Central, coming from behind, romped to a 21-7 victory that earned a title playoff with Anacostia on Thanksgiving morning.

The championship game thus will involve neither team which saw battle last year. The Vikings take the west section berth over yesterday's foe, and Anacostia, its place clinched last week, takes the east section spot held by Tech in 1940.

The clash yesterday at Central Stadium gave some 3500 fans plenty to thrill about. It was Western's for three minutes, and then it was Central's the rest of the way.

In that first three minutes the Raiders, profiting by a Viking fumble deep in its own territory, pushed over a touchdown. Central came back with a 76-yard march that tied matters and then won with a pair of breaks, each of which, however, necessitated considerable smart football.

Maurice Horton, filling in for injured Stan Valanos at fullback, accounted for the bulk of Central's score—two touchdowns. Close behind came slender Wingman Jack Samperton, who booted three perfect conversions and then dropped on a Western fumble for a 6-pointer.

Goodman Star for Losers

Taking the opening kickoff, Central tried one play before Horton was tackled hard and fumbled. Fullback Goodman, whose play outshone that of many of the winners, recovered on the 24 and there started the Raiders' scoring drive. A first down on th 10 was hung up by Goodman and the Raiders were aided by a pass interference on the 5. Two plays later Duke O'Connell plowed through center for the score and Clarence Kuldell converted.

Not until early in the second period could Central summon strength for its tying march. That likewise stared on the Central 24, moving on the devastating power furnished by Horton, little Mike Denikos and a charging Central wall to Western's 1-foot line. It took Horton one sock at the line for a score.

Then came the fireworks. Western tried one play with the second-half kickoff before Horton sliced in to atone for his first-half fumble. He snared Kuldell's pass on the 38, dashed all the way across the field and tiptoed down the right sideline for his second score.

Out on 6-Inch Line

Spectators had hardly resumed their seats when lightning struck again. Again Western invited it and Central enjoyed a break to make it possible.

The latter was Denikos' punt from Western's 41, which bounced 467 ways and finally rolled out on the 6-inch line. For some reason Kuldell tried to run the ball on the next play, was tackled and fumbled. In the ensuing pileup it was Samperton who hugged the ball to him.

Western's only real threat against the Viking subs, who poured in thereafter, came late in the final quarter when it hung up three first downs and reached the Central 12. Its aerials fizzled then, and the threat was over.

Devitt Prep Wins, 24-6, Over Fairfax

Devitt Prep gridmen closed out their season in high style yesterday, trouncing Fairfax High on the Virginia school's gridiron, 24-6.

The victory brought Prep's record for the year to five wins, three losses and one tie.

For three periods it was a close contest, Devitt managing for a score in the first period. That tally resulted from a pass, Quarterback Price to End Cordell, and a 20-yard run by the latter.

Both clubs scored once in the third session. Devitt's came on a short plunge by its star point maker, George McGowan, and the losers finally found the range on Creekmore's 30-yard aerial which Earman carried 25 yards into pay territory.

The local club's big splurge was in the final stanza when Glasser and Smith, in quick succession, romped home.

Loyola High Defeats Little Hoyas, 26-13

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—Loyola High School came out on top in an intercity grid clash today, chalking up a 26-to-13 triumph over Georgetown Prep, of Washington.

The victors scored in every period, sparked by Bardleman at left half, who tallied two touchdowns.

Loyola had trouble getting started. Georgetown grabbed a fumbled kickoff and took the lead at the outset with a touchdown. The visitors took advantage of another fumble in the third frame, scoring from Loyola's 15-yard line. The Niller brothers, Don and Eddie, collaborated in scoring both counters for the Washingtonians.

Its sixth loss in eight games was suffered by Eastern High eleven yesterday as St. John's, smarting from a loss to Gonzaga early in the week, took an early lead and coasted to a 14-7 victory at the Tide field. The battle ended both teams' schedules.

The Johnnies started toward their fifth triumph in the opening quarter when Collins took a 20-yard toss from Buddy Speiss across the line. George Hughes added the first of his two placements.

Early in the second session, the Johnnies connected again, this time Tom Chisari slanting off tackle and dashing 14-yards to score.

Eastern's only retaliation was in the closing minutes of the first half when interference was ruled against St. John's on the 18. Two plays later Herby Adams plowed over from the 10 with half the Cadet club on is neck. Neil Craig converted.

Machine No. 2 took three from the Model Makers with Dutch Duerst's 351 and despite a 329 by Muir. Propulsion won a sweep over Material Testing.

MT. RAINIER LEAGUE

Harry Dawson's 150, 397 for Pinous Grill earned a sweep for his team over Maryland Electric in the Mt. Rainier League despite Len Smith's 150 game and high set of 406 for the losers. The Pinous boys also picked off the team high after a 618 game and 1804 set. Plaza, with Billy LaBille shooting a 377 set, won three from Saur's Service, while White Horse Inn took all games from Ed Negus Service.

ARCADIA

Irma Casassa, of the Greyhounds, with 135, and Viola Bechtold, of the Ames Stores, with 347, topped the Ladies Independent League at Arcadia with the first helping her team win high game with 543 and the latter sparking high set with a total of 1538.

SILVER SPRING

The Silver Spring Businessmen's League had Bob Stokes, Southern Maryland Seafood, with a 142 single and Ted Smith's 352 as highs by individuals, the latter's score helping his team win top totals after a 572 game and 1592 set, the boys also winning a sweep over Walsh Motors. Gottwal's Builders had a 1592 set also.

ARLINGTON

A 141-377 by Fadley of Southern Iron Works and J. T. Wallace's 377 for Heflin's No. 2 led the Recreation League at Arlington Bowling Center with the latter's score enabling his team to win high game with a 576 total. The Arlington Theater's 1615 was best team set. Heflin Plumbers, Heflin's No. 2 and Arlington Theater scored respective sweeps over Conklyn's Flowers, Cohen Jewelry and F & H Parking.

G. P. O. A League

Robert Pearson turned in a sparkling 194 game last night as the Computers turned back Miscellaneous in the G. P. O. A Bowling League on the G. P. O. alleys last night. He registered two strikes and seven spares compiling his top score. His set score was 442.

Clarendon Schedules Bowling Event Today

Scheduled to start at 2 o'clock this afternoon, the Clarendon 108 Handicap Tournament for women already has a number of outstanding stars on the list for the first block. With the handicap arrangement, however, any bowler has a chance to win one of the $240 in guaranteed prizes which Eddie Goldberg is dangling before the eyes of Metropolitan Washington's women duckpin experts.

Hopewell High Vanquishes G.W., 27 to 6

By the Associated Press

Hopewell, Va., Nov. 14.—The Hopewell High School Blue Devils defeated George Washington High School of Alexandria, 27 to 6, here today in their final home game.

After battling on fairly even terms in the first quarter, Hopewell moved to pay dirt early in the second period when Bogese passed to Oliver, Blue Devil quarterback, on the visitors' 33 and Oliver moved to the 11 before being brought down. George hit the line twice for 9 yards, Hopewell lost 5 on a penalty and Oliver carried the ball over on the next play. Hobbs place-kicked the extra point.

Alexandria was kept on the defensive most of the time after that. George tallied Hopewell's second touchdown later in the second period and the third quarter went scoreless.

In the fourth period, George passed to Phillips, Hopewell end, in the end zone. Oliver set up Hopewell's final score with a 40-yard run to Alexandria's 26 from where George passed to Phillips for the score.

Alexandria's score came after Shelton passed from his own 49 to Sutherland for 32 yards. He then passed over the goal line to Daniels for the touchdown.

Horton Smith Is Mid-South Golf Winner

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 14.—Lanky Horton Smith, Pinehurst's new club professional, fired another 2-under-par 70 today for a 36-hole 140 to win the $500 first prize of the Mid-South Open Golf tournament.

Smith blazed the trail with six birdies.

Second honors in the first of the winter circuit tournaments went to Harry Cooper, of Minneapolis, who trailed Smith by four strokes after sharing the day's spotlight with the veteran Gene Sarazen in the 69 bracket. Big Johnny Bulla, of Greensboro, N. C., was third with a 2-over-par 146.

Welsey Ferrell, of Greensboro, former major league pitcher, led the amateurs with a 159.

Horton Smith, Pinehurst, 70, 70—140 ($500).

Harry Cooper, Minneapolis, 75, 69—144 ($350).

Johnny Bulla, Greensboro, N. C., 71, 75—146 ($250).

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., 73, 74—147 ($130).

Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., 75, 72—147 ($130).

Jim Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., 73, 74—147 ($130).

Ernie Ball, Charlottesville, Va., 73, 74—147 ($130).

Gene Sarazen, East Brookfield, Conn., 78, 69—147 ($130).

Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., 70, 78—148 ($50).

Olympics Quell Seagulls, 13 to 1, For Scoring Mark

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 14.—The Boston Olympics opened their Eastern Amateur Hockey League season tonight by overwhelming the Atlantic City Seagulls, 13-1, before 9000 at the Boston Garden. It was the most one-sided victory ever recorded in that circuit.

Ray Chaisson, recent Boston College star, led the attack by caging two goals and totaling five assists. The visitors were limited to 15 shots at Goalie Vic Polich.

Washington Gun Club Holds Weekly Meet

Weekly meeting of the Washington Gun Club will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the club grounds at Thirty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast, with trophies to be awarded at 50 and 25 targets.

The distances at which shooters will stand in the 250 target handicap will be determined by scores in the first event. Traps may be used by visitors.

Terps Meet V. M. I. Today AtCollege Park

V. M. I., arriving in midafternoon, and Maryland yesterday had their final tuning up for the Southern Conference clash today at College Park on nearby fields. They will swing into action this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Coach Pooley Hubert of the Cadets warned the Terps that he was after their scalps but reported that Gerald Williams, regular tackles, was on the sidelines and that Tom McGraw, who plays that place or guard, also was on the hospital list. Otherwise he said his charges were okay and that Joe Muha and Bosh Pritchard, his ace backs, were ready to give the Terps the jitters.

Hubert rates both his aces as all-America timber and does not care to put one above the other, but said he believed that Pritchard, with his sensational kicking, has a slight edge so far this year on his bigger fellow triple-threater.

Maryland came right back at Hubert and told him that it was just as eager and determined as he was to win the game and that the spirit of the Terps was at its highest pitch. They also countered him as to injuries, reporting Max Hunt, reserve tackle, out for the season, and Eddie Chovanes, guard, as unlikely to see action.

The Terps would much rather have had Hubert say Muha or Pritchard would be spectators. These two offer Maryland a herculean task and if they can be held reasonably in check the Terps figure they may get the long end of the score. That it will be a wide-open offensive game appears assured. Both have the backs to make it such a thriller.

Maryland's freshman squad will close its season by playing the Washington and Lee yearlings today at 10 a. m. and the unbeaten Terp soccer team will tackle Western Maryland at noon.

V. M. I. and Maryland will be meeting for the twentieth time in football today and the Cadets will be seeking to get on even terms in the series. Maryland has won nine games against V. M. I.'s eight and two have been deadlocked. The Cadets won last year, 20-0, at Lynchburg although Maryland gained 300 yards to their 202.

Tulsa Club Gets Women's National Championship

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 14—The Southern Hills Country Club, Tulsa, Okla., today was awarded the 1942 Women's National Amateur Championship by the executive committee of the United States Golf Association.

At the same time the committee announced that in the 1942 meet only 32 players would qualify for the championship flight in contrast with the 64 of previous years. Two 18-hole qualifying rounds will be played the first two days of the competition, however.

Formerly the championship flight contestants were determined on a single 18-hole test. The committee added that the changes had been adopted for the 1942 tourney only.

Georgetown's Frosh Tied By Owls, 0-0

The two-game winning streak of the Georgetown freshman eleven was interrupted yesterday in a scoreless tie with Temple's surprisingly strong yearlings who bottled up Lenny Bonforte and Charley Miller, the Hilltop's sensational young backs.

About 1000 fans on the new Georgetown athletic field watched the two big, well-coached aggregations choke off each other's few scoring threats. Georgetown could not get past the Temple 10, while the Owls' closest approach to the Hilltop goal stopped on the 5, when Glisson's attempted fourth-down field goal was wide.

Georgetown's freshmen now have a record of two victories, over G. W. and Maryland, one loss, to Navy, and the tie. Both teams were beaten handily by Navy's Plebes.

Midland Finishes Season Unbeaten, Untied

Fremont, Nebr., Nov. 14 (AP).—Midland College rounded out an unbeaten, untied season today with a 14-6 gridiron triumph over Doane College.

It was the ninth consecutive win for the Midland Warriors and set the stage for a possible post-season game with Kearney (Nebr.) Teachers, which last week finished its season without a tie or loss.

Bassett's Corrigan Assigned Top Impost Today

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14.—Top weight of 136 pounds has been assigned to Carroll K. Bassett's Corrigan in the Noel Laing Steeplechase Handicap, feature race of the Montpelier Hunt meeting to be held tomorrow on the estate of Mrs. Marion duPont Scott, near Orange.

Only 2 pounds behind Corrigan is R. V. N. Gambrill's Parma, last year's record-breaking winner.

Coming third on a five-race program, the Noel Laing has attracted 17 entries, among them the leading brush horses in America. The event is held over a 2½-mile course, with a $1000 purse added to the nominating and starting fees.

Wilson Ties Roosevelt, 0-0; Sturges Stars

A passing team met a running club yesterday and when the game was over the statistical honors were about even and the score perfectly so as Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson battled to a scoreless tie at Roosevelt High.

The passing phase of it consisted of Roosevelt's Carl Sturges & Co., while Wilson's Charley Voigt, Dick George and Charley Saine supplied the running.

Sturges, a 150-pound senior, overshadowed the other backs on the field as he completed 11 out of 22 aerials, two of them for touchdowns that were called back.

The Rough Riders' first heartbreaker came midway of the second quarter. With the ball on his own 40, Sturges faded back and passed to Right End Stathopoulos, who took the ball at midfield and out scampered the Wilson secondary on a 50-yard run down the sideline. The umpire had observed him stepping over the line, however, and called the ball back to Wilson's 45.

Late in the same period it became Wilson's turn to threaten. The Tigers took the ball on their own 36 on an interception, drove to the 42 in two plays and then stole some of Roosevelt's stuff with a successful pass. Voigt tossed a long, high aerial to End Charley Hardison, who was immediately thrown on Roosevelt's 12 for Wilson's sole completion in six attempts.

George was stopped for no gain and Voigt plunged to the 8. Voigt took the ball again and tried to run for it, but was hauled down on Roosevelt's 4 as the half ended. This was the only time Wilson penetrated inside Roosevelt's 40-yard line.

Riders Threaten Again

Neither team threatened again until late in the fourth quarter, when the Riders had one last try at that elusive touchdown.

In addition to Sturges the outstanding players were Voigt, a threat every time he took the ball, George and Saine for Wilson, and Koester, Lust and Guard Steve Vallton for Roosevelt.

Redskins to Rely on Sammy Baugh's Passing to Stop Bears

Todd Is Out, Farkas May Warm Bench

Last Year's 73-to-0 Fiasco Fresh in Minds of Locals; Chicago Favored

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

En route to Chicago, Nov. 14.—The Washington Redskins Eastern division hopes were of secondary interest tonight as last year's 73-0 victims of the Chicago Bears left for Sunday's engagement in Wrigley Field, and to say they are out for revenge is putting it mildly.

This is the ball game the pro football fans have been waiting for since last December 8, when, in a landslide of touchdowns, the Bears won their fourth league title by a score which by now is the most famous in all gridiron history.

What will be the mood of the Redskins and of the Bears? Can the humiliated losers come back to the extent of partially rubbing out that disgraceful defeat, or will the Bears start as they left off in Griffith Stadium?

A Gentle Reminder

This is the way the scoring went in the playoff last year:

Chicago Bears	21	7	26	19	—73

The Redskins have met the formidable "T" formation on a previous occasion this year as interpreted by the Philadelphia Eagles, who lacked the finesse of the Bears, but still gave the Redskins plenty of trouble before losing by four points.

The Bears, beaten only by the Green Bay Packers (16-14) two weeks ago, are threatening to surpass virtually every existing offensive mark in the circuit, led by George McAfee, Bill Osmanski, Sid Luckman, Norman Standlee, Ken Kavanaugh and the other too-familiar names to Griffith Stadium customers.

In Poorest Shape

It is ironic that the Redskins face the ball game they have been placing above all others throughout the season in their poorest condition. Dick Todd will be missing. His leg is in a cast as a result of last week's injury in Brooklyn. Andy Farkas has been so slow starting that he cannot be counted on and there is talk of benching the league's leading scorer of two years ago.

Sammy Baugh remains as the Redskins' only hope for victory and the Texan will not take his first and third quarter turns on the bench this week, you can count on that. He will probably be a 60-minute performer and the National League coaches will all agree on that one thing, when Sammy Baugh is on the field his team is a threat.

Bob Seymour and Roy Zimmerman, who took last year's beating as freshmen, will have ample opportunity to get a little personal revenge Sunday for they will be in there at least half the game. And Rookies Ken Dow, Lee Gentry and Al Kreuger, who by now know how their buddies feel about the Bears, are slated for plenty of backfield work.

Underdogs at odds of from 2 to 1 to 4 to 1, the Redskins need the ball game to keep alive the slim hopes of repeating last year's Eastern championship. The Giants will be favored over the Lions in New York, while even the loss of Ace Parker should not greatly affect the favored role of the Dodgers over Pittsburgh.

The team worked out at the stadium yesterday morning for 90 minutes. They will arrive in Chicago early tomorrow morning and practice either at Loyola U. or Wrigley Field. If tickets can be procured at the last minute, the Redskins will attend the Notre Dame-Northwestern game.

Game time Sunday is 1:30 p. m. and although the advance sale in Chicago has not reached sellout proportions a good day will find 40,000 attending.

Mt. Vernon Girls Show Fight, but Lose Field Hockey Opener

Madeira Wins Twice From Mt. Vernon

All was far from qiet along the Potomac yesterday as battles raged along both banks and resulted in the loss of two field hockey games to Madeira School by the Mount Vernon Seminary eleven.

Naturally, well brought up young ladies don't hold grudges, but yesterday's altercations came close to just that because the two schools are—shall we say, competitors?—of long standing and Mount Vernon never has come any closer to victory than a tie last year.

So, to the tune of loud support from schoolmates, the "white" team of each outfit met on the Mount Vernon Field and the Mounts "yellows" traveled to Virginia to meet the the Districtites lost, 2-1, in the home game and 6-0 away. It was the opening game of the season for both.

Madeira, playing a brisk offensive game on the Nebraska Avenue field, allowed Mount Vernon's Paula Hoffman, right winger, in her junior year, to slip through a marker in the first ten minutes of play, but rallied after the half to do a little scoring of their own. Misses Vanderhoff and Hubbell got across for the winners' goals.

On the other side of the river, the Madeira "reds" had a big afternoon as Miss Sosson made two goals and Miss Powers one in the first half, and Miss Mitchell came through in the second with three tallies, blanking the hapless "yellows," 6-0.

Sweater-and-skirted followers of both teams were vanned by bus to their respective fields according to their individual preferences to offer noisy (though definitely soprano) support.

Washington Field Hockey Team Bows in Opener, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 14.—Virginia's first team defeated the Baltimore first, 3 to 1, this afternoon in the feature game as the Southeast Field Hockey Association tournament got under way at Sweet Briar College.

Displaying smart stick work, the purple-clad Virginia eleven built up a 2-to-0 lead in the first half on a pair of resounding net shots by Harriet Rohner and added another in the second half on a goal by Margery Arnold.

Ruth Zinkham counted Baltimore's lone goal in the first half, but the Maryland outfit fought hard and the game was far and away the best of the three played on the Sweet Briar field this afternoon.

In two other games, North Jersey's first team defeated Washington, 3-1, and the North Jersey seconds, with the aid of a substitute's last-period goal, gained a tie with Virginia's second team, 1-1.

Betty Hughes counted twice and Marion Newsom once for the North Jersey first and Virginia Junkin scored for the losers.

Cornelia Thomas scored the goal for the Virginia seconds while Sally Orchard, a reserve, counted the tying marker for the North Jersey seconds.

There were two casualties, neither serious, during the afternoon.

Katherine Rutherford, moved from the Baltimore seconds to play with the first team in the feature match with Virginia, was put out of action for about five minutes after a collision with another player.

Peggy Knox, also of the Baltimore firsts, was struck in the face accidentally by a stick and the game was halted for another five minutes while she underwent treatment. Both players continued in action.

Willamette Tops Minor College Teams

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Nov. 14.—Willamette, Indiana State Pacific Lutheran, West Texas State and Slippery Rock take care of the top places in this week's American football statistical bureau compilations for minor colleges.

Willamette, of Salem, Oreg., which has rolled up 274 points to 47 in winning seven out of its first eight games, is the most impressive total offensive unit with a 430.5 yard average per game from rushes and passes.

Indiana State, of Terre Haute, Ind., leads in defense, holding the foe to 87 yards per game while winning five, losing one and tying one. The Staters also lead in rushing defense, allowing enemy ground thrusts only 16 yards average per game.

Pacific Lutheran, the 1940 minor forward passing champion, still leads with a 179.5 yard average per game via the air, chiefly because of the pitching prowess of little all-America Halfback Marvin "Tommygun" Tommervik.

West Texas State, paced by Ben Collins and his teammate, Sanders, is the rushing leader among the minors with a 326.5 yard average per game. The West Texans have won seven out of eight.

Slippery Rock has slipped through two wins, three losses and a tie, but heads the minors in pass defense with a 26.8 yard average yield per game. The Pennsylvanians also have the top punting average, 43 yards per boot. Arizona State of Tempe is second with 41.06.

Middies Promote Salsig To Varsity; Regular Injured

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14.—Edgar Salsig, 195-pound junior varsity tackle, was moved up to the varsity today as Navy's football squad participated in a skeleton scrimmage.

Salsig, who has impressed the coaching staff with his line play in recent scrimmages, replaces Bill Pellett, now on the sidelines with injuries, in the third team line.

Vincent Anania, 186-pound guard, was dropped to the "B" squad and his place will be taken by Warren Montgomery, 205-pound end and back, who will be converted into a guard.

Clyde Siegfried, blocking back whose shoulder injury kept him out of the last two games, scrimmaged yesterday for the first time and will be ready for the Princeton game November 22.

Backfield combinations practiced blocking out opposing ends and tackles at today's scrimmage. The squad will not practice tomorrow because the entire coaching staff will witness the Army-Penn contest at Philadelphia.

A practice session, however, will be held Sunday morning.

Want to take your mind off income taxes and the like? Get The Sunday Post—with Parade—tomorrow! Pictures of lots of pretty girls, including the amazing Patricia Thomas who teaches men to fly . . . June Marshall, gifted dancer . . . and Jane Russell taking a work-out in a gym. Workouts are important to jockeys, too—for a jockey who gains poundage stops earning his cakes and ale. Parade shows you how Jockey Sammy Renick does it. War articles include one on British convoys winning with Yankee assistance. Another page reveals tricks of the shell games and other rackets worked at certain tent shows. And if all this isn't relaxing enough, there's a yarn by Ben Hecht and some cartoons by the finest cartoonists in the country.

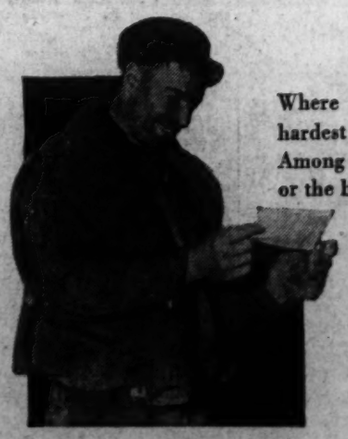
How Do White Collar Workers and Farmers Feel About Unions?

—See The Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post!



Where will labor unions have to work the hardest to win public opinion to their side: Among the white collar groups, the farmers, or the big business men? This timely poll in tomorrow's Post reveals where the chief hostility to unions lies. It will also tell you the attitude of various occupational groups toward labor unions and defense strikes, and what the chances are for a Farmer-Labor Party.

EIGHT-PAGE PEACH PAPER SPORTS SECTION

Football again holds the spotlight this week-end, with unbeaten Notre Dame matched against strong Northwestern, with Princeton-Yale and Dartmouth-Cornell in their traditional clinches, and Army meeting Penn. The Sunday Post is the paper to read! The Post covers more football games and prints more scores than any other Washington paper . . . brings you news from four wire services, columnists Povich and Considine, columns on hunting, dogs, golf, horses, plenty of pictures. Eight pages of live sports news in tomorrow's Post!

Favored Yawl Captures Opening-Day Feature at Bowie

Greedan Finishes Third; 8,000 Fans See 1st Day Card At Nearby Track

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 14.—Weaving between horses in bold fashion, Marcus N. Jackson's Yawl proved a worthy favorite in the Cherrystone Purse, featuring today's program here in Prince Georges County. The 3-year-old son of Pharamond II, installed the favorite in the field of ten, finished a length ahead of a photo for second money in which the camera voted for R. R. Thatcher's Jamerica with J. H. Miles' Greedan shunted into third position.

Racing began its final stand of the Maryland season here under ideal conditions. A crowd of 8000 turned out under a bright sun and the track was fast as Bowie tracks go. Yawl, knocked all over the course before finishing second in his recent race at Pimlico, provided a payoff of $5.10 for each $2 investment and was clocked in the fair time of 1:46 2-5.

War Key Early Leader

War Key, owned by W. E. Johnson, began as if he would make a runaway of the distance test. Jockey Ken McCombs carried him to the front in the run to the first turn and he opened an advantage of five lengths. In Question, poorly handled by Don Meade before the race was ended, was second. Yawl was next to last and doing very little running at this stage.

Approaching the stretch, War Key began to falter as Greedan moved to him and Yawl had begun the drive that was to bring victory. Jockey Nick Wall was forced to take Yawl in and out and finally got him into clear sailing. In the final 20 yards Yawl was up and was going away at the finish. Jamerica came on to nip Greedan for the place and Discouraged also came on to be fourth. For some reason Meade appeared to handle In Question timidly in the stretch run.

Jockey R. Sisto won the first race with Flying Reigh a $3.50 favorite which defeated, among others, Lit Up and Magnify. The son of Ned Reigh had too much drive for his rivals and registered time of 1:08 for the 5½ furlongs.

Those who coupled Flying Reigh with J. H. Miles' Handiboy in the second race collected $18.10 in the daily double.

Handiboy Wins

Handiboy, a good thing in the betting, won the second the hard way. Jockey W. Day took him to the front and he had a good lead approaching the stretch. Day was unable to hold him for the final turn and the 5-year-old ran right to the outside fence and appeared to be eliminated. In the meanwhile Zostera got to the front. But Handiboy was finally straightened and he came down the outside fence like a scared rabbit to regain the lead and win going away by a good two lengths. Some fans did not see Handiboy skimming along the rail and were surprised when he got up in time to win.

The start of the fourth race was delayed for several minutes when Cash Basis became entangled in the starting gate. He finally was shipshape, however, and ran second to Boredom, the $8.50 winner of the 6-furlong sprint. Third money in this field of nine went to Cheesestraw.

Lewis, Riley Smith Named Coaches At Washington-Lee

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Nov. 14.—Arthur E. Lewis, line coach of the Cleveland Rams of the National Professional Football League, has signed a contract as varsity line coach at Washington and Lee University for the 1942 season, Richard A. Smith, director of athletics, announced tonight.

Smith's announcement of the signing of Lewis came several hours after he had reported the reappointment of Riley Smith, former Alabama All-American and Washington Redskin backfield star for a new one-year term as head coach.

The 29-year-old Smith came to Lexington from the Washington Pro Club in 1939 as backfield coach and succeeded Warren E. (Tex) Tilson as head mentor this season.

W. & L. Athletic officials said that Lewis, a graduate of Ohio University and a participant in pro football as a player and coach since 1936, would report January 1. He will replace Tilson, who resigned earlier in the year to accept a position with a Lexington business concern.

Waltonians Meet Here Tomorrow

Members of the regional Izaak Walton League will gather here tomorrow to hear R. M. Rutherford, representative of the Fish and Wild life Service, talk on the effects of national defense program on American wildlife conservation.

The meeting, bringing together chapters from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, will be held at Room 737, Earle Building, 2:30 p. m.

Former All-American Star Joins Brewer Five

Ben Kramer, who twice won All-American honors as a player with the Long Island University Blackbirds, yesterday attached his name to a Washington Brewer contract for the 1941-42 season in the American Professional Basketball League, Coach-Manager Mack Pasnack announced.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING REIGH (entry), $3.50, $2.30, $2.10; LIT UP (entry), $3.50, $2.70; MAGNIFY, $5.00.

FLYING REIGH forced to the front at once, withstood frequent challenges from LIT UP and was drawing out at the end. LIT UP was a forward factor from the start, responded when shaken up and weakened right at the close. MAGNIFY was hard ridden in the first flight and had no excuse. BLUFFER was rushed to get to serious contention early and weakened.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:38. Off at 1:39. Winner, J. H. Miles' ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDIBOY, $6.20, $3.10, $2.80; ZOSTERA, $2.80, $2.50; CRIMSON LANCER, $4.50.

HANDIBOY took command at once, drew out, ran to the outside fence to lose command and finished with a bold rush along the outside fence to win going away. ZOSTERA worked his way to contention on the outside, rallied to take the lead in the stretch, but was no match for the winner. CRIMSON LANCER responded when shaken up and closed with good energy. ASTER LADY was in the thick of contention to the stretch and tired thereafter.

Daily Double—FLYING REIGH and HANDIBOY Paid $18.10.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 2-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:06. Off at 2:07½. Winner, H. C. McGehee's ch. f. (2), by Pilate—Roquepine. Trained by J. V. Stewart. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

†L. M. Allen-C. M. Feltner entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISLE DE PINE, $21.90, $8.10, $5.10; CONNIE JEAN, $3.20, $2.70; MILKYMOON, $8.80.

ISLE DE PINE, far off the pace for a half, came to the outside to wear the leader down and win going away. CONNIE JEAN was in close quarters early and came well through the final quarter. MILKYMOON lost ground from the start and closed with a burst of speed. CLIFTON'S DAWN was hard ridden to get to the front and then faltered. JOHN A. raced between horses while setting the pace and stopped.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-olds and upward; allowances. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:42. Winner, T. Powell's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOREDOM, $8.50, $5.30, $3.00; CASH BASIS, $5.20, $3.00; CHEESESTRAW, $2.60.

BOREDOM assumed command at once, drew out to a long lead and was not threatened at any stage while winning easily. CASH BASIS became caught in the gate before the start, was off slowly and closed a gap. CHEESESTRAW was closest to the pace from the start and weakened in the final drive. SCOUT WHISTLE was a forward factor on the outside and faltered in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds and upward; allowances. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:05½. Winner, Marcus M. Jackson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YAWL, $5.10, $3.60, $3.00; JAMERICA, $9.80, $8.40; GREEDAN, $6.00.

YAWL allowed to settle into his best stride, improved his position steadily between horses and was up to win going away. JAMERICA had speed in spots and came gamely in the final stages. GREEDAN went to WAR KEY approaching the stretch, took command briefly and weakened suddenly. DISCOURAGED dropped back and came again at the end. IN QUESTION was taken up sharply while on the inside at the sixteenth pole and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:30½. Winner, E. C. Eastwood's dk. ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANKER JIM, $5.20, $4.10, $2.70; MISTING, $34.20, $11.40; ROUGH MAN, $3.60.

BANKER JIM was steadied along behind the pace until the final quarter, challenged the leader while running on the outside and was up in the last 70 yards to be drawing away. MISTING disposed of FLYING PLAID to take command and fought it out willingly when challenged by the winner. ROUGH MAN lacked speed early, lost ground while moving and closed full of run. UNKNOWN LAND faltered after racing close up from the start.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:57. Winner, F. E. Waldron's br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFF GUARD, $19.80, $9.70, $8.00; CROSS QUESTION, $11.80, $8.00; INCONCEIVABLE, $12.80.

OFF GUARD was hustled to the front in the early stages, was well rated while showing in the rail, responded well after having a breather and was going away again at the end. CROSS QUESTION moved up gradually between horses, went to the outside in the stretch and closed willingly. INCONCEIVABLE had sped from the start and tired in the last quarter. CAREFUL MISS tired in the stretch, stumbled and unseated her rider.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:23½. Winner, W. E. Johnson's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRIUS, $27.80, $7.30, $5.10; SUNPHANTOM, $3.40, $3.20; SOLARIUM, $4.60.

CRIUS was sent to the front in the first half, widened his lead gradually and won as his rider pleased. SUNPHANTOM moved to contention with the winner, but was not good enough. SOLARIUM came from far back and was going well at the end. GIMPEY had a rough trip and showed a good effort.

Tyrone Wins at Rockingham

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. C., Nov. 14.—Jack Whyte's Tyrone scampered through the middle of the pack today to win the Rockingham Park feature by a scant nose over Sam Garfield's Light Sweeper.

R. Fisher's Chalmac was another nose off and Within was home fourth. The time for the six furlongs was 1:12-3-5.

Within lead most of the journey but as they turned into the stretch the field all gathered together and in the final drive it was Tyrone's nose which stuck out.

Sassy Mate and One O One combined for a $338 double.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Jockey Henri Mora received $50 yesterday morning from a group of Washingtonians. With the half hundred was an unsigned note that said simply, "We are great admirers of your riding. Put this toward that $200 fine." What we need is more Moras. I understand that the names of the men who put in for that $50 collection would make somebody's head swim. I see by the Bowie notes that among the improvements is the fact that they swept up the jockeys' room. But all kidding side, there's a new tile shower up there that will see plenty of use during the meeting. Jockeys George Acosta, Butsy Hernandez and Clarence Wright got in from Pascoag, R. I. They will go to Charles Town when the session here ends. Speaking of weather, I wonder where General Manager Joseph A. Farrell dug up that spring afternoon for the opening day. Hirsch Jacobs and Don Meade probably will sew up the leading trainer and leading jockey honors for 1941 at this meeting. Jockey Ruperto Donoso caught a plane out of Washington yesterday and will fly to his native South America for a visit. He will return to action in Florida. Jockey Johnny Gilbert has recovered from injuries and will go to his Kansas home to undergo training to resume riding in the winter. Johnny Swisher is out of the army and is handling the riding angagements for Jockeys H. Lindberg and W. Day. Alsab is going back home—back to Hialeah Park where less than a year ago the "Cinderella horse" started his march to fame and fortune. Under present plans Alsab, whose latest noteworthy feat came with the winning of the historic Walden Stakes at Pimlico, will be allowed to roam the paddocks for a short period in Lexington, Ky., after which he will entrain for Hialeah Park, arriving about mid-December. Alsab's chief objective will be the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes and it is possible that the $50,000 added Widener may get his attention, but primarily he will be appointed for future three-year-old classics such as the Pimlico Preakness, Kentucky Derby, Belmont Stakes and Arlington Classic. It is the hope of Owner Albert Sabath, Chicago attorney, who maintains a winter home in Miami Beach, to have Alsab emulate the performances of Whirlaway, "triple crown" winner who began his sensational 3-year-old campaign at Hialeah last winter. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—FIRST WATER raced well last out and off that effort deserves the call in the day's opener for maidens. EL JELIS has been knocking around and is a threat. BRIAR GIRL for the show end.

Second race—DIZZY DAME always is partial to this track and finds opposition that suits her purposes. ROUGH GOING gets in light and is dangerous. CANGRIERON to take care of the others.

Third race—STAR COPY has raced well recently and seems good enough to turn back this kind. EQUIPET and TOMLUTA are good ones and will be ready for their best in this sprint.

Fourth race—BECOMLY was off in a tangle last out and closed a lot of ground. I'm going to look for better racing luck this time. COERCION is the speed of the party and will win if I have overestimated the top one. MATTIE J. has speed.

Fifth race—OMISSION loves this track and I'm going to string along despite that 121-pound assignment. SIR ALFRED and BOYSY are in top condition and will like the route.

Sixth race—HAPPY HUNTING may be the right one in this rather open affair. HOTNEA has stretch punch and belongs close. HI STY has been kidding and this could be the right spot.

Seventh race—ALUMINO may put on a rush at the end of this that will be good for first money. I'm going to take my chances. FLYING LEGION and DARBY DU to account for the place and show.

Eighth race—NO ENDING jogged last out and promises to make it two in a row. FLYING DUKE belongs close with this kind. STINGING for the minor money.

Best bet—STAR COPY.

Folger Urges Registration Of All Issues

J. C. Folger, of Folger, Nolan & Co., Inc., Washington investment banking house, yesterday called for a change in securities laws to require that "privately placed" securities issued be registered with the Securities Commission.

He testified before the House Interstate Commerce Committee which also heard a spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers and a New York lawyer vigorously oppose proposed amendments requiring such registration.

Sounding the slogan "Home securities for home people", Folger said that under the present system many Washington investors are being deprived of the opportunity to invest in prime securities of Washington companies.

(Under the present law, securities which are privately sold to insurance companies or other buyers do not have to go through the registration process, which some critics say is burdensome. There have been contentions that the law tends to increase private placements, as against public sales.)

Cites D. C. Placements

Discussing the private placement matter, Folger said "I doubt if there is a place in the country where the issue stands out more prominently."

He said that about 45 million dollars of bonds of investment rating had been issued in Washington during the last five years, and that only 15 million dollars worth of Potomac Electric Power Co. bonds offered in July, 1936, had been sold publicly.

"To the extent that the very large buyers take high grade securities out of the Washington and other markets," said Folger, "investors are being deprived of the opportunity to invest in the prime securities of local companies. In my opinion, home securities for home people is a sound principle."

He added that he believed it was to the interest of the small investor, the local buyer, and the public that the buyer "have an opportunity to buy high-grade local securities with which he is familiar, and in which he is likely to make commitments."

After saying that small institutional buyers in the Washington area showed "distinct dissatisfaction over the way our best bonds are going out of the territory . . . to a few very large buyers," Folger commented:

Choice Issues Leave City

"We have seen during the past five years that 100 per cent of our fine utility bonds have gone out of town. If local dealers can't participate in underwriting and distributing local securities, it is difficult to see wherein lies their proper field. It is my own belief that private placement started out more or less inadvertently and is quite extensively a product of unforeseen development. Now it assumes a proportion which, in some quarters, is regarded a vested right. I frankly do not believe any legislator contemplated a situation such as exists here where every bit of high-grade financing has gone into private placement.

"When we have protested to management it has been stated that it was so much easier and simpler to place securities privately that they didn't want to go to the trouble of registering or taking marked risk in waiting for registration."

He expressed fear that "when the next depression comes along we'll find most of our best bonds in distant hands" and said he thought the proposed amendments "would help correct a grave inequality" and would put the big buyer "on a parity with the small buyer."

N. A. M. Side Presented

Frayser Jones, appearing for the N. A. M., disputed in detail statistics presented to the committee by representatives of the securities industry that private placement issues had doubled or trebled in recent years due to the enforcement of the securities law.

He said the proposal for registration of private sales was "a purely negative, in fact, a punitive, suggestion."

"There can be no question," said Jones, of the fact that private placements did not originate with the Securities Act."

He said that the Securities Commission itself recently ruled that a small issue of water bonds could be privately sold and this would eliminate "the time-consuming and expensive investigation that would be required if the water company's securities should be put up for competitive bidding."

Edward B. Twombly, of counsel for the New York Committee on Reemployment of Men and Money, told the committee that "registration of private placements is unsound, unnecessary and unrelated to the protection of investors." He contended the proposal "is the wedge to open up the field of insurance company investments to complete Federal regulation and control."

Youngstown Steel Rate to Drop Further

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 14 (AP).—Increasing shortage of scrap will force further curtailment of steel output in the Youngstown district next week, when the operating rate will be between 91 and 92 per cent, as against 98 per cent up to two weeks ago.

This week, two open hearth furnaces were idle because of the lack of scrap; next week five will be down. Normal shutdowns for repairs among the 83 open hearths in the district account for the rest of the 10 to 11 units which will be idle.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Cotton futures prices, except for the October delivery, declined 10 to 35 cents a bale today. The October contract closed nominally 40 cents a bale above yesterday's finish.

Last-minute liquidation in December contracts imparted easiness to other months.

Mills were fairly active on the buying side in anticipation of an upward change in the flexible gray goods price ceiling by an advance in spot cotton quotations.

Prices of Eggs Spurt Another 1 to 3½ Cents

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Wholesale egg prices today rose 1 to 3½ cents a dozen, the sharpest advance in a single day in a number of years.

Best grade eggs hit 40 cents a dozen, the first time this level has been reached since 1930, in a 2½-cent gain. This price resulted in a moderate number of sales, but sharply higher bids on all other classifications failed to obtain any offerings.

The current market upturn started on October 28 and gains since that time range from 3 to 6 cents a dozen. All classifications are now selling between 11½ and 15½ cents above this time last year.

Traders at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange said the upturn could be attributed to two factors: First, seasonally declining production; and second, Government buying presumably for export under the Lease-Lend Act.

Federal Reserve Aides in District Get Pay Boost

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—More than 700 employes of Federal Reserve banks in the Fifth District have been granted temporary wage increases, it was disclosed at the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank today.

The board of directors met in mid-October and authorized the payment until further notice of a supplemental compensation based upon 6 per cent of the first $1800 of an employe's salary. The rule does not apply to those earning more than $6000 per annum.

The directors said the rate at which payment would be made might be changed from month to month and eventually might be discontinued altogether. The first payment was made retroactive to apply to September salaries. It amounts to a maximum raise of $9 a month.

The Richmond head office employs 488 persons, the Baltimore 199 and the Charlotte bank 98. All but a few directors earning $6000 or more will be affected.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 92,990

Detroit, Nov. 14 (AP).—This week's assemblies of passenger cars and trucks, according to an estimate by Ward's Reports, Inc., will total 92,990 units.

This figure compares with 93,585 last week and 123,143 last year at this time. Lowered operations are anticipated for next week due to the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Opening wheat prices gains today of 1 to 1¼ cents, which brokers said partly reflected the grain trade's reaction to revision of the Neutrality Act, where reduced later and the market closed without quotations again reaching the early highs.

Traders said overnight purchase orders probably to cover previous short sales in view of the House vote accounted for the bulk of the opening demand. As soon as this was satisfied the market resumed its erratic fluctuations. Early gains at times were wiped out.

Persistent weakness of corn, which at no time sold above yesterday's close and showed net losses of as much as a cent at 62, also helped to unsettle wheat. Soybeans were up almost 4 cents due largely to prospects of a return of wet weather in parts of the belt.

Wheat closed ¼ to ½ cent higher than yesterday: December, 1.14½@1.14⅝; May, 1.19⅛@1.19¼; corn, ⅛ to ¾ lower; December, 74⅞@75; May, 80⅝@80¾; oats, unchanged to ⅛ up; rye, ⅜ to ¾ higher, and soybeans 2¾ to 3 higher. Lard was 7 to 12 higher, reflecting strength of grain and disclosure that Government purchases this week exceeded 8,000,000 pounds.

Lauten Heads Banking Body On Legislation

Herman G. Lauten, assistant trust officer of the National Savings & Trust Co., has been appointed chairman of the trust law and legislation committee of Washington fiduciaries. This is one of the major committees of the fiduciaries section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

MR. LAUTEN

J. Wesley Clampitt, jr., chairman of the fiduciaries group, also announced yesterday the committee members who will serve with Mr. Lauten and members of other committees. They follow:

Trust law and legislation—Mr. Lauten, chairman; William S. French, jr., Erskine Gordon, Arthur C. Keefer, R. H. Yeatman, William B. Wolf, Irving Zirpel and Sidney F. Taliaferro.

Standardization—Willard G. McGraw, chairman; Warren Nussbaum, Robert P. Hild, C. D. Ratcliffe, Stanley D. Willis, Henry W. Bransom and Kenneth F. Brooks.

Trust investments—Edwin B. Shaw, chairman; Bruce Prantz, Nelson J. Foster, John S. Warner, A. J. Byrne, Ralph Wilson and Frederick L. Church.

Taxation—Bruce S. Colton, chairman; William F. Price, Ralph Howard, E. A. Dent, jr., William Rea, Arthur Linn and Thomas Grant.

Publicity—Bernard L. Amiss, chairman; Robert K. Stuart and Douglas R. Smith.

Program—Aubrey O. Dooley, chairman; Melville W. Stuart, Frank M. Perley and William V. Simmons.

Nominating—Thomas Reynolds, chairman; Henry Dierkoph, Earl G. Jonscher, Aubrey O. Dooley, Lester A. Lawrence, Vincent A. Sheehy, jr., and J. Wesley Clampitt, jr.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 17%

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported October sales totaled $2,470,404, as compared with $2,109,634 in the same month last year, or an increase of 17.1 per cent.

In the first ten months this year sales totaled $22,085,841, an increase of 15.6 per cent over $19,105,214 in the same 1940 period.

Pennsy Votes $1 Dividend

Philadelphia, Nov. 14 (AP).—The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. has declared a dividend of 1 per share, equal to 2 per cent, on the par value of the company's capital stock, payable December 16 to stockholders of record November 22.

The dividend brings total dividends for the year to $2 per share, equal to 4 per cent, compared with total dividends in 1940 of $1.50 per share, or 3 per cent.

Power Output Shows Seasonal Decrease

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Electric power production in the week ended November 8 totaled 3,325,574,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of fourtenths of one per cent under the 3,338,538,000 of the preceding week, but a gain of 16.4 per cent over 2,858,054,000 for the like week of last year.

These figures were made public today by the Edison Electric Institute.

FHA Reports Gain

The volume of insured FHA home mortgages reached $2,942,000,000 at the end of September, a gain of $187,000,000 during the month. The comparable total on the similar date last year was $2,232,000,000.

Inquiry Ordered in Nylon Hosiery Prices

Price Administrator Leon Henderson ordered an intensive study of nylon hosiery prices yesterday on grounds some manufacturers and jobbers had been charging "unwarranted" wholesale prices in recent weeks, ranging up to $16 and $18 a dozen pairs.

Henderson said part of the sudden increases in nylon prices resulted from bonuses and higher prices offered by jobbers and retailers seeking abundant stocks for the Christmas trade.

Henderson warned that, if a price ceiling were imposed, it would be well below the current peaks, leaving some merchants facing severe inventory losses.

All Magnesium Impounded for Rationing

The OPM yesterday ordered all of the Nation's magnesium supplies impounded subject to Federal rationing.

Moving to direct all available magnesium and magnesium products into defense industry, Donald M. Nelson, OPM priorities director, ordered that all supplies "in whatever form or by whomever held" be reported to OPM before November 30.

Magnesium has been under strict priority control since last March 24. The new order, however, provides for complete allocation of all supplies by Nelson on a monthly basis.

Officials said the major reason for the order was that magnesium stocks existed in the country in the form of scrap, finished and semi-finished products, powder and discarded products made principally of magnesium. These must be located and acquired for defense uses, including plane conconstruction and manufacture of incendiary bombs, the OPM explained.

G. M. C. Ordered to Cease 'Coercing' Dealers

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it had ordered General Motors Corporation and General Motors Sales Corporation, Detroit, to "discontinue coercive and monopolistic practices in their relations with General Motors dealers."

The order was based, the FTC said, on a finding that "General Motors Sales Corporation (a subsidiary of G. M. C.) coerced and compelled dealers to purchase parts and accessories solely from it and prohibited purchases from outside sources, except in cases of emergency when 'genuine' General Motors parts or accessories were not available in the respondents' warehouse."

"The entire plan was so designed," the commission said in a statement, "as to prevent a dealer from making purchases from jobbers or other manufacturers and to eliminate all parts and accessories other than those sold and distributed by General Motors Sales Corporation. . . ."

The commission said that this had had "a tendency to create a monopoly in replacement parts used on General Motors cars" and that "approximately 14,000 General Motors dealers have been removed as customers and prospective customers of independent manufacturers and jobbers."

Copper Users Worried Over Jan. 1 Deadline

The scarcity of cooper for nondefense use yesterday brought appeals from some manufacturers for Federal permission to finish after January 1 work partly completed on that date, after which copper and its alloys will be barred from more than 100 civilian articles.

The appeals, trade circles said, were filed with the Office of Production Management by such concerns as makers of cosmetic supplies, compacts and lipstick holders.

The copper conservation order also covers jewelry, gifts and novelties and dress accessories.

Giving point to the appeals was the Copper Institute's report that on October 31 stocks of refined copper in the United States, exclusive of supplies in the hands of manufacturers, were 67,260 tons. That was slightly more than half deliveries to manufacturers during October, 121,457 tons, a figure said to approximate the consumption rate.

What the manufacturers had in mind in their appeals, trade reports said, was the fact that on the deadline date they would have nearly completed a considerable stock of products which would need only minute amounts of copper or alloys to complete.

As they understand the order, special permission would be necessary to complete such work.

Steel was considered by some manufacturers as a possible alternative to copper and brass, while jewelry makers were reported considering the use of silver.

More silver probably will go into better grade costume jewelry, other sources indicated. Plastics were high on the lists of possibilities.

Further Cut in Auto Output Anticipated

OPM officials forecast further reductions in the output of passenger automobiles with definite figures to be determined at a meeting here next Wednesday of the Automotive Defense Advisory Committee.

The committee and defense officials will discuss the February production quotas.

Production has been slashed progressively since last August because of material shortages. The biggest cut was 51 per cent for January, 1942, compared with output in January of this year. For the first six months of the model year begun August 1, OPM has ordered production trimmed 36.3 per cent.

G. U. Favored Over Wolfpack Here Today

Faircloth, a 20-year-old halfback born in Richmond but raised in this city, is the Wolfpack's passing ace, although he is listed as a reserve halfback. Six feet tall and weighing 190 pounds, Faircloth was an all-District halfback in 1939 and is carrying on that tradition for State. Besides his talent for flipping the apple, Faircloth is a good punter and runner, and often is used to place-kick conversions.

He is a tailback, and Flash Gordon, his high school running mate, is stationed at wingback, where his exceptional speed and elusiveness can be used on reverses and pass plays.

Georgetown figures to have a decided edge in the line. The huge Georgetown forwards have held their own—at least—with every opposing set of "mules," except those of Boston College. For that reason Georgetown should prove a couple or three touchdowns bettter than State.—J. H. M.

Mrs. Tschiffely Wins Turkey Golf

Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely won the top prize of a big turkey in the Class A division of the Washington Golf and Country Club's turkey tourney yesterday, with a score of 88-16-72. Second, and also winner of a Thanksgiving dinner, was Mrs. George Roney with 89-16-73. Third place went to Mrs. R. N. Sutton, whose 94-15-79 earned her a chicken.

Other winners of turkeys for the first two places and chickens for the third were Mrs. R. B. High with 101-24-77, Mrs. R. F. Nicholson with 100-21-79 and Mrs. J. E. McCade with 105-22-83 in Class B, and Mrs. C. H. Olmstead with 107-27-80, Mrs. L. E. Hutchison with 117-30-87 and Mrs. T. S. O'Halloran with 120-32-88, in Class C.

Md. Hunt Season Will Open Today

The Maryland hunting season opens today and the rush of applicants for licenses kept five clerks busy at the Rockville Courthouse yesterday.

The game warden's office warned hunters against (1) hunting without a license, (2) hunting on Sunday, and (3) hunting when there is snow on the ground. Care in the use of matches in woods and fields where the undergrowth is now usually dry was also urged.

Hockey Eagles Open Season Against Johnstown Tonight

With five prospective players held up by the Canadian emigration authorities pending a military registration hearing, the Washington Eagles hockey team will open their season at Johnstown, Pa., tonight with an 11-man squad.

The Eagles will meet Johnstown, a newcomer this year in the Eastern Amateur League of which Washington is champion, today and Sunday nights before heading home to open their local season Tuesday with the New York Rovers.

Les Hickey, Jimmy Wilson, Roland Bleau, Ernie Mundy and Tom McCormick are the missing Washington players, McCormick, a center, may join the club before it entrains for Johnstown at 10:10 this morning. According to Washington Coach Redvers Mackenzie, McCormick is believed to be on his way here from Canada.

The absentees leave the Eagles desperately shorthanded of wingmen, there now being only four of these forwards on hand. They are Paul Courteau and Art Thompson, two of the team's three holdovers from last year, and Fred Weaver and Marty Madore.

Len Burrage, the other returning player, and Keith Allen and Rolly McLenahan give the Eagles three dependable defense men, but a fourth is badly needed. At center Washington has Kenny Ullyot and Odie Hallowell and are counting on having McCormick shortly.

Only at goal, where a pair of American-born youngsters will be stationed, is Washington well fixed. Carl Howell and Leith Dickey are the United States' net tenders.

In Johnstown, Washington will be meeting what is probably one of the league's strongest teams, the Pennsylvanians having six members of last year's Baltimore Orioles squad. These men moved over to Johnstown when Pick Hines quit his job as Baltimore coach for the position of general manager with Johnstown.

The former Orioles are George Boll, Jack Dyte, Frank Ceryance, Net Vitarelli, Donc Gallbraith and Ed Kowalski. Jack McKinnon, last year's coach at River Vale, is coach of Johnstown, and may play, too.

Po' Plainfield: Little School That Wasn't

Plainfield's coach was "Hurry-Up" Hobiltzel, one-time star at Erstwhile Spearfish Normal. He had a unique system, playing his ends facing the backfield.

That Chinese Back

"It was an unstoppable formation," said Merris Newburger, who claims he saw one of Plainfield's games in his sleep. "It gave Plainfield five men and a Chinese in the backfield."

It turns out that the Plainfield triple-threat ace was John Chung, a Chinese whose exploits so intrigued Herb Allen, of the New York Post, that he wrote a glowing story about him. Chung scored 63 of Plainfield's 117 points in its first seven games.

Plainfield, whose colors were mauve (delicate purple) and puce (eureka red), had to cancel the two games with Appalachian Tech and Harmony Teachers.

It was a shame, because Plainfield had beaten Chesterton, 24-0, Scott, 12-0; Winona, 27-3; Randolph Tech, 25-0; Ingersoll, 13-0, and St. Joseph's, 6-0.

"What's worse," moaned 'Jerry Croyden,' "we had been invited to the blackboard game and had to turn it down. What happened to Plainfield shouldn't happen to a dog."

sight, the Indians won't be overlooking this one. Stanford.

Iowa-Minnesota (40,000)—A newfound passer, Tommy Farmer, gives the Hawkeyes an added threat, but that Gopher defense remains one of the best in the business and earns the nod for Minnesota.

Duke-North Carolina (45,000)—Off the records, Duke should win as it pleases. Picking Duke, but possibly not as it pleases.

Duquesne-Mississippi State (30,000)—State hasn't looked too impressive since its early win over Alabama. This is the Dukes' final game, and they can shoot the works. Accordingly, Duquesne.

Texas-Texas Christian (22,800)—After that tie with Baylor, the Longhorns are likely to be boiling mad, Texas.

Rice-Texas A. and M. (27,000)—That long-awaited date with Texas comes next on the Aggies' list. They'll be aiming not to miss any tricks before then, so this vote goes to A. and M.

Yale-Princeton (35,000) — The Tigers have just discovered they can pass. Princeton.

Missouri-Oklahoma (29,000)—Each beaten only once, these clubs should furnish one of the day's top battles and the winner quite probably will be bowl bound. A flier on Oklahoma.

Columbia - Michigan (30,000)—Michigan, perhaps with ease.

Alabama-Georgia Tech (22,000)—Alabama, looking better all the time.

Boston College-Tennessee (30,000)—This replay of the last Sugar Bowl game should produce the same winner—B. C.

Penn-Army (65,000)—Penn, better in line and backfield.

Ohio State-Illinois (45,000)—Ohio State.

Cornell - Dartmouth (18,000) — A slight shade to Cornell.

Wisconsin-Purdue (22,000)—Offense vs. defense. Taking offense, or Wisconsin.

New York U.-Tulane (15,000)—As if things weren't bad enough for N. Y. U. This is Tulane's week to be up. Tulane.

Arkansas-Southern Methodist (10,000)—S. M. U.

California-Oregon State (25,000)—Anything can happen. Taking Oregon State.

Louisiana State-Auburn (20,000)—A toss-up. L. S. U.

Nebraska - Pitt (25,000) — Pitt, which seems to have organized.

Syracuse-Colgate (32,000)—Syracuse to rebound.

Michigan State-Temple (20,000)—Taking Temple.

Harvard - Brown (30,000) — Harvard.

Clemson-Wake Forest (12,000)—Clemson in a battle.

Kansas - Kansas State (18,000)—Kansas State.

ruin the Colonials, who, as usual, could not summon up any scoring punch.

Hard-fought as it was, the game produced few thrills for the crowd, save for the open field running of Knupp and the line plunging of Walter Fedora, G. W. fullback, who piled up the impressive total of 82 yards for his evening's work. In one series of plays Fedora carried the ball five straight times and gained 26 yards. Pollock also played a good offensive game for the Colonials, aside from his damaging fumble.

Knupp, a truly fine halfback, offensively and defensively, was injured with six minutes remaining in the third period. He was swarmed under by John Konizewski, 225-pound Colonial tackle, and others as he threw a pass intercepted by Burnell Martinson for the Buff. Knupp was removed from the game on a stretcher.

Aside from its drive to the 33 in the fourth quarter, G. W. made only two other notable excursions into Bucknell territory. One was to the 35 in the first period, and the other to the 34 in the fourth period. A fumble by Jim Graham spoiled the first of these two slight Colonial scoring threats, and tightened Bucknell resistance repelled the second.

Pollock, Fedora and Graham played well in the G. W. backfield, while Stan Ziobro at guard, and Harry Ledford were conspicuous along the line. For Bucknell Knupp, Wenrick and DeAngelis did good backfield work, while Guard William Anderson and End Frank Gore were strong on defense. Anderson did roving duty in Bucknell's alternating 6-2-2-1 and 5-3-2-1 defenses.

Lesnevich Defeats Tami Mauriello

a ripping right cross that sent the youngster wobbling and staggering back across the ring into his own corner. Gus held off momentarily before charging in, and that saved Mauriello from a possible knockout.

Through the rest of that session, and again in the third when a left uppercut caught him flush on the whiskers, Mauriello rolled from rope to rope.

Through the fourth and fifth it was still all Gus, although a right hand cut the corner of his left eye slightly in the fifth.

Then in the sixth, Mauriello started to untrack. His comeback through that round and in the next startled the crowd.

From there to the finish it was a rip-snorter on both sides. In the tenth, the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth Mauriello took the aggressive to score. In the fifteenth, however, Lesnevich walked out and took up his knitting in earnest again, to end any lingering doubt as to who was boss.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. T. Watkins Fugate et al., plaintiffs, vs. Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 10052. Order nisi. This class and derivative action having been brought by plaintiffs, not only on their behalf, but on behalf of all stockholders of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and its affiliated companies and also on behalf of the corporations themselves, asking for receivership and other relief; and plaintiffs and intervening plaintiffs having filed herein a petition asking for the approval of the Court to a proposal of compromise filed herein accompanying said petition; providing inter alia for the dismissal of this suit, the dismissal of a similar suit pending in Delaware, a release of certain defendants from liability, and an injunction against the filing of any suit of a derivative or secondary nature by the stockholders of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., or any of its affiliates as more particularly set forth in said "Proposal of Compromise"; and said petition having been answered by the defendants Clifton M. Eisele, Lewis Eisele and Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., it is by the Court this 10th day of November, 1941, ordered as follows. 1. That said proposal of compromise, a copy of which is attached to the said petition, be approved, together with all matters therein set forth, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 1ST DAY OF DECEMBER, 1941, at 10 o'clock a. m., at which date and hour this matter is set down for hearing. 2. That in the event of the approval of said proposal of compromise (a) the plaintiffs, intervening plaintiff and all other stockholders of Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and each of its subsidiaries and affiliates will be permanently enjoined from filing, prosecuting or attempting to maintain any action or action against Clifton M. Eisele and Lewis Eisele or either of them, and against the other defendants herein for matters contained in the complaint or for any and all other matters or claims which could or might have been the subject of a secondary or derivative suit brought by plaintiffs, intervening plaintiff or any other of said stockholders or any of them by reason of his, her or their stockholdings in said companies against said defendants, (b) Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., its subsidiaries and affiliates, and the various corporations served with process and named as defendants herein will be permanently enjoined from filing, prosecuting or attempting to maintain any suit or action against Clifton M. Eisele and Lewis Eisele or either of them and against the other defendants herein, for any and all matters hereinafter occurring, excepting defenses to claims upon or arising out of any notes, instruments, or other evidence of indebtedness which said Clifton M. Eisele or Lewis Eisele or either of them or said other defendants have made, guaranteed or indorsed, or upon which they are now presently liable by reason thereof. (c) A trustee will be appointed to execute a release to the said Clifton M. Eisele and Lewis Eisele and each of them and all other defendants, their and each of their successors and personal representatives, for all matters included in the proposal of compromise. (d) This suit will be dismissed with prejudice as to all defendants. (e) Counsel for the plaintiff, Theophilus Watkins Fugate, will be authorized and directed to cause a similar suit filed in the Chancery Court of the State of Delaware, Newcastle County, by said Fugate to be dismissed, with prejudice. (f) Jurisdiction will be retained by this Court in this action solely for the purpose of determining such reasonable counsel fees as to the Court may seem just and proper, and such costs and expenses as shall have been properly incurred, to be paid out of any moneys to come to the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., by virtue of the proposal of compromise. 3. Provided that a copy of this order nisi of the proposal of compromise and of the petition for compromise, be served upon the counsel of record for each defendant appearing herein, and that copy be sent by mail, postage prepaid, by Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., to the remaining defendants and to every stockholder of record of Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and its subsidiaries and affiliates as shown by the stock records of said corporations, on or before the 21st day of November, 1941, the cost of said service, copying and postage to be paid by Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc.; and that a copy of this order be published for four separate days in The Washington Post and twice in the Washington Law Reporter before the date of hearing, the usual proofs of publication to be filed herein; and all persons shall be bound to take notice of all further proceedings of the Court under this order, including the fixing and allowance of counsel fees in such manner as the Court may determine, and including direction by the Court for further hearings herein. OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, November 12, 1941. A public hearing having been held on October 13, 1941, in the Board Room of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain streets and alleys in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are not detrimental to the public interests nor to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered, That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 2571 and 2572 are hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after December 12, 1941, the title to the land comprised in the areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said areas hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1 Closing of alleys in Squares 5726, 5727, W-5727 and 5728, and closing of parts of 28th Street, Irving Street, Irving Place and Buena Vista Terrace, adjacent to said squares; and providing for a dedication of new streets and alleys, all in the Southeast section of the District of Columbia lying south of Naylor Road and between Alabama Avenue and the District of Columbia-Maryland Boundary Line. 2. Closing of Okie Street east of Fairview Avenue Northeast, adjacent to Squares 4041 and 4042." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, in writing, to said closings, within thirty (30) days after the date of this publication, as indicated at the beginning thereof; otherwise said order shall become effective on December 12, 1941, and the street and alley areas, as herein described, shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, C. W. HOTT, GUY MASON, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

ODD BODKINS — BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

YOU WERE WONDERFUL! HOW DID YOU DO IT?
WELL, GRANDMA AND I SENT IN HUNDREDS OF QUESTIONS A WEEK AGO, TRYING TO STUMP "THE THREE WISE GUYS"!
THEN THEY GOT FIRED, AND I TOOK THEIR PLACE. ALL THE QUESTIONS YOU ASKED ME, HAPPENED TO BE THE ONES GRANDMA AND I SENT IN!
YOU'RE KIDDING!
NO, I'M NOT, MR. SKINTS! ASK ME A QUESTION THAT I DIDN'T SEND IN — AND I BET I CAN'T ANSWER IT!
WHAT IS MAYHEM?
SEE, I TOLD YOU I DIDN'T KNOW!
"MAYHEM" IS THE MAIMING OF ONE PERSON BY ANOTHER, — THE DESTROYING OR DISABLING OF AN ARM, LEG OR FOOT!

JOE PALOOKA — Retreat — BY HAM FISHER

WINNIE WINKLE — You Can't Dunk a Doll — BY BRANNER

HEY, WINNIE, LITTLE BEVERLY GRIMES FROM NEXT DOOR WANTS TO KNOW IF SHE CAN SEE TH' TWINS!
I'VE JUST FINISHED BATHING THEM AND — WELL, ALL RIGHT, LET HER COME IN!
THANKS FOR LETTING ME SEE TH' TWINS — OH, AREN'T THEY CUTE!
I'M GLAD YOU LIKE THEM, BEVERLY!
HOW LONG HAVE YOU HAD THEM, MRS. WRIGHT?
A LITTLE OVER SIX MONTHS NOW!
GOSH, HAVEN'T YOU KEPT THEM NICE AND CLEAN!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

CONTROL YOUR IMPATIENCE, FOLKS. THE TWO FASTEST RACING DOGS IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD AND AN IMPORTED RACING PANDA WILL SOON BE OFF TO CAPTURE TH' BERRYDALE CUP!

JANE ARDEN Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — Whitey Acquires a Shadow — BY MONTE BARRETT and RUSSELL ROSS

YOU THINK MAYBE—
THAT'S WHITEY FROME — HE DROVE THE LAST TRUCK INTO THE DUMP BEFORE THE EXPLOSION!
I DON'T THINK ANYTHING — YET — BUT HE HAD MOTOR TROUBLE — THAT THREW HIS TRUCK LAST —
• LEAVE IT TO ME — FROM NOW ON, WHITEY'LL HAVE TWO SHADOWS!
HOW SOON WILL NUMBER TWO DUMP BE FILLED WITH MUNITIONS?
IT'S ALMOST FILLED NOW — WELL FINISH NEXT WEEK!

SUPERMAN — Finis! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

NO YOU DON'T! YOU'RE NOT GOING TO CHEAT THE LAW THIS EASILY!
LET ME GO! LET ME FALL!
LATER
I'M GOING TO LEAVE BOTH OF YOU AT THE POLICE STATION. SEE TO IT THAT THEY GET THAT DIARY, LOIS!
IT COMPLETELY CLEARS YOU OF THE MURDER CHARGE!
LATER.... AT THE DAILY PLANET...
I RISK MY NECK.....AND YOU'RE THE ONE WHO GETS THE BIGGEST SCOOP OF THE YEAR INTO PRINT!
IT'S THE SUPERMAN IN ME!

Listen! with Glynn

"Corny" is the word for the interest taken in the "Columbia Country Journal" program, which you hear over WJSV every Sunday at noon, dedicated to the agriculturists of America.

The results obtained from Director Charley Stookey's recent program on "The Story of Hybrid Corn" tell the story. He's never received as much mail from any other program.

When Charley offered his corny theme in printed form, he received letters from Maine and California, from the state of Washington and from Florida, and from nearly all the States in between, for that matter.

Requests came from teachers in rural schools, from high schools, from colleges and from State and county agricultural agents.

They came not only from farmers, but from attorneys, from osteopaths, from doctors and bankers and even from undertakers.

There was a request from a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, from an official of Technocracy, Inc., from all sorts of places you'd never expect corn had anything to do with, well, not very much, anyhow.

You don't have to smile any more when you call "The Country Journal" corny. From now on it's a compliment.

Contract Bridge

Today's hand was played by Mrs. Olive Peterson, of Philadelphia, at a rocky six no-trump contract, and the woman champion succeeded in making her slam. Plan the way you'd play the deal after North leads the club queen, then check with the solution below.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable

SOUTH DEALER

♠ J 9 6 2
♡ None
◇ 10 9 4 2

	NORTH
♠ K 7 5 3		♠ A Q 4
♡ A Q	WEST EAST	♡ K 8 6 5 3
◇ K 5 3		◇ A Q
♣ A 6 5 2	SOUTH	♣ K 4 3
	♠ 10 8
	♡ J 10 9 7 4 2
	◇ J 8 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 NT	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	3 NT	Pass	4 NT
Pass	6 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Q ♣.

The Solution

Declarer made her contract by squeezing North. She won the opening lead in her hand with the ace and then took the heart ace. South's play of the nine of clubs on the first round marked North with an original holding of five clubs and South with one club, and North's showing out on the first heart trick spades and diamonds. Mrs. Peterson saw that there was no hope of squeezing the South hand so that it would unguard the long heart, but marked his hand as containing eight there was a chance of squeezing North.

That, however, could only be done by making him discard four times, thus utilizing the play generally known as the delayed squeeze. With this plan in mind West followed with the heart queen, North discarding a club and a diamond on the two leads of the suit. Dummy was entered with a diamond and a diamond was returned.

A losing heart was then led from dummy, declarer discarding a club and North his last diamond. South won the trick and led a diamond, which West won with the king. On this trick North threw off a club and a heart was discarded from the board.

A spade was now led, won by East, and followed by the king of hearts on which declarer discarded a club. North was placed in a helpless position. If he threw off another club, dummy's two clubs would be winners. If he discarded a spade, West would take all the spades. In either case, declarer won twelve tricks, losing only a heart.

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

GOSH, BOSS! I BEEN WAITIN' HERE SINCE SIX O'CLOCK, SO YA COULD TELL ME ALL ABOUT ANGEL VARDEN!
YEAH, TOM! IS SHE AS SWEET AS SHE IS IN THE PICTURES?
WHAT DID YA TALK ABOUT WHILE YA WERE DANCIN' WITH HER--OR COULD YA TALK?
CONNIE!
LET'S NOT WASTE TIME! I HAVE WORK TO DO!
FIRST THING YOU'VE GOT TO DO IS HEAR THIS! GOING FOR A RIDE WAS ANGEL'S IDEA. THE CAR BROKE DOWN--WE RODE IN ON A FARM WAGON LOADED WITH ONIONS AND PIGS--!
...AND THE SPOILED DARLING OF HOLLYWOOD IS FIT TO BE TIED?
TOM! YOU MUTT! YOU'VE COMPLETELY RUINED THE BEST MAD SPELL I'VE BUILT UP IN MONTHS!

MICKEY FINN — On Their Way! — BY LANK LEONARD

YOU CERTAINLY WOULD HAVE BEEN PROUD OF MICKEY IF YOU HAD HEARD THE MEN PRAISE HIS COURAGE, KITTY!
I-I'LL ALWAYS BE PROUD OF HIM, UNCLE LARRY!
HAVE YOU SAID GOOD-BY TO HIM YET?
N-NO—HE'S COMING DOWN TO THE STATION WITH US!
CHEER UP, MICHAEL! I KNOW WOMEN—AND WHEN KITTY SEES THAT TRAIN PULLIN' IN SHE'LL CHANGE HER MIND ABOUT GOIN'! THAT IS, SHE WILL, IF SHE REALLY LOVES YA!
GEE—I-I ONLY HOPE YOU'RE RIGHT, UNCLE PHIL!
OKAY, MICKEY! WE'RE ALL SET TO GO!

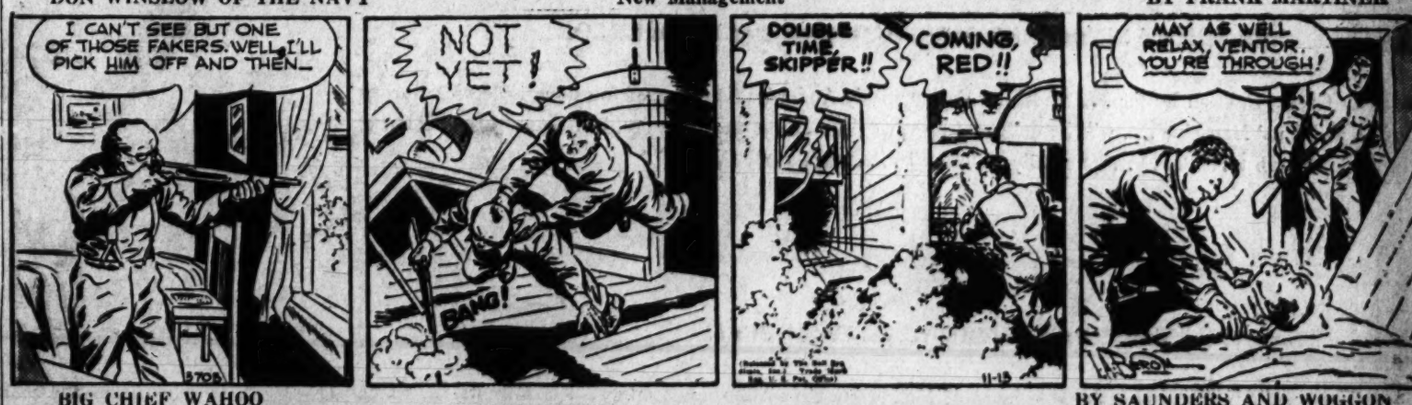
MR. AND MRS. — Second Helping of Dessert — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

WHAT WE GOT FOR DESSERT TONIGHT?
BREAD PUDDING
OH, GEE! BREAD PUDDING!
WELL, WHAT AM I TO DO WHEN BREAD ACCUMULATES? THROW IT AWAY?
OH, I S'POSE NOT, BUT—I JUST DON'T LIKE BREAD PUDDING
ALL RIGHT. I'LL EXCUSE YOU FROM EATING IT. GO AND SEE WHAT'S ON THE RADIO
FOR A TRULY DELICIOUS DESSERT, WHAT IS MORE SATISFYING THAN A HOME COOKED BREAD PUDDING?

DIXIE DUGAN — No Snow in Sight — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

I SAW YOU SLUMPED BACK IN THE SEAT, LADY! ARE YOU ALL RIGHT?
OH YES THANK YOU! JUST FELL ASLEEP— BUT WHERE'S MY FRIEND WHO WAS DRIVING?
HERE I AM DIXIE! COME ON UP!
MICKEY! YOU DOPE!
GOLLY YOU GAVE ME A SCARE! WHAT'RE YOU DOING UP HERE?
I'VE BEEN TRYING TO LOCATE OUR SNOW-CAPPED MOUNTAIN—
—BUT THERE'S NO SNOW IN SIGHT! THE TEMPERATURE WENT UP WHILE I WAS DRIVING!!
WHY—IT'S JUST LIKE SPRING!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — New Management — BY FRANK MARTINEK



I CAN'T SEE BUT ONE OF THOSE FAKERS. WELL, I'LL PICK HIM OFF AND THEN—
BANG!
DOUBLE TIME, SKIPPER!!
COMING, RED!!
MAY AS WELL RELAX, VENTOR. YOU'RE THROUGH!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

I'M SORRY, CHIEF, THAT MR. GIMMICK LET YOU TAKE THE BLAME FOR HIS "SUPER-SUN" FAILURE! WERE THEY NICE TO YOU AT THE JAIL?
YEP! HEAP NICE! --AFTER WAHOO BUY $10,000 WORTH O' TICKETS FOR POLICEMEN'S BALL!
YOU POOR GENEROUS INDIAN! YOU'VE SPENT ALMOST A MILLION DOLLARS TRYING TO MAKE PEOPLE HAPPY BEFORE YOU DIE --AND ALL YOU HAVE LEFT IS BITTER MEMORIES OF INGRATITUDE!
NOPE, CINDY LOU! WAHOO STILL GOTTUM ONE $10,000 BILL! IF CINDY LOU WASN'T ALREADY HAPPY WAHOO WOULD GIVE UM TO HER!
BUT, CHIEF! I AM THE MOST MISERABLE PERSON IN "HAPPINESS HALL!"
THEN TAKE UM WAMPUM! QUICK! WAHOO ONLY GOTTUM ONE WEEK LEFT NOW TO LIVE!
NO, WAHOO--THANKS--BUT MY TROUBLE IS --SOMETHING MONEY CAN'T CURE!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

MIGHT AS WELL CAMP, KID. WE'LL NEVER FIND THEM IN THIS STORM!
AND SECURE IN THE KNOWLEDGE THAT HE IS WELL BEYOND KING'S REACH, AURORA'S ABDUCTOR PITCHES CAMP FOR HIS EXHAUSTED PRISONER.
OH, M'SIEU, LE KING, MON CHER--
HUH! TALKIN' IN 'ER SLEEP! IN LOVE WITH A BLASTED MOUNTIE!
—MAYBE I COULD TELL THE CHIEF SHE TRIED TO GET AWAY—AN' JUST SQUEEZE TH' TRIGGER 'ERE AN' NOW!

You Are Invited To
MAGAZINE DAY
AT THE HECHT CO.
MEET THESE FAMOUS EDITORS
TODAY...FROM 3 TO 5 P. M.
MEET THE EDITORS WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE POLICIES OF "THE PARENTS' MAGAZINE,"
"CALLING ALL GIRLS" AND "TRUE COMICS" IN THE MISS TEEN SHOP ON THE SECOND FLOOR!

MRS. BARBARA DALY ANDERSON

Director of "The Parents' Magazine" Consumers' Service Bureau. A graduate Home Economist and member of the American Home Economic Association, Mrs. Anderson was for four years Women's Editor of Country Home Magazine, has written widely and served as home economics consultant for many prominent firms, and recently collaborated in the preparation of "America's Cook Book"!

MRS. BETTY GREEN

Fashion Editor for "The Parents' Magazine" and their magazine for teen-agers, "Calling All Girls!" Active in the fashion field since 1923, Mrs. Green was formerly Fashion Editor for Women's Wear Daily and stylist for over 200 stores with headquarters in one of the largest resident buying offices in the world!

MEET MRS. BETTY GREEN AND MRS. BARBARA DALY ANDERSON

Mrs. Betty Green, Fashion Editor . . . and Mrs. Barbara Daly Anderson, Director of Consumers' Service Bureau . . . of The Parents' Magazine . . . will be delighted to have you consult them on problems concerning "Rearing Children from Crib to College" . . . "Family Fashions" . . . and "Family Fun!"

SEE PARENTS' MAGAZINE'S AUTHORIZED FASHIONS!

During the past four years, under the able hand of Mrs. Betty Green, Fashion Editor . . . Parents' Magazine has exerted concentrated effort upon the advancement of fashions for children of all ages . . . from the crib through high school . . . thus filling a heretofore great inadequacy in the styling and production of children's clothing . . . and making Parents' Magazine an important criterion in the world of juvenile fashions.

SEE THE SPECIAL EXHIBIT AND DISPLAY FOR GIRLS AND TEEN-AGERS!

Visit our "Miss Teen Shop" and Girls' Department . . . and see the type of fashions and "fads" that are tops among teen-agers and younger girls . . . that are stamped with approval by The Parents' Magazine . . that are the "right" thing for your own daughters!
